Last Thursday a gang of men was brought to the city to work for the Shore line and a number of them stopped at J. Schnorberger's in the first ward over night, the understanding being that they were to board there. On Friday morning they were given their dinner to take with them—and they took it; but instead of going to work they went to the Pere Marquette tracks and began to spread their table. Officer Boudrie was called up by the official at the depot and upon his arrival all but three of them took to their heels, leaving dinner basket and pail behind. The officer showed the trio the way out of the city and took charge of basket and pail, which were afterwards reclaimed by the owner.—Monroe Democrat

Oil for the Children.

Give them oil—cod-liver oil. It's curious to see the result.

Give it to the peevish, fretful child, and he laughs. Give it to the pale, anæmic child, and his face becomes rosy and full of health. Take a flat-chested child, or a child that has stopped growing, give him the oil, and he will grow big and strong like the rest.

This is not a new scheme. It has been done for years. Of course you must use the right oil. Scott's Emulsion is the one.

Scott's Emulsion neither looks nor tastes like oil because we are so careful in making it pleasant to take.

The election yesterday was very quiet and when the votes were counted the result was no surprise to anyone. B. J. Garlinghouse had worked hard for a week and R. A. Heesen had not only been out of the county for a week, but after the republicans had nominated him when he was away, no one worked for him and even Ben Garlinghouse felt he would rather have had him here to take part in the contest.

However, Mr. Garlinghouso will make a good supervisor for the township and no one will regret his election. Perry Hosmer was elected Justice over Chas. Matthews by 44, but Perry is one of the most popular men in Tecumseh and Matthews has not been here long enough to get acquainted with the voters.

"A Runaway Match."

Miss Alice Williams, the dainty little ingenue, who plays the leading female role with a "Runaway Match," has been on the stage just eighteen years, and she is just a little over 18 years old. She made her first appearance as a child in arms at only 16 months of age, and has been constantly playing ever since. Her career has been a varied one, as she has appeared in all sorts of plays, ranging from farce comedy to Shakespeare. She is one of the prettiest women on the stage, and her appearance as a little school girl in "A Runaway Match" is always a signal for an outburst of admiration. Miss Williams will positively appear with "A Runaway Match" at Sutton's opera house. W. W Cullison, who plays a prominent part in "A Runaway Match is one of the cleverest comedians before the public. He left Hoyt's "A Day and a Night" company to join this company, and his merry antics and comic songs are a great addition to the play. Mark E. Swan, the author also appears in the cast. "A Runaway Match" comes to Sutton's opera house Thursday April 10 at popular prices, 15, 25 and 35 cents.

All Humors

Are impure matters which the skin, liver, kidneys and other organs can not take care of without help, there is such an accumulation of them.

They litter the whole system.

Pimples, boils, eczema and other eruptions, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, bilious turns, fits of indigestion, dull headaches and many other troubles are due to them.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Remove all humors, overcome all their effects, strengthen, tone and invigorate the whole system.

"I had salt rheum on my hands so that I could not work. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and it drove out the humor. I continued its use till the sores disappeared." MRS IRA O. BROWN, Rumford Falls, Me.

ROUND ABOUT US.

Louis Moilonen, a 16 year old kid at Hancock, is 6 feet 9 inches high, wears a number 18 boot aud weighs 250. He has been at work in the lumber camp all winter and is said to be as strong as an ox, It takes two days to get communication from his head to his toes, he has to pay double price for lodging, to get a room long enough so he can lie down and stretch his legs full length. No hotel porter ever disturbs his shoes if he leaves them outside to be polished. —Ex.

Up at Prescott, Mich., last week a dead man was hauled into town by a drayman who found the body by the roadside. The coroner impannelled a jury and while the officers were serving the papers. the corpse arose, took a chew of tobacco, brushed his clothes, and "skinned out" before the jury got a chance to "set" on him. Many people were so frightened they tried to say the Lord's prayer, but it was hardly a bible rendition. The coroner is now wondering how he can collect his fees.—Adrian Press.

Lemley's commodious and opera house in Blissfield was destroyed by fire Wednesday evening. The Pittman concert company gave an entertainment in the house that evening closing about 10:30 and half an hour later it was one mass of flames. The entire upper floor was occupied as an opera house and there were two stores on the ground floor, one occupied by O. W. Metz & Co. as a dry goods and millinery store and the other by W. G. White who conducted a clothing and boot establishment. Metz & Co. lost a $14,000 stock of dry goods on which he had $6,000 insurance. White loses $10,000 with $5,000 insurance. The loss on the building is $12,000 with only $6,000 insurance.

True and Untrue About "Doc."

The New York World, referring to the recent visit of Hon. A. W. (Doc) Smith, invests him with the bossship of southern Michigan and proceeds to renarrate the story first related years ago in the Adrian Times touching the manner in which Mr. Smith acquired the title of "Doc," which in brief was that when he was young he was the owner of a farm that produced extensively the dock weed. He was, therefore, called "Dock" Smith, and then his title was corrupted, and it became "Doc." This however, is not true. There never were any docks on Doc's farm except Doc, and any reports that there were is heterodocks. The appellation of Doc is due to Mr. Smith's graduation in the philosophy of the two Ps—pharmacy and politics. This is orthodocks.—Detroit Tribune.

LITERARY NOTES

"Educating the Deaf-Blind" is the title of an article in the April number of the Review of Reviews, in which the author presents an interesting account of this wonderful branch of education, telling of some of the pioneers and leaders in the work, and giving a number of the splendid results thus far achieved.

* * *

In choice and printing of illustrations the monthly magazine numbers of the Outlook have greatly improved of late, and the April number has pictorially both distinction and variety. The list of illustrated articles includes an elaborate presentation of the plans for beautifying Washington, by Mr. Elbert F. Baldwin, with a dozen beautiful pictures from the artists' original drawings and maps of "Washington Fifty Years Hence;" a thrilling account of experiences on the Antarctic Continent by Mr. Borchgreyink, the leader of the expedition of 1898, and the first man to set foot on the Antarctic continent, with reproductions of many of the explorer's own photographs.

The statement of a Tecumseh citizen.

Mrs. J. H. Welch, who resides in the southwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I wish to express my gratitude for the benefit derived from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. My back troubled me for a long time with a constant dull aching pain across my loins and when stooping or exerting myself it became very sharp. If I took cold it always settled in my kidneys and in the morning I was so lame and stiff that I could hardly attend to my work. I used several simple household remedies but they did not bring relief. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills recommended and spoken of so highly I concluded to test their merits and got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store. They took right hold of the cause and in a short time the pain in my back was a thing of the past. I can now straighten after bending or stooping without inconvenience. Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly a wonderful remedy."

ASKED BOY TO KILL HIM.

Salt Lake City Lad Confesses—Story Sounds Fishy.

Salt Lake, April 5.—Clyde Felt, the 15-year-old boy who stated to the police that he had concealed the body of Sam Collins, the aged watchman of the Wasatka mines at Warm Springs, after the latter had committed suicide, yesterday broke down and confessed that he had cut the old man's throat in the little cave above Warm Springs, stripped the body of clothing and after walling up the entrance with stones had buried the bloodstained clothes. Young Felt said that he had cut Collins's throat only after long urging by the old man, who insisted that he wanted to die and was afraid to commit the deed himself.

Felt, with two policemen, climbed the hills to the vicinity of the murder to search for Collins's valise, which the boy said the old man had hidden on the day of his death. Felt led the officers up and down the hillside in an aimless manner for a time and, finally stopping, admitted that the story of the valise was a myth.

From statements made by other boys in the neighborhood of the tragedy, however, the police believe that half of young Felt's story has not been told and that behind the tragedy is a tale of moral degeneracy and a conspiracy among a number of young boys in the old man's power, which finally culminated in Collins's death. A number of arrests probably will follow soon.

Was Bound to Die.

Talmage Slightly Better.

Washington, April 5.—There was a slight improvement Friday in the condition of Rev. T. De Witt Talmage.

A Domestic Blend.

A resourceful young matron had a small dinner party. Covers were laid for six, and the dinner was charming. The red wine was not too cold, the white wine not too warm and the black coffee a masterpiece. At the beginning of the end of the dinner a cordial was served. It happened to be Creme Yvette, and when the husband tasted it he put down his glass with a look of anguish and was about to speak. His wife's eye silenced him. Nobody took more than the first sip of the liqueur. After the last guest had departed the husband braved his wife's eye and spoke.

"My dear," said he, "what in the name of all unspeakable things was the matter with that liqueur?"

His young wife smiled triumphantly.

"Why," said she, "when I came to look at the bottle, just before dinner, I found there wasn't enough left to go round. It was too late to get any more, so I just added to it a bottle of violet toilet water. It was the same color, and it had the same smell, and I knew nobody would notice the difference. Wasn't it good?"—Washington Post.

A Riddle Making Epoch.

There have been epochs at which riddle making has been more especially in vogue, and such epochs would appear to occur at seasons of fresh intellectual awakening. Such an epoch there was at the first glimmering of new intellectual light in the second half of the seventh century. This was the age of Aldhelm, bishop of Sherborne, the first in the roll of Anglo-Latin poets. He left a considerable number of enigmas in Latin hexameters, and they have been repeatedly printed.

Aldhelm died in 1709. Before his time there was a collection of Latin riddles that bore the name of Symphosius. Of this work the date is unknown. We only know that Aldhelm used it, and we may infer that it was then a recent product. The riddles of Symphosius were uniform in shape, consisting each of three hexameter lines.—Cornhill Magazine.

GAMBLING SYSTEMS.

There Never Was One Devised That Can Beat the Bank.

When a system is played against a bank like that at Monte Carlo, the percentage against the player is not on the amount of his capital, but on the amount that he stakes on the tables while playing his system. Supposing that I have a capital of £10, and that I play £1 each coup until I have either lost my £10 or won a similar amount of the bank. I should in all probability have to play about 200 coups in order to do the one or the other. Therefore the percentage against me would not be on £10, but on £200. If this bank percentage were 2 per cent, I should consequently be paying £4 for the right to risk £10 at even chances.

I used to know long ago one of the chiefs of the old Homburg gambling bank. I found him at Monte Carlo in the same position there. He was fond of calculations, and one day we averaged the amount staked at the tables each day, and we found that the annual gross profit of the bank was almost exactly the percentage on the amount staked in the course of the year. There can be no business in which the return is more certain or greater. Consols return less than 3 per cent per annum. A mine that pays a dividend of 100 per cent is a Pactolus. But a coup at Monte Carlo takes a little less than a minute. The percentage is, if I remember rightly, a little under 2 per cent, or, in other words, the bank charges 2 per cent for money per minute. This must make the mouth of the veriest usurer water.—London Truth.

BAY CITY STIRRED UP

Over the Alleged Criminal Death of Agnes Eberstein.

Bay City, Mich., April 5.—Contrary to general expectations, there are no fresh developments in the Eberstein mystery here, the police having revealed nothing in the local situation, and Prosecutor Anneke being reticent when asked of the result of the autopsy, which was performed Friday morning at Battle Creek. The whole city is stirred over the revelations which have taken place.

Battle Creek, Mich., April 5.—The body of Agnes Eberstein still lies in the vault in Oak Hill cemetery, where it was taken after the funeral services Thursday. No orders have been received from Bay City, and the interment planned for Young's cemetery, where the grave is already dug, has not yet taken place.

KALAMAZOO GETS $75,000

And Flint $50,000 for New Postoffice Buildings.

Students Having Jolly Time.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 5.—Friday night the county fair opened in Waterman and Barbour gymnasiums at the University of Michigan. Fraternities, sororities and independent societies have fitted up booths, each trying to outdo all others in splendor. The college boys went through all the stunts from throwing base balls at a colored man's head to trying a whirl at the spinning jenny. There were races during the evening, in which 'varsity athletes took part, animal shows with students inside of fierce-looking fur animal costumes, and the Michigan Indians kept up a continual war dance. The fair continues today. At the close of last evening's performance an old-fashioned country dance was given.

The Highest Balloon Altitude.

Dr. Bersen and Dr. Suring of the Berlin Meteorological institute reached in a balloon ascent the highest altitude on record. They first went up to the height of 30,000 feet, losing consciousness for brief intervals. In spite of the risk they continued to ascend to 33,790 feet, when one of them became completely unconscious and could not be aroused. The other aeronaut, after making a great effort in opening the valve to descend, also became insensible, and neither of them recovered till the balloon dropped to 16,000 feet, at the end of an hour's time.

Good for Rheumatism.

Last fall I was taken with a very severe attack of muscular rheumatism which caused me great pain and annoyance. After trying several prescriptions and rheumatic cures, I decided to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which I had seen advertised in the South Jerseyman. After two applications of this remedy I was much better, and after using one bottle, was completely cured.—Sallie Harris, Salem, N. J. For sale by J. J. Orr.

LABOR CONTROVERSIES

Now Only Disturbing Element, According to Dun's Report.

New York, April 5.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review says:

Labor controversies continue to be the only seriously disturbing events in the industrial world, and while many disagreements have been promptly settled, others have appeared to interrupt production and make manufacturers conservative about new undertakings. Retail distribution of spring wearing apparel received a check from the more inclement weather in many localities, yet merchandise of most staple lines is purchased freely and collections are satisfactory at nearly all points except the south.

Supplies of iron and steel do not seem in any immediate danger of overtaking demand. In fact, the prospect of labor disturbances on May 1 makes the situation still more uncertain, and those who hoped for equilibrium in the market by July 1 are less sanguine.

Widely divergent views as to the crop outlook resulted in a dull market for the cereals and only small changes in prices. Wheat receipts for the week were but 2,074,699 bu, against 3,357,135 last year, while exports from all ports of the United States amounted to 3,365,070 bu, compared with 4,626,037 a year ago. There was not the customary loss in receipts of corn; 1,580,505 bu comparing with 1,602,027 a year ago, but Atlantic exports were only 204,356 bu, against 3,046,891. It is not surprising that cotton is so firmly held in view of the dispatches from correspondents of R. G. Dun & Co. in the south. These reports indicate small stocks of old cotton and a decrease of acreage for the next crop, with smaller sales of fertilizers and a backward season.

The course of commodity prices during the month of March indicates a seasonable tendency downward. Dun's index number, giving the aggregate of quotations proportioned to consumption was $99,222 on April 1, against $101,593 a month previous. This decline of 2.3 per cent was mainly due to the higher temperature, which accelerated the output of garden and dairy products.

Failures in the United States this week, 167, against 195 last year, and 22 in Canada against 29 last year.

Peculiar Request in a Will.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., April 5.—One of the provisions of the will of the late John B. Sherman, president of the Union stock yards at Chicago, who spent much of his time in this city, where he owned considerable property, was that upon his death his horses, to which he was greatly attached, be killed. In compliance with this provision, five of them that have been tenderly cared for at his stable at Grove Park, in this city, were taken out and shot. He feared that after his death they would fall into strangers' hands and be misused.

Michigan Pensioners.

Washington, April 5.—Michigan Pensions were granted Friday as follows: Original—Arend Van Deveen, Grand Haven, $12. War with Spain—Charles E. Gould, Muskegon, $6; Andrew P. Biddle, Detroit, $25; Paul W. Frick, Kalamazoo, $6. Increase—Wesley R. McCave, Berryville, $12; Wm. D. Witington, Northville, $10; George Piper, Chesaning, $17; Elias F. Michigan Orators Defeated.

Chicago, April 5.—The fourth annual debate between orators of the universities of Minnesota and Michigan, held here last night, was won by the Minnesota students. The winning side took the affirmative of the following proposition: "Resolved, that the best interests of United States forbid that we should permanently hold and govern the Philippines." The victory is the first Minnesota has won from Michigan.

Dirty Work of Firebugs.

Pontiac, Mich., April 5.—Another incendiary fire, the fourth in Independence within the past few months, took place Thursday night, and the planing mill of William Howser was totally destroyed. The mill was located about five miles from Clarkston and eight miles from Oxford. Much lumber was saved, but the loss involves several thousand dollars, as Mr. Howser carried no insurance.

Painters Will Boycott.

Port Huron, Mich., April 5.—The painters and decorators' union last night decided to boycott all employers who refuse to employ union men. The boycott has been placed on several business men and interesting developments are looked for. The retail clerks have also reported a violation of their rules on the part of several business men, and the matter will be taken up by the Trades and Labor council.

Tried to Kill Saloonkeeper.

Iron Mountain, Mich., April 5.—A Swede named Strom attempted to murder Albert Oleson, a saloonkeeper at Florence, yesterday afternoon. He walked into the saloon and shot twice. Oleson ran outside and Strom followed, firing three more shots, hitting Oleson in the shoulder, hip and back. Oleson cannot live. Strom has been arrested and there is talk of lynching him.

Dumas, Father and Son.

A story is told about the two Dumases, father and son, which illustrates the pleasant relations between the two. The son had written his first successful novel, and the father wrote him a letter of congratulation, which he began in the formal manner of "Dear Sir." This letter throughout read as though addressed to a total stranger and merely thanked the author for the pleasure the book had given him. Dumas fils answered in this manner:

> Sir—I thank you most heartily for your kind letter. Praise from you is especially appreciated by me, as I have always heard of you as the most enthusiastic admirer of my father, who also makes some pretension of being a novelist.

Emperor Honors a Dragon Fly.

The oldest extant poem about a dragon fly is said to have been composed 1,440 years ago by the Emperor Yuriaku of Japan. One day, while this emperor was hunting, say, the ancient records, a gadfly came and bit his arm. Therewith a dragon fly pounced upon the gadfly and devoured it. Then the emperor commanded his ministers to make an ode in praise of the dragon fly. But as they hesitated how to begin he himself composed a poem in praise of the insect, ending with the words:

Even a creeping insect
Waits upon the great Lord;
Thy form it will bear,
O Yamato, land of the dragon fly!

And in honor of the dragon fly the place of the incident was called Akitsuno, or the moor of the dragon fly.—"A Japanese Miscellany."

When Frogs Are Best.

Frogs' legs are sold in Paris daintily threaded on little willow wands. People buy them for the home table instead of, as is the practice in this country, eating them exclusively in restaurants. They make a most palatable broth for invalids and convalescents, but ordinarily the legs are prepared by removing the skin, rolling them in flour, adding salt, pepper and butter, with a pinch of parsley, and cooking them gently in a frying pan or on the griddle. By Parisians it is considered that the frog is best in the fall of the year, when it is fattest and most delicate. However, large numbers of the batrachians are caught in the spring, when they are said to be more easily captured.—Saturday Evening Post.

CONSTIPATION

"I have gone 14 days at a time without a movement of the bowels, not being able to move them except by using hot water injections. Chronic constipation for seven years placed me in this terrible condition; during that time I did everything I heard of but never found any relief; such was my case until I began using CASCARETS. I now have from one to three passages a day, and if I was rich I would give $100.00 for each movement; it is such a relief."

THEY MET DEFEAT

PASSED BY VOTE OF 347--52

Democrats and Republican Insurgents Overthrow Ruling of Chair and Amend Bill to Remove the Differential on Refined Sugar.

Washington, April 19.—The democrats and the republican insurgents rode rough-shod over the house leaders Friday when the voting began on the Cuban reciprocity bill. They overthrew the ruling of the chair in committee of the whole on the question of the germaneness of the amendment to remove the differential from refined sugar during the existence of the reciprocity agreement provided for in the bill.

The vote to overrule the decision of the chair, made by Mr. Sherman of New York, was 171 to 130, republicans to the number of 37 joining with a solid democratic vote to accomplish this result. Having won this preliminary victory, the amendment was adopted in committee, 164-111, and later in the house by a still larger majority, 188-105. On the latter occasion 64 republicans voted with the democrats for the amendment. The bill then was passed by an averwhelming majority, 347-52.

The voting on the bill was the culmination of a long struggle, which began almost with the opening of this session of congress, and after two weeks' of continuous debate, during which much bitterness was aroused. Yesterday's debate was of an exceedingly lively character, the feature being the echoes of Thursday night's democratic caucus. To that caucus the defeat of the amendment is attributable. When it became apparent that the democrats would act together the beet sugar men decided at a meeting attended by 32 of them, to take the bit in their teeth and overrule the chair. As soon as this combination was effected the republican leaders realized that they would be defeated, so far as removal of differential was concerned.

One of the surprises of the session was the attempt of Mr. Roberts, a Massachusetts republican, to take the duty off hides. He offered two amendments and appealed once from the decision of the chair, but was voted down each time.

The bill as passed, authorizes the president, as soon as may be after the establishment of an independent government in Cuba and enactment by said government of immigration, exclusion and contract labor laws as restrictive as those of the United States, to negotiate a reciprocal trade agreement with Cuba by which, in return for equivalent concessions the United States will grant a reduction of 20 per cent from the Dingley rates on goods coming into the United States from Cuba, such agreement to continue until Dec. 1, 1903. During the existence of such agreement the duty on refined sugars and all sugars above No. 16 dutch standard, is to be 1.825 per pound.

Dun's Weekly Report.

New York, April 19.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: Weather conditions have been potent for good during the past week. Retail distribution was greatly accelerated, which in turn enlarged jobbing trade and brought more pressure on manufacturers for prompt shipment; agricultural work was facilitated and building operations made rapid progress; traffic increased at the interior as the condition of country roads improved, which made collections better. Some labor controversies were settled and others were averted. Complaints are still heard regarding tardy deliveries, but freight is less congested and business has increased to the extent of 6.9 per cent, larger railway earnings for April thus far than last year, and 16.3 per cent over 1900. Grain and meats have continued very strong. There was some logical explanation of the advance in corn, interior receipts falling to 857,500 bu for the week, while Atlantic exports rose to 394,805 bu, an unusually large total for recent times, although small by comparison with the corresponding week in preceding years. Wheat was sustained by exports from all ports of 4,485,352 bu, flour included, against 4,613,891 a year ago. Failures for the week numbered 261 in the United States, against 206 last year, and 24 in Canada, against 21 a year ago.

Miles May Be Retained.

Washington, April 19.—Reconsideration of the administration's plan to place Gen. Miles on the retired list right away is believed to be the result of a fear that to do so would make Miles a popular martyr. The administration is hearing protests from all over the country. Gen. Hawley, chairman of the senate committee on military affairs and a stalwart republican, says: "I believe it would be a cruel injustice to summarily retire Gen Miles, and that such action would cost the republican party many votes in the approachi[illegible] elections. Gen. Miles has not only [illegible] friends in the senate, but he is [illegible]d by veteran soldiers throughou[illegible] country."

"I used [illegible]k that all farmers were overw[illegible] until I went to the county fair."

"And what did you see there?"

"They had chairs covered with old postage stamps and lace crosses cut out of perforated cardboard, and one woman had a quilt with 5,000 pieces in it. Needn't tell me people like that are overworked unless it is from choice!" —Washington Times.

STEAMER BURNED

Over Sixty Persons Believed Lost Their Lives.

MISSISSIPPI PACKET BOAT

Cairo, Ill., April 21.—The side-wheel steamer City of Pittsburg, from Cincinnati to Memphis, was burned to the water's edge early Sunday morning at Turners Landing, near Olmstead, Ill. The early reports stated that 65 lives were lost, and that many were badly burned and otherwise injured, but the list of casualties is not yet definitely determined. Two boats and all available craft from this city went to the scene for relief

Most of the passengers were still in bed when Clerk Oliver Phillips gave the alarm. The engineers had started all the pumping engines, while the crew brought all the hose into play. Amid the streams of water on all sides, the flames from the lower deck and dense clouds of smoke, the passengers rushed from their staterooms and a frightful panic ensued. The appeals of the officers and crew could not appease the terror-stricken crowds that interfered with those throwing water on the flames, as well as with those working with the life boats. Few could adjust life-preservers or do anything for themselves.

The smoke was stifling. Great clouds floated through the blazing steamer, choking the passengers and adding to the terror. Children cried piteously, begging that they be saved.

Life boats were manned and every effort was made to save the passengers from the floating furnace of flames. From the river banks the sparks from the burning craft and the dense clouds of smoke, tinged with flames, made a most impressive and weird spectacle. Boats were sent from shore to help in the work of rescue. Boats, laden to their limit with passengers in scant attire they were able to gather, were landed at the river banks. As fast as the boats could be emptied they returned to the ill-fated steamer, the rescuers losing no time from their work.

The burning steamer was quickly headed to the bank, but passengers were forced to jump from the stern and in trying to swim ashore in the swift current many were drowned.

Many also perished in the flames. Only one yawl was saved, without oars, and the women were taken off. Help except from people living near by did not arrive until 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and passengers with only night clothes, and without food, suffered terribly.

Among the missing are a child of Pilot Al Pritchard, and Clay Breeze, his wife and son, and a son of Archie M. Allen of Pittsburg. Many members of the crew are also missing.

The fire was discovered at 4:04 a. m. There was 70 passengers and 70, all told, in the crew.

The following is a partial list of those lost: Mr. Adams, Ohio, bound for St. Louis; Mr. Mowns, Memphis; Tom Smith, steersman, Memphis; Patrick Burk, wife and six children, Owensboro, Ky., bound for Morehouse Mo.; Joe Ridding and Lud Jones, Cincinnati; Wm. Ballinger, steward, Cincinnati; a little girl named Sweeney of Owensboro, Ky.; L. L. Hunter, Lititi, Pa.; two cooks and two chambermaids and most of the deck hands.

The fire st[illegible]d in the forward hatch larboard and burned fiercely, and when the steamer ran ashore escapes were made over the cabin railing. Very few passengers or members of the crew were aware of fire until it was too late. The captain and clerk late last night claim in all 80 persons have been accounted for, leaving 60 people lost or unaccounted for.

Immigrant "Sharks" Were Whipped.

New York, April 21.—Commissioner of Emigration Fitchie received orders from Washington to investigate published stories that immigrants who land in this city at the Battery are brutally treated by the special police on duty there. The president, after looking over the papers, sent them to Secretary Shaw, who in turn forwarded them to Mr. Fitchie with orders to apply the probe. The instance mentioned was that the special police carried rawhide with which they beat the immigrants, driving the foreigners before them like so many cattle. Commissioner Fitchie is already out in a denial of the charges. He and his police declare that it is not the immigrants who are lashed with whips. It is, they say, the horde of hotel runners, idlers, "sharks" and other men who have no legitimate business at the Battery and who menace the immigrants as they land. The officers declare that the only way to get rid of these pests, as they term them, is to use violence.

Another Big Strike Threatened.

Huntington, W. Va., April 21.—The United Mine Workers of West Virginia, whose repeated efforts to bring about a conference between themselves and the coal operators of the state have been unsuccessful, will make a final effort to secure the latter's attendance at a meeting called for the present week in this city. If no recognition or satisfaction shall be obtained at this meeting, it is said a general strike will be the result among the thousands of mine workers along the Chesapeake & Ohio and Norfolk & Western and the Baltimore & Ohio railroads.

Boy Murderer Sentenced.

Toledo, April 21.—Daniel Rosenbecker, aged 13 years, has pleaded guilty to murder and was sentenced to serve 20 years in the state penitentiary. He killed his playmate, Arthus Shanteau, aged 7 years.

Won't Elect State Delegates.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 19.—The republican county convention will be held May 15 and the fifth district congressional convention will follow on May 28. The county convention will not elect delegates to the state convention, the party managers believing it better to keep their hands off.

[illegible]liss Will Be Present.

Muskegon, Mich., April 19.—Muskegon will be honored by a visit from Gov. Bliss and staff on Memorial day, when the McKinley statue will be unveiled. There will be seven companies of the National Guard here, a battalion from Fort Sheridan, and the crews from two revenue cutters.

SHOT HIS BROTHER

Edward Hawley of Detroit Kills His Brother James.

QUARRELED OVER BUSINESSS

Shooting Took Place in a Saloon—Wife of Murdered Man Explains Trouble—The Murderer Surrenders Himself to Police.

Detroit, April 18.—Another murder was last night added to the long list.

Edward T. Hawley was shot and killed by his brother, James B. Hawley, in the saloon owned by the two brothers and Luke Hawley, 814 River street. The three comprise the well-known wrecking, tug and stevedore firm of Hawley Bros.

The shooting took place about 6:10 o'clock and was the result of an argument between the brothers over some vessel property recently purchased by Edward and Luke Hawley. As near as could be learned, the two brothers were standing on the outside of the bar of the saloon and Jim accused Ed of trying to bluff him into paying part of the cost of the boat. "You can't bluff me," said Jim, and Ed replied that he was not trying to bluff him. Ed started to go out the door, carrying in his hand a bundle of shrubs. As he passed Jim it is said he hit him in the face with the bundle, the sharp thorns on the shrubs cutting his face somewhat. "Don't you hit me again," Jim is reported to have said, and then Ed hit him again with the tree shrubs as he started for the door.

"I'm going to shoot you," cried Jim, and he pulled a revolver out of his pocket and aimed at Ed, who was less than 10 feet away. He pulled the trigger and Ed started to run around the corner, but got no further than the side door of the saloon, when he fell, with his lifeblood flowing from an ugly wound in his right breast, about three-quarters of an inch over the nipple.

A physician was at once called and reached the injured man in five minutes, but could do nothing for him, and he died at 6:18, without speaking.

Jim Hawley put the revolver back into his pocket and took several large drinks of whiskey and walked out the front door of the saloon without any effort being made by those on the inside to stop him. He went toward the river and disappeared among the railroad cars standing in the yards. Nothing more was heard of him until about 7:30, when he walked into the jail and asked Turnkey Butler if Sheriff Dickson was in.

Butler did not know the man and said Sheriff Dickson was out. Hawley said he would not wait, but would come back later. He then left the jail, but returned in about half an hour and surrendered to Sheriff Dickson, who notified police headquarters. Detectives Lombard and Lally at once went to the jail for Hawley, and at 9:30 he was placed under arrest and taken to the central station.

Mrs. James Hawley, wife of the murderer, who was found at her home, 69 Twenty-first street, gives what is probably the foundation of the deadly quarrel.

"My husband has been complaining ever since we came back from the south in January that his brothers were not using him justly. There has been big money in the docks and the wrecking business. Ed and Luke have bought houses and farms and we have not been able to. The business was supposed to be owned equally in partnership, but Jim has thought for a long time that they were getting the best of him. A year ago their tug burned and only a little while ago Ed and Luke bought another. They wanted Jim to buy an interest in it, and he said they asked him more for his share than they had paid for the whole of it. He left the house about 5:20 o'clock after eating supper, and had not been drinking then.

"I have noticed recently that he did not seem just right and it does not seem possible that he could have done such a thing in his right mind. Ever since we came back from our southern trip he has been pale, and the first day after we came he went down to the office and had a violent quarrel with his brothers over business."

The inquest was set for Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Missing Bachelor Is Wealthy.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 18.—The home of John Beck, the old bachelor who disappeared on Good Friday, was broken into by officers and friends yesterday. They found bank books in his bureau drawer showing that he had $3,700 on deposit. His gold watch, worth $50, was also hid under some linen. His valuables were all placed in the Ann Arbor Savings bank. No clew was found to show why Beck had left. His friends still hope that he has only gone off visiting. He has relatives in Kalamazoo and Sebewaing, Huron county.

Aside from the glucose the factory will make candy, syrups, table sugar and grape sugar. A large number of outside capitalists, including E. D. Chapman, Edwin B. Gould and George W. Ballou of New York are interested in the scheme. A meeting was held in New York and Mr. Post was elected chairman of the board of directors.

An Early Press Agent.

Though absurd wagers, often inconveniencing other people, are now sometimes made, they are not so prevalent as in the eighteenth and early part of the nineteenth centuries. The absurdity of a wager made by some persons in 1749 is only equaled by the credulity of the multitude. On Jan. 16 of that year, according to widespread announcements, a person would play on a walking cane at the Haymarket theater the music of every instrument, get into a quart bottle and while there sing several songs, at the same time permitting any spectator to handle the bottle. The theater could hold but a small proportion of the immense crowd, but the performer did not appear. Some person behind the curtain announced that if the audience would remain there until the next morning instead of going into a quart bottle he would get into a pint one. But, though the multitude had faith in the quart, the pint bottle was too much. A riot ensued, and the interior of the theater was destroyed.—London Chronicle.

Save Your Eyes.

If your eyesight is good, take care of it. Look away off yonder every time you get to the bottom of a page in reading. If it is defective, let no foolish pride prevent you from wearing the proper glasses.

There is no sense in handicapping yourself in life when a piece of glass before each eye will make your vision as good as it possibly can be. The oculist will not advise you to wear glasses if you do not need them any more than he will prescribe a drug you do not need.

Plenty of people, though, do not know that they have defective sight because they have never really seen at all. They have headaches, inflamed eyes, sties, even much graver troubles, from the strain of trying to see with eyes that were put up wrong. There are cases where homicidal insanity has been completely cured when impaired vision has been corrected.—Harvey Sutherland in Ainslee's Magazine.

A Scriptural Mule.

"I'll be ready for you in a minute," said the old colored farmer to the sheriff; "dez ez soon ez I feeds Solomon."

"Why did you give him that name?"

"Kaze he de wises' mule in de county, suh, en he t'inks dat fast travelin' is all wanity en wexation er sperrit, thus fulfillin' de book er Proverbs!"—Atlanta Constitution.

He Cornered Tilden.

Samuel J. Tilden had a touch of humor, at times querulous in its tone, and at other times he could be funny without meaning to be. He was an expert judge of wines, and his cellar was choicely stocked. When dining out, however, he had a little way of measuring by the taste of his guest and ordering accordingly. Colonel John R. Fellows noted this trait and once when dining with Mr. Tilden saw that, as usual, the Sage of Greystone had ordered a small bottle of an ordinary brand for his plate and a very choice vintage for himself. Mr. Tilden was called away from the table for a moment, and the colonel deftly shifted the bottles. When Tilden lifted his pint to pour out the wine, his eye quickly noted the difference, but he got out of the difficulty nicely. "Here, waiter," he said, "you have made a mistake in my wine. I want the same kind Colonel Fellows has."—New York World.

High Pressure Days.

Men and women alike have to work incessantly with brain and hand to hold their own nowadays. Never were the demands of business, the wants of the family, the requirements of society, more numerous. The first effect of the praiseworthy effort to keep up with all these things is commonly seen in a weakened or debilitated condition of the nervous system, which results in dyspepsia, defective nutrition of both body and brain, and in extreme cases in complete nervous prostration. It is clearly seen that what is needed is what will sustain the system, give vigor and tone to the nerves, and keep the digestive and assimilative functions healthy and active. From personal knowledge, we recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for this purpose. It acts on all the vital organs, builds up the whole system, and fits men and women for these high pressure days.

Dreadful Attack of Whooping Cough

Mrs. Ellen Harrison, of 300 Park Ave. Kansas City, Mo., writes as follows: Our two children had a severe attack of whooping cough, one of them in the paroxysm of coughing would often faint and bleed at the nose. We tried everything we heard of without getting relief. We then called in our family doctor who prescribed Foley's Honey and Tar. With the very first dose they began to improve and we feel that it has saved their lives. Refuse substitutes. J. J. Orr.

The Old Gray Mare

By GEO. M. BILLINGS.

Copyright, 1901, by A. S. Richardson.

Farmer John Carter had fed the pigs, shut the henhouse door and come around on to the side veranda to smoke his evening pipe with his wife, Nancy, who sat in the big rocking chair. She had placed his pipe and tobacco within easy reach. Farmer John sat down with a grunt, rubbed at his stiff knee a minute, and then, instead of filling his pipe, he slowly turned to his wife and said:

"What on earth do you mean?" exclaimed the wife and ceased rocking so suddenly that she almost shot out of the chair.

"Don't try to fool me," he continued as he slowly shook his head. "I ain't been askin' no questions before, but I seen for two or three weeks that things was wrong with Milly."

"She's been kind o' draggy since she got wet goin' to camp meetin', but I don't think we ought to have a doctor, do you?"

"I think, Nancy," he slowly replied after a half minute— "I think I'm goin' to find out what's the matter with Milly, and if you won't tell me I'll go over and have a few words with Sile Johnson. Mebbe he knows."

"How should he know?" asked Nancy as she rocked furiously.

"Dunno, but I guess I'll walk over there tonight."

"Well, I guess you won't, John Carter, why can't you mind your own business?"

"Dunno, but I want to see Sile Johnson."

"You are always pokin' around and makin' an old hen huzzy of yourself, and I expect you'll get up and put on one of my dresses some mornin'. Now, then, bein' you are so full of curiosity, lemme tell you somethin'. Our Milly and Sile have had a tiff."

"Had a row, eh?" queried John, as he settled himself down to hear the particulars.

"No, sir, they haven't!" she snapped. "I said a tiff, and there's a heap of difference between a tiff and a row."

"But they got mad at each other?"

"Yes, they did, and I'm backin' Milly for all I'm worth. You know the day she went over to Eli Warner's to see Sarah? Well, there was a windmill man at Warner's that day, and because the two girls sung the 'Sweet By and By' while he played on the organ Silas called Milly a flirt."

"And she got mad?"

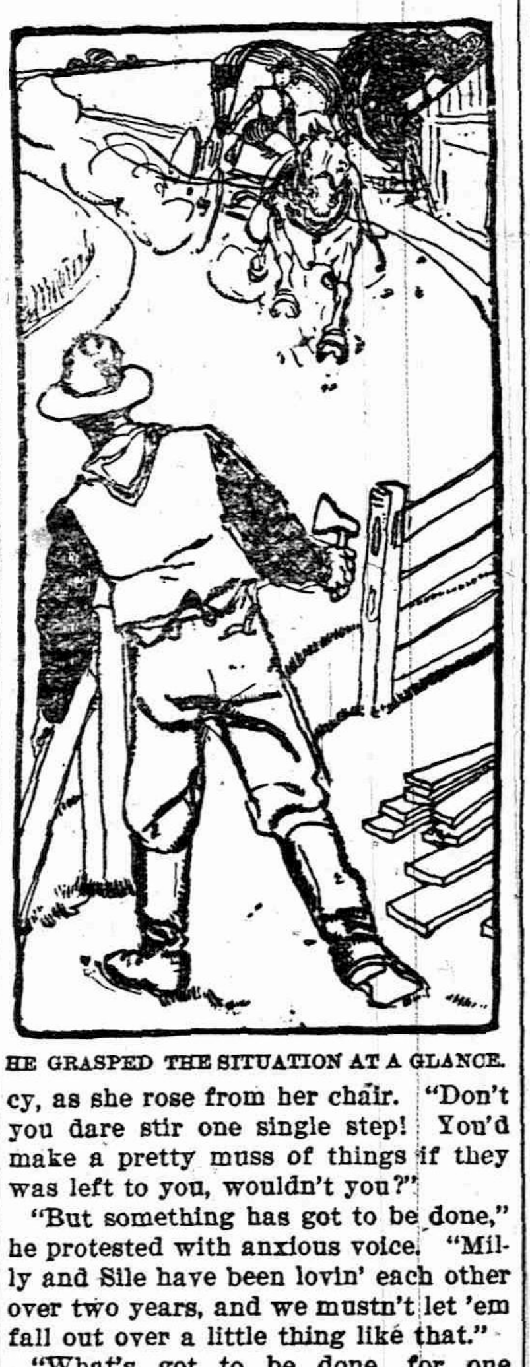
"Of course."

"And he got mad?"

"Of course."

"And he hasn't been here for two weeks, and Milly is goin' around lookin' as if she wanted to die? I must go over and see Sile and tell him she's all over bein' mad and wants to be friends ag'in."

"What! What! John Carter, are you a born fool?" almost shouted Nancy, as she rose from her chair. "Don't you dare stir one single step! You'd make a pretty muss of things if they was left to you, wouldn't you?"



HE GRASPED THE SITUATION AT A GLANCE.

"But something has got to be done," he protested with anxious voice. "Milly and Sile have been lovin' each other over two years, and we mustn't let 'em fall out over a little thing like that."

"What's got to be done, for one thing, is for you to keep out of it. Milly has got a mother, and that mother sits right here, and what she don't know about lovers' quarrels you needn't try to learn her. Now, you mind what I tell you. I'm expectin' Sile Johnson will come sneakin' around any day, but if he does don't you say one word about the quarrel. Jest treat him as if you didn't know anything had happened. He begun the quarrel, and he's got to be the one to eat humble pie."

"But suppose he sticks out about it and busts up the marriage?"

"I shan't suppose nothin' of the sort. If he doesn't fall off the barn and break his neck, he'll be back here and very humble within two weeks."

Mrs. Nancy Carter thought she knew young Silas Johnson pretty well and that he didn't differ much from the generality of lovers, but she was mistaken. He was an obstinate young man, and, though it caused him loss of sleep and appetite, he refused to be the first to give in. One word from Milly would have brought him over to the Carter farmhouse on the jump, but, backed by a feeling of injury and her mother, she refused to speak it. It thus came about that the "tiff" threatened to have disastrous consequences, and there was a possibility of two lives being wrecked. One evening when she was forced to realize this Nancy quietly asked of her husband:

"John, did you see Silas anywhere around when you was passin' the farm the other day?"

"Yes," was the reply. "He was buildin' a fence jest beyond the barn. Is it all off between Milly and him?"

"Can't say whether 'tis or not. Did you ever know our old gray mare to run away?"

"Lands, no! Nothin' on earth would scare her."

"But if somethin' did, John? If Milly was drivin' her to town and she ran away, what would happen?"

"She'd probably stop for breath after goin' about five rods," laughed the husband.

"She wouldn't kick the wagon to pieces or kill Milly?"

"She might fetch up in a fence corner and bump her own head, but I guess that would be the worst of it. What's up, Nancy?"

"Nothin' for you to know. You jest keep quiet and lemme work this thing out by myself. Milly's goin' to town after a darnin' needle and a spool of black thread after dinner tomorrer, and she'll drive the old mare."

After dinner next day the horse was hitched to a light wagon and left standing under a shed in the barnyard until wanted. When Milly was ready for her trip, the mother brought the outfit around, taking much more time than seemed necessary. Moreover, when the old mare, who had passed her twentieth birthday, was brought up at the gate she was what Milly called "wriggly"—that is, she was nervous and restless and evidently full of go. She had to be held by the bit until the girl got in and secured the lines.

"She acts real colty today," said the mother as she patted the mare's nose, "but she'll steady down before you get to the schoolhouse. She has never run away in her life, but if she should do so now"—

"I guess I won't go," interrupted Milly.

"You go right along. As I was sayin', if she should run away you hold her steady in the middle of the road and scream for help. Now let her g'lang."

The old gray mare moved off with a rush, and for a quarter of a mile she maintained a pace to surprise her driver. Then she suddenly gave a squeal and broke into a run. Milly dropped the lines and clung to the seat, and she also remembered her mother's injunction to scream. Silas Johnson was still working on the fence "jest beyond the barn." He was also calling himself a fool and thinking he would give five years of his life to make up with Milly when he heard screams and a clatter down the road. He grasped the situation at a glance.

It is none of the reader's affair whether he resolved to do or die, whether he made a hero of himself or not, whether the "wriggly" old mare was glad of an excuse to stop or made frantic efforts to continue her wild flight. It is sufficient that he stopped her, that the screaming Milly fell into his arms, that after a time he drove her back home and didn't return to his fence building again that day.

The main point of interest shifts to that side veranda again. Nancy is sitting there alone with a smile of triumph on her face when John comes up from the barn and holds up to view a dozen burs and innocently says:

"Nancy, this is mighty curious. I found all these burs under the harness, and they must have been what made the old mare run away."

"Very likely," she replies without looking up.

"And somebody must have put 'em there."

"Yes."

"And—and—it—was"—

"Silas says he thinks they ought to be married next month," says Nancy as she looks up and almost winks at the puzzled face above her.

MAN A RATHER POOR LOT.

"Man is a vain sort of an animal at all times," observed a thoughtful citizen, "and in his process of naming and classifying things around him he has attempted to leave reminders of himself in every possible place, and he has generally succeeded, for one's eyes may not escape falling on something named after some of his attributes. But when we come to think of it, when we come to look nature squarely in the face, man is not the only thing in the land which can lay claim to highly developed senses.

"Take the human eye. Unquestionably the little bundle of nerves in the eye, which make visualization possible and which present the mind with photographic refinements which no art has yet equaled, is one of the physiological marvels and opens up an endless field for speculation in the realm of psychology, that unsolved riddle of science in whose presence even the giants have cowered and skulked in hopeless ignorance. Yet this eye, discerning with so much delicacy when the picture is no farther than the wall of one's room—this eye with its circumscribed limits would be looked upon with dignified scorn by yon soaring eagle if he only knew how much farther he could see than a human being.

"Take the human ear. We may not hear so well as the rats and mice that burrow under the palaces in which we live or the squirrel that capers yonder in the forest and countless other things one might mention. We may differentiate with greater accuracy and trace refinements in sound which these lower creatures may not trace, but when it comes to the matter of catching the sound at long range their ears seem to have been more perfectly constructed.

"It is conceded that no human voice has ever been heard which could equal in sweetness of tone the lays which one may hear in the orchard. "No human being ever sang more sweetly than Patti, but she never sang so sweetly as the meadow lark when he pours his gurgling love song out on the summer air or the oriole when he shades his silvered octave from the bending bough.

"What device for measuring water pressure has man invented which will compare with the nerves which string the sides of the fish? It is a sense which is not represented in the human category. Man must resort to artificialities in order to learn the air pressure and the degree of heat or cold. But it is different with the fish, for he can always tell just what the water pressure is, and he knows how much he can stand, and he acts accordingly.

"Take the olfactory nerves. Man is all right when it comes to attar of roses, violet perfumeries and this and that sort, but you may pick out the measliest old hound in the swamps of Mississippi, and if he knew how much superior his sense of smell is to man's—well, he wouldn't want to be caught in a man's company.

"No, I am not running my own creed down. I am just relating a few things which ought to make us all natural lovers of the many deserving beauties that we wot not of in these hurrying times, and among them may be counted the things mentioned. Prove it? Prove nothing. I am just telling you."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Since Editor Kempton of the Addison Courier has been acting as a regular pastor of the Congregational church, he has to be a bit careful as to the kind of papers he exchanges with and so cuts out the Adrian Press. Go into any town and people will tell you: "This is the worst town in the world for gossipers and knockers." This is not true. There are in every town and city in the world forked tongued gossipers and knockers who never worked at any thing else. It's human nature to gossip and to knock and those who would escape people of this class will have to find some cool refeshing spot where humanity aboundeth not.—Ex.

A child lost its life near Morenci, Tuesday morning in a sad manner. It was the little son of Geo. Swartz, who went to the barn to play and it is thougnt took along some matches. A short time after the barn was discovered to be on fire, and was destroyed, together with other buildings in which there was a horse, cow, and all the farming tools. The boy was burned to death in the building. The parents are nearly frantic over the affliction.

It is passing strange that young people, many times young women who are supposed to have pride enough to behave themselves, will go to an evening church service and disturb all around them by whispering and talking in an undertone. The majority of the people go to church to derive some benefit from the service, and there is no reason why they should be annoyed by the unseemly conduct of those who lack sense to conduct themselves with decency in public places.—Milford Times.

Friday in Hudson, a young man named Leon Randall, was so badly afflicted with a "rase" that a physician pronounced it smallpox and he was quarantined. He was in this city Wednesday night and attended the opera house, the eruptions being sufficient, if it were smalldox, to expose the whole audience. Should this prove to be the disease, it is likely there will be trouble here. He accompanied a young lady to the opera house, and the health board here has been advised.—Adrian Press.

Field mice in many parts of our state are reported as having been very destructive during the past winter to fruit trees and clover fields. Prof. R. H. Pottit, the Entomologist at the agricultural college, was asked some time ago to determine the damage and he tock up the work and reported that in some sections serious damage had resulted. The mice had eaten the clover close to the ground and thus killed the plants and the trees had been barked in the same manner, As a remedy he recommended that trenches be dug shallow, fill with straw and in it sift corn meal mixed with arsenic, then cover with a thin coat of soil, leaving both ends open Be careful that no stock is allowed to get the meal.—Saline Observer.

The Post of last week accuses Elisha King, of this city, of having seven hens that laid 130 eggs during April and asks if anyone can break this record. If Mr. King has seven hens that plead guilty to laying 130 eggs in ten days, he should most certainly have first premium because his variety of poultry would double discount anything that even Kansas can boast of. Two eggs a day—and every day, at that, is a whole lot to ask of any hen, but then, even hens get good natured and want to jolly a person sometimes, and Mr. King may have that variety. Perhaps they were hatched by the incubator process which may account for their extraordinary laying qualifications.—Hudson Gazette.

Let It Alone.

Scott's Emulsion is not a good medicine for fat folks. We have never tried giving it to a real fat person. We don't dare. You see Scott's Emulsion builds new flesh. Fat people don't want it. Strong people don't need it.

But if you are thin Scott's Emulsion is the medicine for you. It doesn't tire you out. There is no strain. The work is all natural and easy. You just take the medicine and that's all there is to it.

The next thing you know you feel better—you eat better—and you weigh more. It is a quiet worker.

GREWSOME RELICS.

Pathetic Memorials of the Ill Fated City of Pompeii.

In the museum at Pompeii are preserved the most horrid and pathetic relics of the last days of the ill fated city. Early in 1863 the workmen who were helping to unearth an immense palace struck into a cavity in the lava, the nature of which, of course, was a mystery. Without breaking further into it they poured plaster of paris down the crevices that were already opened, and as soon as the plaster had hardened the crust of lava was carefully removed, and, lo, the form of a human being in his last struggles was revealed! The outlines and form of the person were perfectly preserved, showing plainly that he had been buried in boiling lava, which had hardened about him. The intervening 1,800 years and the heat of the lava besides had reduced the body to a handful of dust, but the lava had left a cast natural as life.

Since that time several bodies have been reproduced, one of them with the features so perfectly preserved as to show the expression of the face. In some of the plaster casts parts of the skeleton are imbedded. Two female casts which are clasped in each other's arms have been called "The Mother and Daughter." Persons who have seen this group say that there is nothing in all Pompeii more touching than the utter despair depicted upon the face of the "mother."

Origin of the Word "Cuba."

Cuba is the name by which the island was originally known to the Lucayan Indians, who were with Columbus when he discovered it. One of its villages or cities was called by them Cubanacan, and it is reported that from the similarity of sounds Columbus, still supposing himself to be on the coast of Asia, imagined that this must be a city of Kublai Khan, the Tartar sovereign celebrated by Marco Polo. The survival of the original name for Cuba is a remarkable instance of persistence, as the island has been baptized and rebaptized many times since its European discovery. Columbus first called it Juana in honor of Prince John, the son of Ferdinand and Isabella. After Ferdinand's death it was called in his memory Fernandina. Subsequently this name was changed to Santiago, after St. James, the patron saint of Spain. Still later it was named Ave Maria, in honor of the Virgin Mary. But none of these names held, and the Indian name is still preserved.—Literary Era.

Death Superstitions.

According to one superstition a favorite method death has of announcing that a person is to become his victim is to cause the doomed one to sneeze while viewing a corpse, or to have the subject see his face reflected in a mirror while standing near the body of one in whom life is extinct. A sparrow flew into an open window of the consumptive ward at the hospital one day while I was attending a patient and without alighting flew out of another. I was immediately besieged upon all sides by tearful requests to redouble my efforts to effect a cure, as the action of the bird was a certain omen that death would claim some one present within a week.

One of the patients died the next day, and the other poor fated ones resuscitated the little spark of hope which feebly flickered previous to the advent of the little bird, thinking, probably, that as one had succumbed they had some chance of regaining their health.—Exchange.

New Year's In China.

In China it is considered obligatory on all persons to settle every pecuniary obligation before the first day of the new year, a custom that might with profit be imitated elsewhere. The Chinese have also the singular practice of dating all births on the first day of the year on which they occur, so that as far as the record shows every Chinaman has but one birthday, the first day of January. The widest variance is observable in the selection of the day which should be considered the first of the year. Some nations have begun it in the spring, others in the autumn, some in midsummer, most in midwinter; but, whatever the day, the usages and rejoicings which characterized it have not varied so greatly as might be supposed, but have remained for ages almost unchanged.

Boy's Skull Was Fractured.

Port Huron, Mich., April 19.—Francis Smith, the 7-year-old son of Mark Smith, Jr., was struck by a Pere Marquette train at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon at Thomas street and his skull was fractured. No one saw the accident, as the boy was found lying beside the track. An operation was performed, but the chances are against the lad's recovery.

Murderer Asks for Time.

Lansing, Mich., April 19.—Abraham L. Spees, who was convicted at Newaygo in January of murder and sent to state prison for life, has asked the supreme court for a mandamus to compel Circuit Judge Palmer to extend for 30 days the time granted for settling a bill of exceptions.

STARTLING DISCOVERIES

All along the Line. New and old Ideas.

"A CORRESPONDENT EDITOR WANTED."

"Come in," said a voice from the interior.

The young man entered and what a sight met his gaze. There sat the great and mighty editor of the Photographic Herald. His massive brow darkened as he gazed upon his visitor, for he hated to be disturbed and was just at that moment engaged in the compilation of a learned article entitled "Can an artist be a photographer or a photographer an artist? if so, which? if not, why not?"

"Well, what is it?" he asked.

"I understand," replied the young man, as he nervously destroyed the brim of his hat, "that you are in need of some one to undertake the answering of your correspondents."

"Do you feel fully qualified?" inquired the editor, as he toyed with a little package of letters that had just arrived.

"I think so," answered the young man. "I once was—"

"Well, we will see," interrupted the editor, "here, for instance, is an 'anxious inquirer' who desires to know how old Daguerre's mother-in-law was when she died."

"I am afraid I couldn't answer that," faltered the young man.

"Well, here is another," continued the great man. "'Constant reader' wants to know the chemical formula for the new developer, Diamidonapthalinomonosulphonic acid"

"To decide a bet," continued the editor, reading from another letter he had picked up, "will you please state whether the ferrous oxalate developer is superior to lemonade as a summer beverage or not."

"'A subscriber from the start,' desires to know of a good process for making photographs in natural colors. The process must be an instantaneous one—"

But the young man had fled; and with a weary sigh the editor resumed his writing.

TINTING LANTERN SLIDES.

By this term, says the amateur Photographer (English), is generally meant the application of some one tint or color all over the slide. This is generally down in one of three ways. First, a thin piece of colored glass is put into the lantern either behind or before the slide. Secondly, a solution of a suitable aniline dye is made in alcohol. This is added to plain collodion, and the film surface of the slide when quite dry is eveningly coated with the tinted collodion. Thirdly, the gelatine of the slide may be stained or dyed by immersing it in a solution of either an aniline dye soluble in water, or one of the now popular Judson's penny packets of dye materials dissolved in water.

If a flat wash (as in a map or plan) be required for a certain portion only, this may be locally applied with a soft camel's hair brush. But if you do not wish for trouble, do not bring the edge of one patch within a quarter of an inch of another tint, unless the first is quite dry before the second patch is applied; otherwise you may find one part "run into its neighbor.

HOW TO MAKE GOLD PAINT

Gold paint may either be made from real gold or from a soft brass in imitation of real gold. The method of making the former is as follows:

Take about equal weights of gold leaf and honey, and grind slowly in a porcelain mortar until a uniform paste is formed, transfer to a filter paper and wash thoroughly till all the honey is removed, leaving the gold powder upon the filter. Or wash the gold and honey paste out of the mortar into a beaker with three or four times its weight of water, allow the gold to settle, and pour off the supernatant liquid; repeat the operation in the beaker till the gold powder is quite free from honey. The last washing water should be slightly alkaline, in order to remove any trace of grease which may be present.

If the finely-divided gold is to be kept for some time before using, it should be carefully dried and put in glass bottles. To make the gold thus prepared into paint, dissolve one part of pure gum arabic in four parts of distilled water, and mix with one part of soluble silicate of potash (water glass), then grind in sufficient of the finely-divided gold to give the consistency of paint.

The final point is attained when all the gold powder remains suspended and shows no tendency to settle. Imitation gold paint is made by taking thin brass foil, or Dutch leaf, and grinding with honey in the same way.

RATHER AWKWARD.

There is one man, so the story goes, who curses long and loudly the cinematograph. In his amiable, husbandly way he took his wife to see the "cin," (new abbreviation), and in the Sunday afternoon disembarkation scene his better half saw what she believed to be her husband coming ashore with another lady. To be the more convinced, she saw the tableau fully half a dozen times with the aid of opera glasses.

The accused male indignantly denies everything, but as he cannot prove a complete alibi for that particular Sunday afternoon, and his wife won't entertain the idea of an "extraordinary likeness," there is a big storm in the once happy home.

Many operators depend upon development as a means of securing brilliant negatives. This, though in itself a good method, cannot be called a legitimate one. Brilliancy should be secured by a correct disposition of the light during sitting. Contrasts produce brilliancy, but they must be delicately managed or the result will be harsh.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

LAST EVENING

A memorial service in honor of all the members of Beers Post No. 140, department of Michigan, who have marched on to their final camping ground, was held at the post room last night. The friends and relatives of the deceased comrades having been invited, there was present a large company.

The exercises were very impressive, consisting of reading the record of each member that has died by Adjutant Wm. Smith, after the reading of each name, a roll upon a muffled drum. After the conclusion of the record a hymn by Dr. Maddox, Floyd Slater, L. F. Abrams and W. C. Dickinson; responsive reading by Chaplain Henry Sweet and comrades.

Chant presentation of Dr. Barnes' picture, by comrad Daniels, on behalf of Mrs. Barnes, responses by the commander on behalf of the post, hymn America. An address by Rev. Leslie Bower.

The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Upon the altar was a beautiful floral pillow bearing the inscription, Comrades. The spirit of the occasion in its true sense seemed to prevade the comrades and guests, and present say it was one of the most impressive and instructive occasions ever witnessed in G. A. R. circles in Tecumseh.

We want especially to mention the address of Rev. Bower. Although prepared on short notice, was a very able one, and in the opinion of the writer, made an impression on those present that will go with them to the end of life.

NOT DECIDED

The City Council did not fully decide Last Evening about the

SPRINKLING

But asked John Wells to Sprinkle the Street for two Weeks.

At a meeting of the council last evening it was decided that a special committee consisting of Smith, James and Belding should inquire into the matter of sprinkling, find out what the merchants will pay and decide if it is not the best way to have the city team on the streets ready to go to a fire if needed at all times and do the sprinkling.

It is the plan to pay John Wells a reasonable amount for the business, than have the city in conjunction with the business men run the sprinkling. There is little doubt but that such an arrangement can be made to give good fire protection and at the same time furnish good sprinkling and save the city money. A good committee is now in charge of the matter and in two weeks will report.

Mrs. Harriott DuBois.

Harriet Wells was born in Chatauqua Co., N. Y., April 9th, 1821. She was the fourth of a family of ten children. Very early in life she gave her heart to Jesus and became a member of the M. E. church.

At the age of 18 she came to Michigan with her father's family and settled in Hillsdale county. Oct. 27, 1846 she was married to Rev. Robert DuBois and together they cheerfully entered upon the work of the itineracy. To them were given four children, two sons and two daughters. The younger son died in infancy and in 1860 she was bereft of her loving husband. Two years later the remaining son died at the age of twelve years.

Through all this tribulation she did not lose faith but still trusted Him who is the Resurrection and the Life. When her husband's health became seriously impaired, they removed to Ann Arbor which was her home until 1876. She then decided to live in the homes of her two daughters. Since the death of her younger daughter, Mrs. Albert Underwood, of Burlington, Mich., in 1884, she has been a blessing and comfort in the home of her only surviving daughter, Mrs. B. Hurry.

In April 1899 she was stricken with paralysis and since then she has failed gradually until she passed peacefully away April 19, 1902.

Of the immediate relatives, besides the daughter, there remain an aged sister, Mrs. E. Steele, of Ann Arbor, and four grandchildren, Clarence, Charles and Harriett Hurry, and Frank L. Underwood, of Chattanooga, Tenn. Her body will be laid to rest in Forrest Hill cemetery Ann Arbor, Monday afternoon, April 21, 1902.

Mrs. DuBois and her family are held in the highest respect in Tecumseh. We all regret her death and extend our hearty sympathy to her bereaved relatives.

That Tired Feeling

Is a Common Spring Trouble.

It's a sign that the blood is deficient in vitality, just as pimples and other eruptions are signs that the blood is impure.

It's a warning, too, which only the hazardous fail to heed.

They cleanse the blood and clear the complexion.

"I felt tired all the time and could not sleep. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla a while I could sleep well and the tired feeling had gone. This great medicine has also cured me of scrofula." MRS. C. M. ROOT, Gilead, Conn.

Still An "Odd" Fellow.

Saturday April 19—Judge Chester came down from Hillsdale this morning and held a short session of circuit court. The most important action was the case of Orren E. Hawkins, of Tecumseh, vs. the Tecumseh lodge of Odd Fellows. Mr. Hawkins was expelled from the lodge some time ago, and brought action in court asking for a mandamus compelling the lodge officers to show any cause why he was expelled. The case was argued some days ago and attracted considerable attention. Judge Chester reserved his opinion and this morning handed it down, denying the mandamus.—Adrian Telegram.

Being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, I found quick relief, and for the last ten days have felt better than for two years." A WOMAN'S BACK.

The Aches and Pains will Disappear if the Advice of this Tecumseh Citizen is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains.

Most of the time it is the kidneys' fault.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. E. D. Fryer, who lives in the northwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I suffered from my kidneys off and on for about two years. During an attack the pain was worse along in the afternoon and I often felt like giving up but I kept on working in misery, for stooping or straightening made my back feel as if it were breaking in two. If I took a slight cold it always settled in my back and in spite of all the remedies I used I could not get relief. Procuring Doan's Kidney Pills at C. A. Wright's drug store I took a course of the treatment. It did more good than all the other medicine I ever used. The pain in my back was quickly relieved. I take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills at every opportunity.

Only Two Held the Office.

A town in central Illinois boasted for many years of a most ornamental figure which adorned the town square seven days in the week. His name was Price Poor, and in splendor of attire he rivaled the Beau Hickman of the capital. He had a numerous family, which he kept well in the background during the few hours he spent at home. In the course of political events in Illinois Price Poor was elected a justice of the peace. He was prouder of the office than a bird of paradise. The neighbors shared his glory by reflection. One of them was seated in Justice Poor's sitting room one day soon after the election and heard the justice talking with his eldest son.

"Is we all jestices, paw?" the boy asked wistfully.

The old man had something of an impediment in his speech. "Eh-no, my son," he answered: "only eh-me and eh-your maw."—Washington Star.

Sensations During Hanging.

One question often asked and which few living persons are able to answer is, "What are the sensations of a man who is being strangled with a rope?" Some of the few who have lived to give an account of what occurred to them at that critical moment say that after one instant of pain the chief sensation is that of a mass of brilliant colors before the eyes. Professor Boughton, who was one day testing for himself what such an experience would be like, lost his footing and was accidentally discovered and rescued just as the last faint spark of life was about to leave the body. He declared afterward that he felt no pain and that the only sensation was that of a fire before his eyes which finally changed from a bright blue to a black color. He said that he had no fear of the consequences and that the colors were even a source of extreme pleasure.

To Know the Cure for any form of nervousness needs but to read the following.

Mrs. J. F. Bartch of Tecumseh, Mich. says: "I was troubled with severe nervousness and nervous headaches. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and now after using two boxes I can say my nerves are steadied and my head does not trouble me. I think the pills a splendid medicine."

Orange Free States Are Still Backward—Transvaalers Not Anxious for Another Winter Campaign—Hostilities Will Not Cease.

Balmoral, Cape Colony, April 21.—Gen. Lucas Meyer, commander-in-chief of the Orange Free State forces, State Secretary Reitz of the Transvaal and the other members of their party arrived here and Saturday morning proceeded to the north. They were accompanied by the British escort, and it is their intention to consult with the Boers in the field.

Pretorit, April 21.—Gen. Dewet has gone to Heilbron, Orange River colony; Gen. Botha, the Transvaal commander-in-chief, has gone to Vryheid, and Gen. Delarey, together with Mr. Steyn, ex-president of the Orange Free State, has gone to Klerksdorp. They have arranged to meet the burghers at the different rendezvous and submit the British terms. It is believed the Transvaalers will everywhere accept the terms, as they are in no way anxious for a winter campaign. The only difficulty likely to occur will, it is thought, be with the Orange Free Staters, many of whom are expected to prove recalcitrant.

In the meantime there will be no cessation of hostilities. The delegates are expected back in Pretoria the middle of May, and in anticipation of their return they have given orders here for new clothes, provisions, etc.

London, April 21.—Gen. Sir Charles Warren gave out the communicatior Sunday, in response to Gen. Buller's stinging criticisms of his conduct at Spion kop. Last evening he requested the newspapers not to publish the communication. Gen. Warren's statement simply expresses his hope that the government will publish the documents relating to Spion kop. He asserts that the dispatches, as published in the White Book, considered by themselves, cause unjust reflections upon himself and his commond

The Pearl Hunters' Superstition.

The pearl hunters of Borneo and the adjacent islands have a peculiar superstition. When they open shells in search of pearls, they take every ninth find, whether it be large or small, and put it into a bottle which is kept corked with a dead man's finger. The pearls in the vial are known as "seed pearls" or "breeding pearls," and the native Borneose firmly believes that they will reproduce their kind. For every pearl put into the vial two grains of rice are thrown in for the pearls to "feed upon."

Some whites in Borneo believe as firmly in the superstition as the natives do, and almost every hut along the coast has its "dead finger" bottle, with from nine to fifty seed pearls and twice that number of rice grains carefully and evenly stowed away among them.

"A neighbor ran in with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy when my son was suffering with severe cramps and was given up as beyond hope by my regular physician, who stands high in his profession. After administering three doses of it, my son regained consciousness and recovered entirely within twenty-four hours," says Mrs. Mary Haller, of Mt. Crawford, Va. This remedy is for sale by J. J. SHROVE TUESDAY JOKES.

Peculiar Ideas of Humor Possessed by Two French Kings.

In all countries where Lent is kept—except in Russia, where Ash Wednesday is not observed—Shrove Tuesday, the last day before the beginning of the penitential season, has been given over to mummings, sports and practical jokes. In both England and Scotland, in which latter place the day is known as Fastens een, it was in times past a great holiday for the apprentices and working classes generally.

A grewsome joke was played by Louis XI. one Shrove Tuesday when at night he ordered his guards to rouse the sleeping villagers near and bring them to the castle. From almost every tree in the surrounding wood, it is said, a dead body dangled, and to the music of his fiddlers Louis compelled the villagers to take a gibbeted corpse for partner and dance before it till morning. Those who had husbands, sweethearts or relatives among the dead were forced to have them for partners.

Later Charles IX. enjoyed a practical joke at Shrovetide that was less grim in its character, secretly giving ten of the most skillful pickpockets in Paris full leave to steal whatever they could without being found out at the carnival ball. Louis himself enjoyed their dexterity and the dismay of those who missed their jewels, swords, girdles and other valuables.

Kingston, Jamaica, April 19.—Another batch of nine Haitien exiles have arrived here. They were ordered to leave Haiti for conspiring against the government. A feeling of unrest still prevails on this island. The police of St. Mary parish have just arrested a schoolmaster for advising the people to refuse to pay taxes. The police also found a quantity of dynamite, which the prisoner told the people would have been quite enough for their purpose if they had followed the example of the inhabitants of Montego Bay.

RAWLINS WILL LEAD.

A Long Siege Likely in Senate With the Philippine Bill.

Washington April 21.—The early part of this week in the house of representatives will be devoted to routine business, with a prospect that some important general legislation may be taken up during the latter part of the week. Today will be devoted to District of Columbia business, Tuesday to war claims, and Wednesday to the oleomargarine bill, which was amended by the senate. During the remaining days of the week it is practically settled that the anti-anarchist bill of Chairman Ray of the judiciary committee will be considered. The measure is much more stringent than the anarchist bill passed by the senate. Plans also are on foot for considering the omnibus public building bill during the latter days of the week. This measure has not yet been reported from the house committee on public buildings and grounds, but it probably will be completed early next week, so that it can be taken up later in the week. Beyond this, no exact program has been arranged. Two appropriation bills, the agricultural and naval bills, are about ready and may be brought in at any time, and the military academy appropriation bill is on the calendar.

The senate begins the week by taking up the river and harbor appropriation bill, and when that measure is disposed of will resume consideration of the Philippine government bill. It is not expected that much time will be required to get the river and harbor bill through the senate, as it is generally approved by senators. Senator Frye, chairman of the committee on commerce, who has charge of the bill, has expressed the opinion that there would be no debate on the bill and that it would pass as soon as it could be ready. It is now understood that Senators Rawlins, senior democratic member of the senate committee on the Philippines, shall lead off in the speech-making in opposition to the Philippine bill to be followed by other members of the committee and other democratic senators. The opinions is expressed that the bill will be before the senate for at least three weeks.

FRANK STOCKTON IS DEAD.

Great Story Writer Passed Away Sunday in Washington.

Washington, April 21.—Mr. Frank R. Stockton, the well-known novelist died suddenly here Sunday from hemorrhage of the brain.

The cause of Mr. Stockton's death was paralysis immediately resulting from hemorrhage in the brain. He was a guest at the banquet held Wednesday night of the National Academy of Sciences, when he was taken suddenly and mysteriously ill. The ailment did not at that time appear to be serious and for a while the sufferer seemed to be improving, but a change for the worse came in the morning and death occurred at 11 o'clock. He was 68 years old. The body will be taken to Philadelphia for interment. No further funeral arrangements have been made as yet.

Mr. Stockton was a Philadelphian by birth, in early life was an engraver and draughtsman, but soon abandoned this occupation for journalism. Many years ago he retired wholly from newspaper work and devoted himself to literature. His reputation as a story writer was world wide.

Water Main Burst; Child Killed.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 21.—As the result of the bursting of a water main of the Pennsylvania Water Co., on Franktown avenue, Wilkinsburg, Saturday evening, Ida Englehardt, aged 6 years, is dead, her sister Lillian, aged 15 years, is so badly hurt that she is not expected to live through, and the children's father, Mr. Englehardt, has a leg broken and is so severely hurt otherwise as to make his condition serious. The main is a 48-inch pipe and runs just above the Englehardt house, which stood on the hillside. When the main burst the force of the water was terrific and the house was literally carried away, leaving only a portion of the rear standing on which Mrs. Englehardt and her youngest daughter, Lizzie, managed to climb and save themselves.

A Shot That Made Trouble.

An odd incident happened in the then Danish West Indies about a quarter of a century ago that nearly caused serious international complications. An American marksman, paying a visit to Charlotte Amalia, amused the governor by an exhibition of his skill with the rifle. Sitting on the veranda of the government house, he said that he could cut with a bullet the signal halyards on the flagstaff of the fort and lower the Danish standard to the ground. As the lines were almost invisible in the distance the governor was willing to bet that he could not do it. The shot rang out, and the flag fell.

Presently a horseman dashed up, informing the governor that some one had fired on the flag. There was great excitement. The governor, none too popular, it seems, with the military, ruined his political future by admitting that the affair was a joke in which he connived. Report being sent to Copenhagen, highly colored, of course, by the commandant, his excellency was summarily removed.—New York Press.

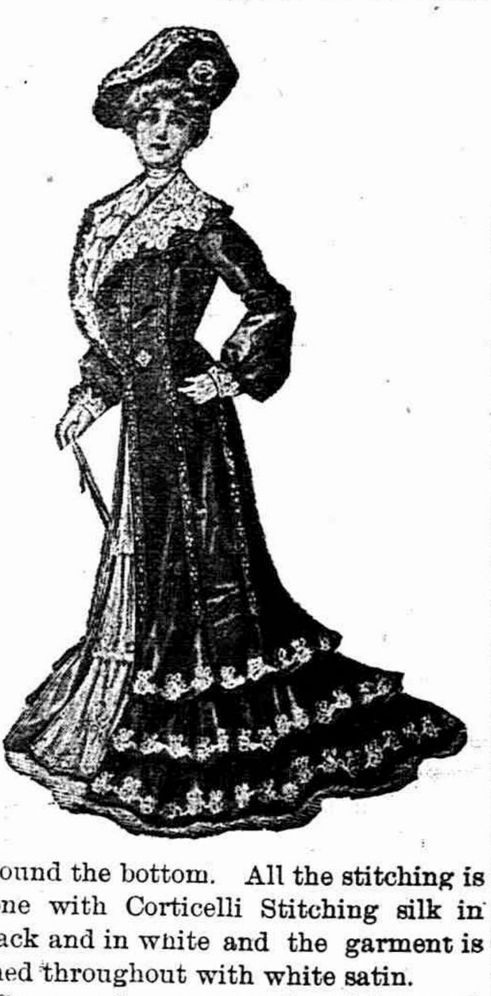
LONG CARRIAGE COAT.

Trimming of Perforated straps.

Our illustration shows an exceedingly rich and handsome long coat of black taffata cut with jabot vest effect and trimmed with perferated straps over white satin. It has a large tucked taffata collar supplemented with another of embroidered linen and a tasteful garniture in white appears on the ruffles around the bottom. All the stitching is done with Corticelli Stitching silk in black and in white and the garment is lined throughout with white satin.



Some yokes are made of lace and rather a pretty effect is gained by adding a row of lace insertion an inch or so below the yoke and joining it with a lattice of narrow velvet ribbon. The fancy for black and white effects is evidenced in the number of white lawn, organdy and mull gowns trimmed with black lace, both edging and insertion, and the quantity of black and white effects, running from lawns and mulls through the various mercerized fabrics to foulards and silks.

Knights of Columbus Initiate Over 100 at Bay City.

BANQUET IN THE EVENING

Bay City, Mich., April 21.—Five hundred Knights of Columbus sat down last night at the Fraser house to the most elaborate banquet ever given in this city, after spending the entire afternoon and evening in putting a class of 100 or more from all over eastern Michigan through three degrees of the order. Special trains from Saginaw, Alpena and Grand Rapids unloaded over 1,000 knigts and ladies and their friends Sunday morning, and they owned the town. At 10:30 a body of 300 took special cars to St. James's church, where they attended service.

At noon officers of the local council entertained the officers of the visiting councils with a luncheon at the Fraser house. The work was carried out in Ridotto hall, the Saginaw team conferring the first degree. The Alpena team conferred the second degree, while the third was under the supervision of George F. Monaghan, Detroit state deputy and member of the national board of directors. Work was completed at 8 o'clock and the banquet followed. The Fraser house dining-room was a mass of flowers and palms and glittering silverware.

James T. Lawler of this city was toastmaster, George F. Monaghan, Detroit; James Collins, Alpena, and Miles J. Purcell and David Fitzgibbon, Port Huron, were the principal speakers. Thomas Condon, Detroit, rendered vocal selections.

An Indignant Poet.

Beranger, the famous French poet, whose greatest gift lay in writing little poems which he called songs, was particularly dependent upon the chance visits of the muse.

He was once visited by the author and academician Viennet, who said to him:

"You must have written several songs since I saw you last."

"I have only begun one," answered Beranger.

"Only one! I am astonished!" exclaimed Viennet.

Beranger became indignant.

"Humph!" he shouted. "Do you think one can turn off a song as one turns off a tragedy?"

Wanted.

We would like to ask, through the columns of your paper, if there is any person who has used Green's August Flower for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Liver Troubles that has not been cured—and we also mean their results, such as sour stomach, fermentation of food, habitual costiveness, nervous dyspepsia, headaches, despondent feelings, sleeplessness—in fact, any trouble connected with stomach and liver? This medicine has been sold for many years in all civilized countries and we wish to correspond with you and send you one of our books free of cost. If you never tried August Flower try one bottle first. We have never known of its failing. If so, something more serious is the matter with you. Ask your oldest druggist.

Clark Russell's Start.

When a young man of one and twenty, Mr. Clark Russell, the well known novelist, was present at the trial of a dozen seamen who had mutinied because the food provided for them was of the most abominable description. He was disgusted to find that the mutineers were actually sentenced to several weeks' imprisonment for refusing to be poisoned with the provisions dealt out to them. From this sprang the idea of a story of mutiny caused entirely by the shipment of bad food for the crew. The result was "The Wreck of the Grosvenor," by which Mr. Clark Russell made his name.

A Corkscrew Steeple.

The steeple of the parish church at Chesterfield, England, is often called the "corkscrew" steeple, for it has got quite a big twist. This is due to the action of the sun on the wooden and iron materials, and the warping is more pronounced in the case of Chesterfield church than in any other church in England. Barnstable and Bristol and one or two other places have leaning steeples, but their tendency is decidedly to "lean" and not to "twist." The church at Chesterfield is the nearest rival in the United Kingdom to the leaning tower at Pisa.

An African River.

The Webbe Shebeyli, an African river, is one of the wonders of the Dark Continent. Although it is a large, rapid flowing river, almost as large as the Missouri, and flows for hundreds of miles through a fertile country, it never reaches the sea. About thirty miles before its waters get to the point where they should mingle with those of the Indian ocean the whole stream sinks out of sight into the sands of a desert.

A Strong Hint.

A little girl went into a neighbor's house one day, and some apple parings lay on a plate on the table. After sitting awhile she said, "I smell apples."

"Yes," the woman replied, "I guess you smell these apple parings on the plate."

"No, no," said she, "'taint them I smell. I smell whole apples."

Pontiac Man's Tobacco Venture Got Him in Trouble.

HE PLUNGED TOO HEAVILY

McKenzie Bank at Algonac Failes—Depositors Will Lose Greater Part of $32,000—Senator Moore Was Interested.

Pontiac, Mich., April 24.—Henry C. Ward of Pontiac has conveyed all his property to his son, Franklin B. Ward, as trustee for the benefit of his creditors. The transfer was put on fire April 15, being recorded simultaneously in Pontiac, Gaylord, Kalkaska, Grayling, and in Sandwich, Ont. The matter was very quietly conducted, and it was only Wednesday that the facts became known.

Wr. Ward's difficulties grow out of his extensive tobacco interests in Leamington, Ont. He started several months ago to engage in the tobacco manufacturing business there. He was not willing to go into the business on a small scale, but went in with all his might. He made contracts through Joseph M. Henry and R. R. Kenyon of Leamington with about 2,000 farmers in Essex county to furnish him with tobacco. When the tobacco was raised and the factory completed, Mr. Ward found it impossible to raise funds to purchase the tobacco, which amounted to about 2,000,000 pounds. Joseph Henry, who acted as solicitor for Mr. Ward in obtaining the contracts, caused his arrest a short time ago in Windsor, claiming, with Kenyon, nearly $15,000 commission.

Some of the farmers were willing to keep their tobacco and sell it elsewhere, but a few became angry and threatened to bring suits to attach Mr. Ward's property in Michigan, and to embarrass him in other ways. Mr. Ward is said to be perfectly willing to pay just claims.

"We can now see that father jumped into the tobacco business altogether too strongly," says Fred Ward, his son. "He was not content to make a little ripple, but wanted to plunge. We can also see that there has been mismanagement in a great many ways. The property covered by the mortgage covers everything that could be found belonging to father."

It is stated that the mortgage filed by Henry C. Ward will not have the slightest effect on any of the concerns or people of this city.

Algonac, Mich., April 24.—The bank belonging to the Algonac Banking Co. was closed Wednesday. J. Will McKenzie and P. J. Kean are the principal stockholders, the former being manager. The bank contained about $32,000 in deposits, the greater part of which will probably be lost, as the present assets of the bank are very poor.

Senator George W. Moore and Fred T. Moore are known to have loaned McKenzie about $9,000 at different times on good and bad paper. They are protected by about $16,000 worth of paper, but some of it is in bad shape.

It is stated on good authority that George W. Carman, the head of the Marine Savings bank of Marine City, will open a new bank at Algonac. Mr. Carman is known all over the state and has been in the banking business since 1879.

There is the probability that considerable litigation will follow the failure, as bankruptcy proceedings will be started.

Money for Old Woman's Home.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 24.—E. L. McDonnell, a wealthy lumberman, formerly of Muskegon, died here Sunday of erysipelas, and by his side was Miss Virgina Pratt of Cincinnati, to whom he was to have been married a week ago. His will was filed Wednesday, disposting of property estimated at $100,000. He leaves $40,000 to establish a home for indigent old women at Fairmount, Ill.; $5,000 to his fiance, Miss Pratt; $5,000 each to father and sister; his household goods and personal effects to his niece, and all the residue, estimated to exceed $50,000, to the proposed old woman's home.

Names In Ireland.

A contributor to The Pilot finds that in every thousand of the population in Ireland 13.8 bear the name Murphy, 11.8 the name of Kelly and 9.2 the name of Sullivan. These three names lead all others by a long gap. The somewhat popular notion that the Mc's and the O's stand at the head of the list of Irish surnames is thus disposed of.

FROM MILL TO MILL

Police and Strikers in Paterson, N. J., Had Running Fight.

CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE DONE

Trouble Is With Dye Helpers in Silk Mills, Who Demand Higher Wages—Several Persons Were Severely Injured.

Paterson, N. J., April 24.—Striking dye helpers Wednesday stormed the establishments still running in their trade. They engaged in a series of running fights with the police and plant managers, and in one of the severest clashes exchanged a volley of pistol shots with them. The radicals among the strikers were in command, and hostilities ceased only when they were fighting. Many persons on each side were severely injured during the rioting, but none dangerously so. It was believed for a time that it would be necessary to ask the state for troops to restore order and insure protection to life and property. Judge Dixon called the grand jury and charged them to indict the persons guilty of rioting.

A written demand on the employers for pay was formulated and committees opened negotiations. A large number of strikers were in sullen spirit and some predicted that any attempt on the part of employers to resume would be desperately resisted. When the strikers completed their campaign against the plants in operation the number of men out was found to be nearly 4,000.

The disorder began early in the day and was unexpected. A meeting of strikers was held at 8 o'clock at Rueger's Riverside hall, and 2,000 men gathered at the place. The meeting was orderly and declared for peace, and the men were urged to keep away from the shops. The meeting committees prepared and adopted the following schedule of prices:

"The helpers shall receive 20c per hour and 55 hours shall constitute one week's work. Time and one-half for overtime, 10 hous a day. All machine men and shakers out, dynamite men and box fixers, 22c an hour. Finishers, 24c an hour and no Sunday work. No learners to receive less than 20c an hour. Night men to receive 22c an hour." The old prices per hour were as follows: Helpers, 16½c; machine men, 18¼c; finishers, 22c; learners, 14½c.

While the meeting was in progress hundreds of strikers stood outside the hall angrily discussing their grievances. The radicals urged a raid upon the works still in operation, and when their suggestion was approved headed a rush for the plant of Johnson, Cowdin & Co. The men at work there were called out and the strikers mived on to the establishment of James Simpson & Co. That firm, fearing trouble, dismissed the men and closed its doors. Robert Gaede's works were visited next and after that the Battleford mills were surrounded. The property is walled in, but the strikers gained the yard before the gates were shut. Windows were smashed, chemicals spilled and considerable damage done. The men at work in the plant quickly quit their places. While one mob was closing the Battleford mill another was surging into the plant of the American Silk Dyeing & Finishing Co. Armed with dye sticks and stones, they charged through the plant, driving the men from their places. George Arnold, one of the firm, was dropped insensible with a blow on the head from a dye stick. Almost simultaneously an attack was begun on the works of Emil Geering & Co. in the fight for possession of it the shooting occurred. The policemen were guarding the property and when the mob came rushing down on them they warned those in the van to keep away. Someone discharged a revolver and the police quickly returned the fire. Half a dozen shots were fired, and one striker, who escaped unidentified, was shot in the leg. The mob stoned the two policemen and, when one of the latter arrested one of the leaders, closed in around him. The officers swung their clubs and beat their way out of the crowd. One of the patrolmen finally secured a rifle and when he came out and fired on the crowd with it there was a general scattering.

From Geerings the strikers hurried away toward the property of Knipscher & Maas, but that raid was checked by a squad of police. The latter formed across the street and, marching forward with night sticks drawn, forced the crowd back. Gerald Misteli, a young striker, hurled a rock at the police and was placed under arrest. The crowd tried to rescue him and to the number of several hundred followed the arresting officers to the prison.

Balfour Chided English Educators.

London, April 24.—In distributing the prizes at the Mansion house here Wednesday, in connection with the commercial education scheme of the London chamber of commerce, A. J. Balfour, the government leader in the house of commons, made some plain statements regarding British education shortcomings. He characterized the nation as the most insular ever known and as lagging behind of the other nations of the world, not only in commercial, but in national, education. He said that while Great Britain had taught others lessons in liberty, toleration and free trade, she refused to learn from them that education was sadly needed if Great Britain was to maintain her place, so hardly won, among nations. In the marvelous, complicated phenomena of modern trade, commerce, production and manufacture, there was ample scope for the most scientific minds and the most critical intellects, and if commerce was to be treated from that higher and wider viewpoint it must be approached in the broader spirit of impartial, scientific investigation.

A Peculiar Politician.

"He's a mighty hard man to get along with," said the practical politician sadly. "Mighty hard."

"He seems thoroughly honest."

"Of course he is. That's what makes him so erratic and unsatisfactory. Every once in awhile he insists on doing something simply because he thinks it is right, without waiting to figure out what its effect on his political prospects is liable to be."—Washington Star.

HE PUT IT STRONG

John Hays Hammond, Talks at English Banquet.

ALSO HIT THE AMERICANS

Said Americans Admired the Plucky Fight Made by the Boers and Urged That the Terms of Peace Be Liberal.

London, April 23.—"I must advise you not to pay too much attention to the extravagant expressions of friendship of certain well-meaning, but discredited, class called in America 'anglo-maniacs.'" These words were the keynote of a speech made by John Hays Hammond, the American engineer, last night at a dinner given in honor of Mr. Hammond's return to England.

Mr. Hammond explained to his audience the depth of and reason for American sympathy with the Boers, and he impressed his hearers with Great Britain's total lack of effort to counteract the pro-Boer sentiment in the United States. With equal frankness, Mr. Hammond urged that Great Britain be generous in her demands. "Your American friends," he declared, "most earnestly hope that in arranging terms of peace wise liberality will be shown to the Boers."

Such a statement coming from one who, in the same speech, referred to his imprisonment at Pretoria on account of his anti-Boer tendencies, produced a rather striking effect. The American anglophobes came in for equal criticism with the anglo-maniacs in Mr. Hammond's remarks. "Both of these classes," said Mr. Hammond, "are the flotsam and petsam of the American population. The citizens who compose the important body of our population are the exponents of Americanism in its highest form."

"However much we English and Americans differ from the Boers politically," continued Mr. Hammond, "we are compelled to admire the plucky fight made by the unfortunate and deluded Boers now under arms."

He warned his hearers to learn a lesson from a chapter of the American civil war by avoiding the mistake of the American statesmen, who endeavored to govern the southern states by northern officeholders, as a result of which many years elapsed before the harm done by the "carpet-bagger" was repaired.

Troops Can't Suppress Rebellion.

Victoria, B. C., April 23.—R. W. Little of the North China Herald, who arrived by steamer Empress of China, says the rebellion in Kkang Si is far beyond the power of the government troops to suppress. Marshall Sue had only 4,000 troops to dispatch against them, and it is unlikely that the viceroys of other provinces will aid in the suppression of the rebellion. A strict censorship is now being maintained in Canton and the tendency of the officials is to belittle the rising, the only news of which can be obtained from refugees. The government forces were divided, 1,000 men being sent under Admiral Ching by the river route, and 3,000 under Marshall Sue went overland. These forces, weakened by heavy desertions to the rebels, were defeated and were awaiting reinforcements.

Fined Juror Ten Dollars.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 23.—All of Tuesday in the McGarry case was spent in securing a jury, enormous difficulty being found to secure the necessary number of Kent citizens who had not already formed opinions on the water scandal. A sensation was created in the morning by Judge Newnham, the presiding jurist, who called up John Otte, one of the accepted veniremen, and asked him if he had been reading the papers. Otte admitted that he had, and the judge immediately dismissed him after fining him $10 for contempt of court, as the reading had been expressly prohibited.

Landslide Sunk a Launch.

Muskegon, Mich., April 24.—A big landslide occurred at Slyvan Beach at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, about 30 feet south of the picnic dock. The slide carried the boat house of F. D. Russell of St. Louis, Mo., into White lake. A launch valued at $3,500 was in the boat house and this lies buried in 30 feet of water. The life-saving crew is at work endeavoring to raise the launch.

Crushed Under Falling Doors.

Muskegon, Mich., April 24.—Walter E. Story, chief clerk at the American tin plate mills, was standing by the large iron sliding doors through which a switch engine was passing with some empty cars, when one of the cars caught the door and threw it to the ground, crushing Mr. Story underneath. His condition is critical.

Love Leads to Suicide.

Frankfort, Mich., April 24.—Claude Whitbeck is said to have been infatuated with a young society lady of this city, who offered him little encouragement. Realizing that his suit was hopeless, he swallowed a dose of laudanum, from the effects of which he died.

FUNSTON TALKS TOO MUCH.

President Asks Him to Cease Discussing Public Questions.

Washington, April 24.—By order of the president, Gen. Funston has been directed to cease further discussion of public questions. The president has telegraphed Funston not to speak at the Middlesex banquet in Boston.

Walter Wellman, in the Chicago Record-Herald, says: Members of the cabinet say President Roosevelt has for some time felt annoyance over the free and easy manner in which Gen. Funston was talking, and that he was particularly displeased with the statement credited to the general at Denver a few days ago that "Senator Hoar was suffering from an overheated conscience." In President Roosevelt's opinion this was in bad taste and altogether beyond the proper function of an army officer.

President Roosevelt has also been disturbed by the criticism that he permits Gen. Funston to talk with the utmost freedom, because he stands up for the army end of the Philippine discussion, while he censures Gen. Miles for doing the same thing only on the other side.

Denver, April 24.—To a representative of the Associated Press Gen. Funston said with reference to the statement from Washington that the president had directed him to cease further discussion of public questions, that he had not as yet received any such order from Washington.

Continuing, the general said that in future his public utterances would be free from any reference to the Philippines, and intimating that his speeches as printed were, as a rule, full of misstatements and very badly garbled.

QUIET IN BOTH HOUSES.

Rawlins Spoke in Senate—House Took Up Oleo Bill.

Washington, April 23.—Mr. Rawlins of Utah Wednesday continued his speech in the senate opposing the Philippine temporary government bill. He devoted the greater part of his speech to a discussion of the testimony presented to the Philippines committee relating to the administration of the "water cure" to natives and to other forms of torture inflicted on the Filipinos. He had not concluded his remarks when the senate adjourned.

The house Wednesday began consideration of the senate amendments to the oleomargarine bill. A special rule for this purpose was adopted by a vote of 152 to 79. By the ruling of the chair, the question of further amendment of senate propositions was confined within very narrow limits. Slow progress was made. The opponents of the measure, who sought to modify the senate amendments in various particulars, were out-voted on every proposition submitted.

Improvements Will Cost $150,000.

Washington, April 24.—Architect Charles F. McKim and others during the past few days have been making a thorough examination of the White house. Mr. McKim hopes to be able very soon to submit an estimate of the cost which these changes will entail, which will approximate probably $150,000 and will be provided for in the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Andrews Took Morphine.

Lansing, Mich., April 24.—Rev. J. R. Andrews, of the First Baptist church, against whom a complaint of blackmail was made Tuesday, took about 10 grains of morphine Wednesday with suicidal intent. Prompt action saved his life, but he is still quite ill. Prosecutor Tuttle is taking more testimony in the case, and it was the intention to serve the warrant today.

The Hague, April 24.—It was said last night at Castle Loo that, even without a relapse, Queen Wilhelmina's convalescence would occupy a month or more. Her majesty showed a considerable revival of spirits and interest in her surroundings.

High Pressure Days.

Men and women alike have to work incessantly with brain and hand to hold their own nowadays. Never were the demands of business, the wants of the family, the requirements of society, more numerous. The first effect of the praiseworthy effort to keep up with all these things is commonly seen in a weakened or debilitated condition of the nervous system, which results in dyspepsia, defective nutrition of both body and brain, and in extreme cases in complete nervous prostration. It is clearly seen that what is needed is what will sustain the system, give vigor and tone to the nerves, and keep the digestive and assimilative functions healthy and active. From personal knowledge, we recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for this purpose. It acts on all the vital organs, builds up the whole system, and fits men and women for these high pressure days.

KODAK MAGIC

By David H. Talmadge.

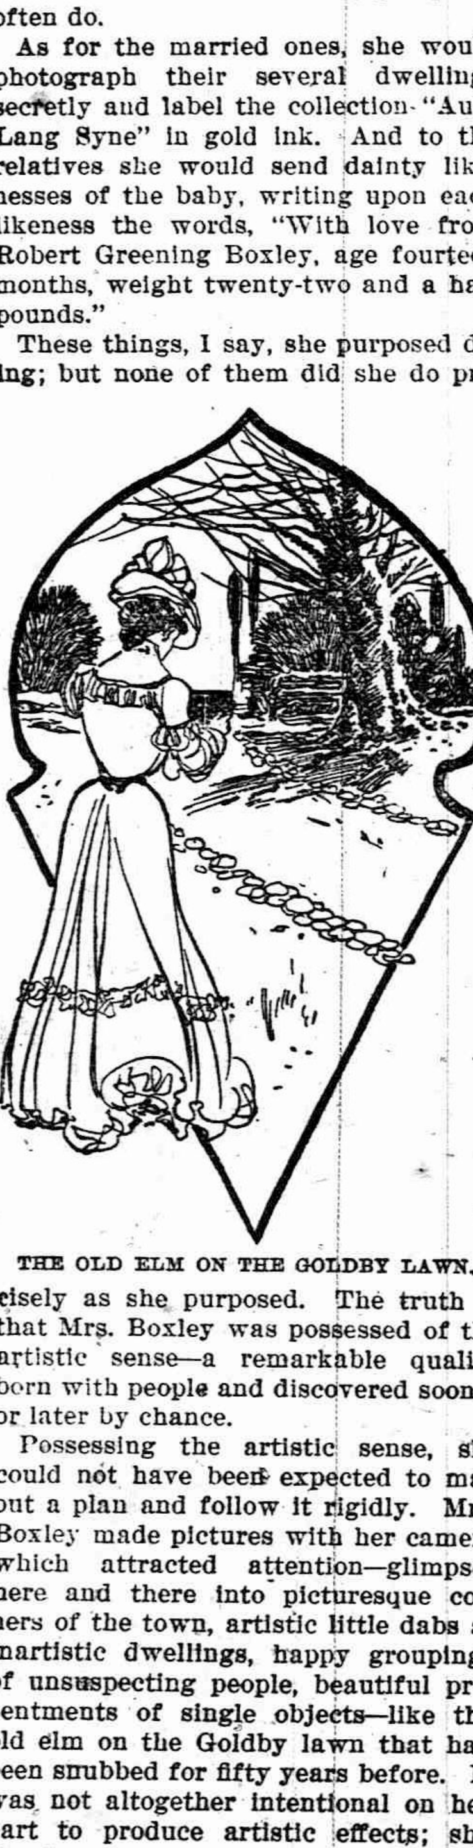
Copyright, 1901, by David H. Talmadge.

In the first place, Mrs. Boxley struggled with herself prayerfully for upward of a week, and finally, as frail mortals usually do, crushed her better judgment and arose triumphant. In the second place—and this is a sequence—she took the money which she had been hoarding for the purpose of buying Christmas presents for her husband and family and purchased with it a camera. Afterward she soothed her conscience by the utterance of vows internal.

She told herself seriously that she would give none but photographic gifts to her friends. She would make a booklet for the girls—her intimate associates before Mr. Boxley had appeared with his little proposal. Some of them were married now, as she was; but others, poor things, were not, and she conceived the idea of sending to these unfortunates a collection of pictures taken in her own modest home, exhibiting Mr. Boxley, in slippers and smoking jacket; with the baby, sans vetement, juggling a cake of soap; the dining room, with her cut glass and silver upon the board, and the baby in his high chair shaking a spoon at his smiling father; the kitchen, with its glistening range, and the baby sitting up beside it warming his tiny feet, and her own bedchamber—a dream in white—with the baby kicking and crowing upon the bed. If these offerings caused the recipients to turn green with envy, so much the better. Most of them had expressed sentiments derogatory to marriage, as unmarried women without prospects often do.

As for the married ones, she would photograph their several dwellings secretly and label the collection "Auld Lang Syne" in gold ink. And to the relatives she would send dainty likenesses of the baby, writing upon each likeness the words, "With love from Robert Greening Boxley, age fourteen months, weight twenty-two and a half pounds."

These things, I say, she purposed doing; but none of them did she do precisely as she purposed. The truth is that Mrs. Boxley was possessed of the artistic sense—a remarkable quality born with people and discovered sooner or later by chance.



THE OLD ELM ON THE GOLDBY LAWN.

Possessing the artistic sense, she could not have been expected to map out a plan and follow it rigidly. Mrs. Boxley made pictures with her camera which attracted attention—glimpses here and there into picturesque corners of the town, artistic little dabs at inartistic dwellings, happy groupings of unsuspecting people, beautiful presentments of single objects—like the old elm on the Goldby lawn that had been snubbed for fifty years before. It was not altogether intentional on her part to produce artistic effects; she simply saw things from the artistic point of view; there was no special strain upon her eyes.

Thus it came to pass that her friends—bent, most of them, on the object of getting something at a price far below the market—lavished praise upon her and hinted with mealy mouths at the gratification they would experience were she to run over some day and just take a snap at their houses or their babies or this, that and the other; which hints she understood perfectly and proceeded to turn to practical account. She gathered from the gabbling of these friends that what each of them most desired was a photograph to send to some one at Christmas time; a photograph, or a collection of photographs if the price were not too high, which would give Maud or Minnie or Marion an idea of the lovely village in which they lived.

Then it was that Mrs. Boxley, perceiving the demand, set herself to work upon the task of supplying it. Her idea was to cater to all the hints at one fell swoop. And the result was the famous "Blue Book," a collection of twenty photographs in blue print, mounted upon excellent paper, bound in fancy blue covers and tied with blue satin ribbon. These books she sold, actually sold, at $1.25 for each copy. The call for them was such that she was unable to prepare gifts for her own absent friends. She worked like a toy steam engine (Mr. Boxley's somewhat satirical simile) to the very day before Christmas, and then she cast up accounts.

She had hoped, even in her most sanguine moments, to make no more than $25 from the venture—the price she had paid so guiltily for her camera. But the figures showed—and she gasped a bit when the columns were added—that precisely sixty-nine books had been disposed of and that she had suddenly become possessed of the stupendous sum of $82.25, of which $70 was profit. Her conscience passed at that moment into the calmest and most delightful slumber. She kissed the baby rapturously, and, Mr. Boxley arriving home at that instant, she kissed him also and scattered tears of joy adown his shirt front.

"Dear me!" exclaimed Mr. Boxley, returning the endearment perfunctorily. "What has happened?"

Mrs. Boxley had indulged in no such demonstrations for a number of weeks, having been too fully engrossed with other matters; consequently Mr. Boxley had fallen into the habit of expecting nothing of the sort. He returned the kiss in a half hearted, chilling way, because he felt that it was not compatible with his dignity to conduct himself like a boy who has come, after a period of undeserved punishment, into favor again.

"What has happened?" he repeated.

"Eighty-two dollars and twenty-five cents!" replied his wife, withdrawing her arms from about his neck. He looked at her with an admiration he could not repress, and took from his pocket a letter.

"It is from Tom Elliott," he said in explanation, dropping into a chair and drawing her to his side. "He is coming back to spend the holidays, and he says he is so happy that he cannot describe it. You see, dear, some one sent him one of your books, and it seems to have dispelled the gloom that has been upon him since he left here. He is quite himself again, he says, the same man that he was before—before—well, you know how Madge treated him. It was"—

"Yes, I know," Mrs. Boxley sighed. "They were both to blame; but I do think, dear, that your sister was more at fault than Tom. After the quarrel—when he had left her, telling her that if she wished him to come to her again she should place a bouquet of roses in the landscape window—Madge might have saved herself and him much sorrow. It all rested with her then. But she would not give in, and the roses were not placed in the window, and poor Tom went away never to return, and it was more than two years ago, and—and I am so glad! What else does he say, dear?"

Mr. Boxley slowly unfolded the letter. "He says," he replied, "that in the picture—the picture of the house in your book, heaven bless it!—he notices a bunch of roses. They are in the landscape window, where he told Madge to place them. He thinks they mean that he will be welcome—and he is coming, that is all. But do you think, dear, that Madge was actuated by sentiment when she placed them there, or did it just happen? Will she—will she"—

"She will," said Mrs. Boxley with conviction. "She has been very miserable; she told me so. But, dear, she has not given in. Tom will come, and she will think it is he who has taken the first step toward reconciliation. They will be married, and then—and then they will get over their foolishness, I hope."

"She has not given in?" Mr. Boxley's eyes opened in amazement. "Didn't she place the roses in the window?"

"No, dear." Mrs. Boxley gave utterance to a nervous little laugh, half a sob. "Madge was not at home the day I took the picture, and—and I placed the roses in the window myself. And—and it was I who sent Tom the book."

Mr. Boxley whistled. Then he kissed the artist and looked into her eyes.

"And to think," he said, "that I have held your camera in contempt for all these weeks! Consider me, dear, from henceforth your most humble servitor. Consider me—er—squelched!"

"I do, love," said Mrs. Boxley sweetly.

And then she danced away to the kitchen, while Mr. Boxley took the baby upon his lap and mentally commented, with much satisfaction, upon the resemblance borne by the diminutive chap to his mother.

His Best.

The late Sir John Stainer, one of England's most celebrated musicians and composers, was once staying in a small Swiss village, and the English clergyman was on the outlook for a musician to assist at the service.

Stainer was in the office of the hotel when the clergyman found him and started the conversation with "Do you play the harmonium?"

"A little," was the reply of the former organist of St. Paul's cathedral.

"Will you, then, be good enough to help us out of our difficulty on Sunday? We will read the Psalms, and the hymns shall be the simplest I can select," added the delighted parson.

"I will do my best," said Stainer, with a smile.

The service proceeded satisfactorily, but the congregation at the close listened to a brilliant recital. When the parson heard the name of his assistant, he asked him to dinner. "Do you smoke?" he asked at the close.

"I will do my best," responded Stainer, and the ensuing laughter was the prologue of an entertaining exchange of Oxford reminiscences.

The Bridal Veil.

The wearing of the bridal veil was an old Anglo-Saxon custom, the veil being held over both bride and groom. The wearing of white is likewise an old custom and one that prevails in many countries, even including far Japan. Neither is there anything of modern origin in use of wedding favors and wedding cake or having bridesmaids, all these customs having the sanction of long usage.

An Accommodating Negro.

A story is told of a priest's experience in a small New England town. The clergyman was just about to retire for the night when he heard a knock at his door. He called "Come in," and a negro presented himself and said rather shamefacedly:

"Father, there is a girl outside. May I bring her in?"

Assent having been given, he disappeared for a moment and returned with a white woman and informed the scandalized priest that they wished to be married.

He was shown the door with promptness, and the girl was severely admonished on the course she was pursuing.

Fifteen minutes later there was another knock, and on opening the door the priest found himself again face to face with the would be colored bridegroom.

With great indignation, the priest said:

"I thought I sent you about your business before!"

The darky paralyzed him with this reply:

"Yes, I know you did, Father James, but Mary and I have talked it over, and we thought maybe you would look at the matter differently if you knew I was willing to turn Irish."—New York Times.

A Hard Law.

A traveler getting outside of St. Petersburg discovered when he tried to re-enter the city that he had left his passport in the bedroom of his hotel. The guards refused to let him pass and refused to send for the passport. "According to you," said he, "the only thing for me to do is to throw myself in the Neva."

"No," said the sentry, "suicide in Russia is strictly against the law."

Her Point of View.

Mrs. Hiram Offen—How long were you in your last place?

Applicant—Oi was there just a month, ma'am.

Mrs. Hiram Offen—A month? What was the trouble?

Applicant—The trouble was, ma'am, that I was took sick, an' Oi couldn't get away anny sooner.—Philadelphia Press.

Curran and Sir Boyle Roche.

Sir Boyle Roche, a famous Irish character of a century ago, was proud of his alliance with an English family of ancient lineage and was fond of referring to his titled father-in-law's kindness in giving him his eldest daughter, a boast which provoked Curran's retort, "Aye, Sir Boyle, and, depend on it, if he had had an older one he would have given her to you."

Whether it was this sarcasm which provoked Sir Boyle's hostility or that an enmity had already been created between Roche and Curran, it is certain that the two men were perpetually sparring at each other in the house of commons, as the debates of the Irish parliament testify.

Nor was the witty advocate and orator always successful in these encounters. Curran had observed one night, somewhat magniloquently, that he needed aid from no one and could be "the guardian of his own honor," whereupon Sir Boyle instantly interjected his sarcastic congratulations to the honorable member on his possession of a sinecure.

Babies and Monkeys.

A frequent action with babies is to turn the soles of the feet sideways, opposite to one another, while the legs remain straight. Just this attitude would be assumed by a monkey when climbing a tree or walking on a branch in order to grasp the stem with its hind legs.

The inherited effects of thus grasping tree trunks or limbs with the hind hands are often very marked in young babies. The bow legs, which are a feature of infancy and a matter of some anxiety to mothers, are no more than the relics of the tree climbing stage, and the mother need not be frightened about this character; any normally healthy baby will grow out of it soon enough.

Then, if a young baby be held so that its feet touch the ground, one may see that the feet are not put flat to the surface. Instead, the outer portions of the feet rest on the ground, while the soles of the feet are more or less opposed to one another; they have the bough grasping attitude.—Pearson's Magazine.

Old English Police Tax.

The chief authorities of towns in past ages incurred much responsibility. At Ripon we have a good example of their liabilities. Here formerly, after the blowing of a horn at 9 o'clock at night and until sunrise next morning, if a house were robbed and the owner and his servants had taken proper precautions for its safety, the wakeman had to make good the loss sustained. Each householder paid an annual tax of twopence if he had one door and fourpence if he had two doors to his dwelling for maintaining a watch over the city. The tax has long since been discontinued, but the horn is still blown at night.

Lashed For His Discovery.

According to an old document discovered some time ago in Australia, gold was first found by a convict near Paramatta in 1789. The unfortunate fellow was at once charged with having stolen a watch and "boiled it down" and, being convicted by the rude court of those early days, was given 150 lashes for his pains. In later years the record of this incident was closely examined by an undoubtedly competent authority, who was quite convinced of the genuineness of the convict's story.

A Matter of History.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, popularly known as "The St. Paul road," began the use of electricity for train lighting in 1888. In that and many ways it has been a pioneer in the adoption of comforts for the traveler. In building the world famous Pioneer Limited trains a mark was set in luxury and beauty of cars that has never been equalled, and probably never will be.

Lower Rate Excursion to California.

During the coming summer frequent opportunities will be offered by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway to visit California at the lowest round trip rates ever offered with choice of routes from Chicago via Kansas City, Omaha or St. Paul, or going and returning via different routes. Electric lighted trains. Route of the Pioneer Limited. Famous Train of the world. Write for full information to F. A. Miller, General Passenger Agent, Chicago.

Travel Like Princes.

Those who saw the special train in which H. R. A. Prince Henry of Prussia made his tour of the United States are comparing it with other trains in regular service, and it is admitted that none of the cars in the train compare favorably with the buffet, compartment and standard sleeping cars of the Pioneer Limited trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway in daily service between Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis. The people of this country have the satisfaction of knowing that at any time they cannot only travel like princes, but can get much better service.

Very Low Rates to the Northwest

March 1 to April 30, 1902, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway will sell tickets to Montana, Idaho and North Pacific coast points at the following greatly reduced rates: From Chicago to Butte, Helena and Anaconda, $30.00; Spokane, $30.50; Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, Victoria and VanCouver, $33.50. Choice of routes via Omaha or St. Paul to points in Montana, Oregon and Washington. For further information apply to any coupon ticket agent in the United States or Canada or address Robt C. Jones, Michigan Passenger Agent, Detroit, Mich.

Press Committee of the Michigan Club meet in Detroit May 31.

In securing General Wood for one of the chief orators at the Michigan Club banquet to be held at Detroit on May 31, the officers of that organization have displayed undoubted wisdom and forethought. No living man is better qualified to discuss Cuban affairs than General Wood and no state in the Union is more thoroughly interested in the development of Cuba than Michigan.

The culture of the sugar beet and the production of sugar has attained such an importance in this state as to make it the only formidable rival of the immense sugar fields of Cuba, and General Wood is just the man to enlighten the Michigan producers, not only on the past development of the industry in Cuba but as to the future of the Island, and its capabilities as well.

Considerable interest will also be manifested in President Roosevelt's new Secretary of the Navy, Hon. William Henry Moody, who is to be one of the cheif orators at the banquet.

Of the congressional stars who are to appear at the banquet the palm will undoubtedly be conceded to Hon. James E. Watson, of Indiana, from the fact that he is the Republican leader in the present Congress. As an orator he figures in the first column.

The Club dues this year have been fixed at $2.00 for Republicans in Michigan outside of Wayne County, which also includes tickets for the banquet. Application blanks can be had by addressing the Secretary at Detroit.

LITERARY NOTES

A notable contribution to the May issue of The Critic will be the first of a series of literary cau-series by Mr. Frank Norris, the novelist. These papers will under the caption of "Salt and Sincerity," run through several numbers, and will deal in frank fashion with current phases of life and letters.

* * *

A series which should have been named "The Enchantments of our Modern Aladdins," if considered solely from the point of view of romance, is begun in the May Cosmopolitan. But these sketches possess as well a business interest equally for clerk and capitalist, for manufacturer, farmer and merchant. The man who would understand the drift of our news in finance and business must read these lives, so full of incident, of chance, of hard labor and marvelous success.

James Weir Will Go To South Africa.

Relatives of James Weir, the young man who enlisted in Windsor a few days ago for the new Canadian contingent, which is going to South Africa, came over to Windsor this morning to protest against his going to the Transvaal. They told Lieut. Col. Guillot that James was under age, and that his mother was almost crazed with grief over his enlisting. He is her only support. When he enlisted he gave his home as St. Thomas, Ont. His mother lives at Tecumseh Mich.

Weir argued that his mother was reconciled to his becoming a member of the contingent and the colonel decided to allow him to remain in the ranks. He left this afternoon for London, Ont., where he will join the other Windsor boys.—Detroit Journal.

James Weir is the young man who sang so nicely at the Masonic banquet in Tecumseh some weeks since. He is the son of Mrs. Jennie Weir, of Tecumseh, and she is nearly crazed at his going away. As a matter of fact she never gave her consent to his going and is in need of his help to assist her. This is another example of the terrible things that are daily happening during the Boer war.

A CROWDED HOUSE

Greeted the Presentation of the

LADIES MINSTRELS

Given by the Ladies of St Peter's Guild.

Great anxiety was expressed by the audience before the curtain arose upon the first part of the Ladies' Minstrels, but the suspense was at last broken by the curtain rising upon the opening chorus, entitled "Honey dat I love so well," which included thirty voices, Mrs. Jos. Crosby as Miss Washington acted as interlocutor. Miss Angelina Snowball and Miss Tillie Johnsing, better known to the people of Tecumseh as Mrs. Martin Zimmerman and Mrs. D. H. C. Bowen presided over the tambos, while Miss Bitter Sweet assisted by Miss Clarissa Waggin otherwise known as Mrs. Hodges and Miss McKenna, made things merry by rattling the bones.

Miss Lula Lonely, recognized by many as Miss Mabel Lillie, of Detroit, sang a coon song entitled "The wedding of the Chinee and the Coon" after which Mrs. A. W. Mills, as Miss Asor Slim rendered a soprano solo entitled "Whisper."

Many witty sayings were introduced which provoked laughter at the expense of many persons present. The program was continued by Miss Angelina Snowball singing the selection "The Educated Coon," Miss Peachblow Pink, known to her Tecumseh friends as Mrs. F. H. Lynam, rendering the song entitled "Little Cotton Dolly."

Although color is very deceiving, it failed to accomplish its purpose when Miss Clarissa Waggin was introduced to sing "The Midnight Sun." a little voice was heard to say "why, don't you know her, of course you do, that's our music teacher, Miss McKenna."

Zamona, a vocal solo, was tendered by Miss Appleblossom Snow, or rather Miss Floy Freeman, after which the following selections were rendered, Mammies Little Pumpkin Coon by Miss Ruby Highup, (Miss Edith Corey); Seperation, by Miss Shortly Cummin (Miss Metta McKinney) and Ways to Catch a Man, participated in by the Misses Ruby Highup, Appleblossom Snow, Chloe Wayback, Lize Jones and Lucinda Brown, the advice was, no doubt, greatly appreciated by many present and it will surprise their friends greatly to know the participants were Misses Edith Corey, Floy Freeman, Ethel Slayton, Lena Smith and Edith Magers.

Miss Pheobe Hobbs, recognized by a few as Mrs. Cleo Hall, held the attention of the audience by detailing a thrilling account of how the deacon was influenced to steal the squires chicken, and as is usually the case a woman was at the bottom of it all.

Miss Lucinda Brown referred to above as Miss Edith Magers rendered a vocal solo entitled, Sing me a song of the Sunny South, in which the full chorus joined. This concluded part I.

The second part of the program consisted of specialties, Misses Mable and Stella Lillie, of Detroit, after being called back from singing O! What a Shame, preceeded to get their 'feet on the sand' or rather clog.

Sixteen little girls, dressed as Pickaninnies executed a very clever Cake Walk, also rendering the following: a song by Bessie Poole; song, Bunny Sisson, Hazel Zimmerman; clogging, Stella Lillie; song, Margaret Freeman song, Michaline Heins assisted by her doll; clogging and song by Mable and Stella Lillie.

The curtain now descended and for part III people now patiently waited, this was nothing less than the original Aunt Dinah (Mrs. H. E. Stout) and her quilting club, following is the program the club rendered. 1—Paper, De Propagation and Perigrination of De Colored Race by Mrs. Fred Douglas, Mrs. John Hicks surprising greatly her many friends.

2—Song. Dem Golden Slippers by Mrs. T. Harris as Mrs. Booker T. Washington. 3—Paper, Does riches make happiness or does she not? in which Mrs. Cleo Hall as Dr. Sarah Howe Morris presented the question in such a light as to do away, without doubt, the opinion of riches bringing happiness, Aunt Dinah's many conditions were summed up showing how she was enjoying life, without riches.

Miss Minnie Corey as critic and Mrs. E. Pritchard as Mrs. Hon. Recollection T. Johnsing were the concluding features of the Club program.

The new Tecumseh band comprising nine members made the time breezy by doing a great amount of blowing upon wind instruments. One more feature remained upon the program this was the "Finale" by Miss Clarissa Waggin assisted by the full chorus "My Hannah Lady" and "Swaunee River" being the renditions.

The evening's entertainment was greatly enjoyed by the many people present and great credit should be given the ladies of St. Peter's Guild for the excellent manner in which the program was conducted. In all about 54 persons took part. The gross receipts were $150.

BROKE HIS LEG

While Loading a Car at the D. T. & M. road yesterday morning

GEO. BENEWAY

Had the misfortune to break his leg.

About nine o'clock yesterday morning while Geo. Beneway, the teamster for Hayden Milling Co., was loading a car of flour at the water works siding of the D. T. & M. track, the team started and in attempting to stop the team he slipped, fell from the wagon and broke his leg.

Whether a barrel of flour fell upon his leg is not known, but it was fractured twice between the knee and ankle and in so frightful a shape that before noon an amputation was necessary, about six inches of the limb below the knee was saved, Dr. Bunnell, assisted by Drs. Catlin and Maddox, preformed the operation and at present writing the patient is doing well.

There is not a man, woman or child in Tecumseh but has the deepest sympathy for Geo. Beneway in his terrible affliction. Everyone respects and cares for him and it all came so suddenly that no one can realize how serious is his loss.

He has worked for the Hayden Milling Co. since it was organized and for Wm. Hayden for years before that. A better natured and more cheerfu man never lived and it is genuine sorrow that is expressed for him by everyone now.

A Doctor's Bad Plight.

"Two years ago, as a result of a severe cold, I lost my voice," writes Dr. M. L. Scarbrough, of Hebron, Ohio, "then began an obstinate cough. Every remedy known to me as a practicing physician for 35 years, failed and I daily grew worse. Being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, I found quick relief, and for the last ten days have felt better than for two years." Positively guaranteed for throat and lung troubles by C. A. Wright, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

CLAY JOHNSON

CINCINNATI, OHIO

His Friends glad to hear of his good success.

It is only about six months ago that our old friend, Col. Johnson, with his wife and dependents left Tecumseh. For years he was always here, a general character in the town and a regular thoroughbred horse trader. Of course, the "Col." did not deal in the highest priced horses but his deals were many and in every case the "boot" was paid by the other fellow. In his way the Colonel was quite a chap, he drank very little and with his horse trades and dickers managed to make nearly a living, in fact he was not half a bad fellow and lived for many years in quiet comfort here.

Peter Johnson, his son, was not as provident as his father, got quite in a habit of indulging in intoxicating liquors, blacked some stoves and if the truth was known about Peter it could be said that he was simply good for nothing.

There was another brother, Alfred. He was not seen much in Tecumseh, was a blacksmith, lived in the state of New York and had the reputation of being a very strong man, was a great fighter. In fact two or three years ago came to Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor and was billed for a prize fight. The fight did not come off, either Johnson or the other man would not fight and Peter and the crowd came back to Tecumseh thoroughly disgusted to say the least.

But the youngest boy of the family was Clay and it is about him that this little story is written. He commenced as a "Kid" for C. F. Patterson in the Lilley House, was porter and bell boy. Got started in the right way, and at the present time is a man, yes, a man in every sense of the word.

For a number of years he traveled for a drug house, but a few years ago commenced with the Crystal Soap company, of Cincinnati, O., and is to-day one of their best men. Is earning good money, takes good care of it, assists his mother, who with the assistance of the "Col." is running a boarding house in Toledo, and bids well to be some day "well off" and is at the present time a well respected citizen, a credit to friends, relatives and employers. The HERALD is pleased to say good words for Clay and without laying a straw in the way of the others in the family hope they may take courage from Clay's example and pattern after him. In fact, hope he may sell more soap than any other man in the world and clean up the whole Johnson relation.

A WOMAN'S BACK.

The Aches and Pains will Disappear if the Advice of this Tecumseh Citizen is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains.

Most of the time it is the kidneys' fault.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. E. D. Fryer. who lives in the northwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I suffered from my kidneys off and on for about two years. During an attack the pain was worse along in the afternoon and I often felt like giving up but I kept on working in misery, for stooping or straightening made my back feel as if it were breaking in two. If I took a slight cold it always settled in my back and in spite of all the remedies I used I could not get relief. Procuring Doan's Kidney Pills at C. A. Wright's drug store I took a course of the treatment. It did more good than all the other medicine I ever used. The pain in my back was quickly relieved. I take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills at every opportunity.

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Don't trust too much in Providence. Remember that Providence has a great deal of territory to cover.

"I had a running, itching sore on my leg. Suffered tortures. Doan's Ointment took away the burning and itching instantly and quickly effected permanent cure." C. W. Lenhart, Bowling Green, O.

Family pride is a queer thing; it may make us look down on some members of the family.

"Cure the cold and save the life." Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup cures coughs and colds, down to the very verge of consumption.

Congress Waters.

United States senators are supplied with bottled mineral waters at government expense. Nearly every committee room has something like a bar attachment. It is usually in one corner, behind a screen and next to the washbowl. The bottles of fizz water are supplied by colored messengers, who bring them in buckets of ice, like champagne. The excuse for the expense is the poor quality of the Potomac water. After a rain it is dark brown in color and impregnated with soil.

The Editor Turns.

The youthful author pocketed his rejected verses, but he could not swallow the editor's criticism.

"Sir," said he, not without dignity, "a poet is born, not made."

"Young man," returned the editor blandly, "it won't help your case to try to shift the blame on to your parents."

As James Russell Lowell said, "There's a deal o' solid kicking in the meekest looking mule."

No Taste For Mathematics.

"How many times did you vote in the recent election?"

The prisoner was silent.

"Answer the question! How many times did you vote?"

"Marse Tom," pleaded the prisoner, addressing the judge, "ain't you know me long enough ter know dat I don't know nuttin' 'tall 'bout 'rithmetics?"—Atlanta Constitution.

OF PUBLIC INTEREST

To Know the Cure for any form of nervousness needs but to read the following.

Mrs. J. F. Burtch of Tecumseh, Mich. says: "I was troubled with severe nervousness and nervous headaches. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and now after using two boxes I can say my nerves are steadied and my head does not trouble me. I think the pills a splendid medicine."

Preferred Death to Coughing.

Bay City, Mich., April 23.—The body of Julius Royce was taken from the river at the foot of Thirteenth street Tuesday morning. Royce had been living with his sister, Mrs. C. W. Parish, for about two months. Recently he had suffered from stomach trouble and a severe cough. Mrs. Parish is ill, and on Monday night her daughter requested Royce to do something for his cold, in order that the coughing might not disturb her mother. "I'll not bother you after tomorrow," Royce said. In the morning Royce was beating carpets in the back yard. Three hours later his body was found floating in the river.

Night Prowlers Sandbagged Him.

Three Rivers, Mich., April 23.—Harvey Burrows, a young man of this city, saw some night prowlers about the home of Charles Knapp, a friend whom he was visiting near this city. There were two of them, but Burrows valorously took after them and chased them into the woods. Here he lost track of them and started to return, when he received a blow from a sandbag on the back of the head, his assailant having been hidden in the shadow of a tree. Both men then jumped on him and nearly killed him.

Said Tramps Hacked Her Throat.

Pontiac, Mich., April 23.—Mrs. Jas. Bethune was found by her husband Tuesday noon lying on a couch in their home with her throat badly hacked. Mrs. Bethune stated that three tramps came to the door and one of them jumped at her, threw her to the floor and sawed away at her throat with a case knife. The officers believe that Mrs. Bethune attempted suicide, as there were no evidences of a struggle. The only blood spots to be found in the room are near the sink. The woman will recover.

Fire Burned Up Lumber.

Muskegon, Mich., April 23.—About noon Tuesday a spark from a passing locomotive set fire to Mann, Watson & Co.'s extensive lumber yard. A million feet of lumber was destroyed, entailing a loss of $15,000; insured for $12,000. A strong wind blowing toward the lake saved the Muskegon Brewing Co.'s plant and other mills from destruction. Dow & Gamble's dock was also damaged. At one time the situation was so threatening that aid was asked and received from Grand Rapids.

Struck Him With Manure Fork.

Manistee, Mich., April 23.—As a result of a neighbors' quarrel, Otto Bauchan lies at death's door and William Schultz is in jail. Schultz struck Bauchan with a manure fork, splitting the skin on his skull for several inches and rendering him unconscious, in which state he has remained for the past 24 hours. Schultz is being held pending a change in Bauchan's condition. If the latter dies, the prisoner will have to answer to a charge of manslaughter.

Had a Bloody Drinking Spree.

Port Huron, Mich., April 23.—Mrs. John Johnson, alias Mrs. Cousins, is at the hospital with a bad wound in her head and Alphone Latart is under arrest. Latart was the last person to leave the house, where he and Mrs. Cousins had been drinking heavily. The neighbors found Mrs. Cousins on the floor with blood flowing from a bad wound in her head. James Brandymore was with Latart and officers are now looking for him. It is thought that Mrs. Cousins will recover.

"A neighbor ran in with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy when my son was suffering with severe cramps and was given up as beyond hope by my regular physician, who stands high in his profession. After administering three doses of it, my son regained consciousness and recovered entirely within twenty-four hours," says Mrs. Mary Haller, of Mt. Crawford, Va. This remedy is for sale by J. J. REVISING A PROVERB.

Whom the Gods Love Die Not Young, but In Old Age.

Wisdom aspires to age, while the shallow dread its finger marks, half conscious that their weak minds would sink into senility beneath the burden of years. Pæans of praise are paid to youth in forgetfulness of the fact that only the aged can contrast the varying phases of consciousness during the different decades of a century of life. Verily it was a wise poet who sang:

"Whom the gods love die young?" Nay; rather say,
With bated breath, "Whom the gods love die old."
Shall the morn pale ere it hath coined its gold,
The sun go down while yet it is full day,
The statue sleep unmolded in the clay,
The parchment crumble ere it is unrolled,
The story end with half the tale untold,
The song drop mute and breathless by the way?

Nay, nay, nay. Broken lives are surely not the perfected human product of God's great plan. The prophets of the remotest recorded time, the grandeur of whose thought has been the theme of preachers and writers for thousands of years, lived to ages which seem miraculous to moderns. The man who grows old grandly, with grace and good nature, really retains his youth.—Troy Press.

Poorly?

"For two years I suffered terribly from dyspepsia, with great depression, and was always feeling poorly. I then tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and in one week I was a new man."—John McDonald, Philadelphia, Pa.

Don't forget that it's "Ayer's" Sarsaparilla that will make you strong and hopeful. Don't waste your time and money by trying some other kind. Use the old, tested, tried, and true Ayer's Sarsaparilla. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Ask your doctor what he thinks of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He knows all about this grand old family medicine. Follow his advice and we will be satisfied.

Good for Rheumatism.

Last fall I was taken with a very severe attack of muscular rheumatism which caused me great pain and annoyance. After trying several prescriptions and rheumatic cures, I decided to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which I had seen advertised in the South Jerseyman. After two applications of this remedy I was much better, and after using one bottle, was completely cured.—Sallie Harris, Salem, N. J. For sale by J. J. Orr.

New World to Kemp.

Detroit, Mich., April 24.—Robinson Kemp, the aged prisoner at the house of correction, who is at last pardoned by President Roosevelt, has been 16 years in prison. He does not say much about his past life, nor does he go into the details of the murder for which he was sentenced to death on the gallows, which through the clemency of President Grover Cleveland was commuted to life imprisonment. His mother was a Choctaw squaw, his father a white man. He says he is going back to his old farm near Dallas, Tex. Kemp says he has never seen a trolley car, a bicycle or an automobile; the world will all be new to him, he added, but he has been improving his time in prison and has read many books. He now writes English pretty well, besides reading and writing four tribal languages. He formed a lasting love for Supt. McDonell and said a good word for the house of correction and its superintendent.

K. P.'s Had a Gay Time.

Traverse City, Mich., April 24.—Hundreds of Knights of Pythias from all over northern Michigan participated last night in the installation of Lalla Rooke temple, D. O. K. K. The ceremonies were in charge of Divan Kaaba temple of Grand Rapids. They were held in Steinberg's opera house, and were followed by an elaborate banquet, covers being laid for 400. It was the biggest fraternal event ever held in northern Michigan. An elaborate street parade preceded the secret ceremonies, at which a class of 250 was initiated. When the Grand Rapids' delegation arrived with Past Imperial Prince Leo A. Caro, he was arrested, handcuffed and carried through the main streets in a patrol wagon before being discharged at the hotel. He had wired the local managers to have the patrol ready, and they obeyed orders.

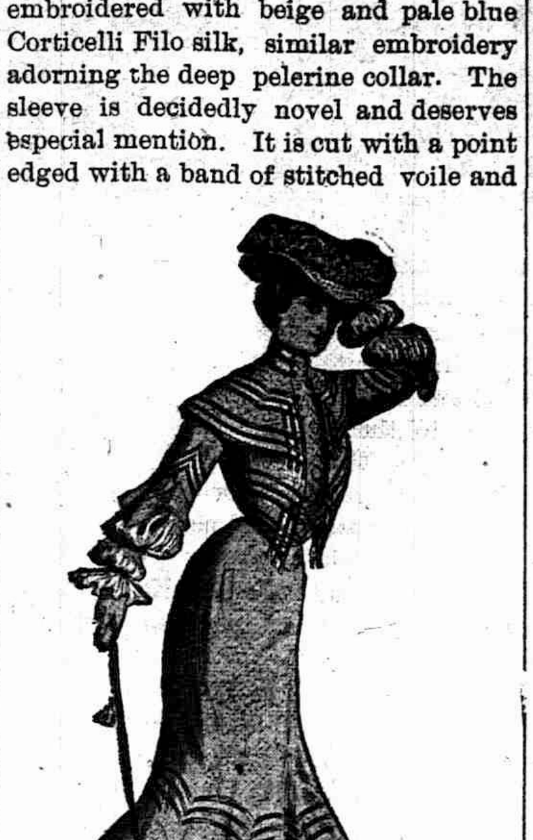
People who are subject to catarrhal ailments have special need to be particular in regard to their feet covering. They should see to it that their feet are comfortably clad, their shoes should have substantial soles and should come well up the ankles and not be laced or buttoned tight. Light merino stockings or half hose may be sufficient for warmth, but whenever by reason of much exercise the feet have become damp, and especially if the leather has absorbed wet, it is wise for a change to be made in both stockings and shoes.

Stylish Spring Costumes

THE PROPER STYLE OF SKIRTS.

A Decidedly Novel Sleeve.

This gown combines all the new features of the current mode. The Eton has loose front that open over a vest embroidered with beige and pale blue Corticelli Filo silk, similar embroidery adorning the deep pelerine collar. The sleeve is decidedly novel and deserves especial mention. It is cut with a point edged with a band of stitched voile and is completed with a kind of under sleeve of cream liberty silk formed into puffs with straps of beige velvet. Beige velvet ribbon in a darker shade adorns both the jacket and skirt. The latter shows the fashionable sheath effect and in addition to the velvet a trimming of straps in inverted scollops stitched with Corticelli silk.



The new skirts are fitted closely at the hips but flare very much indeed below the knees. A great many skirts with hip yokes are shown, either of shirring, tucking or tiny bands, joined with a fancy open stitch. Some very attractive skirt models in sheer materials are laid in narrow box-plaits from the waist to the knees and below that there is a prettily shaped flounce, with insertions of cream lace and a garniture of narrow gathered ribbon.

This is not a gentle word—but when you think how liable you are not to purchase for 75c the only remedy universally known and a remedy that has had the largest sale of any medicine in the world since 1868 for the cure and treatment of Consumption and Throat and Lung troubles without losing its great popularity all these years, you will be thankful we called your attention to Boschee's German Syrup. There are so many ordinary cough remedies made by druggists and others that are cheap and good for light colds perhaps but for severe Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup—and especially for Consumption, where there is difficult expectoration and coughing during the nights and mornings, there is nothing like German Syrup, Sold by all druggist in the civilized world. Useful Men.

A well known Philadelphia society woman said the other day:

"I have come to separate the men of my acquaintance into three classes. There are the dancing men, the dinner men and the corner men, and each has his own place on my list. For instance, I would never think of depending upon dancing men for a dinner. The dancing man is generally callow, and he doesn't know much else besides dancing. On the other hand, the dinner man seldom dances, but he is a good talker, is superficially informed upon the lighter topics of the day—the opera, drama, the latest novels—and can more than hold up his end. He doesn't allow conversation to lag, and consequently he is an important factor at a dinner. Men will accept dinner invitations quicker than invitations of other kinds, but don't think from this that they are all dinner men. Far from it.

"The corner man? Oh, he is the one who has the knack of making himself generally useful and is quite in a class by himself. He looks after the comfort of the chaperons, runs handy little errands and can even be depended upon at afternoon teas. The other men don't think much of him, but he has his own value from the feminine point of view."—Philadelphia Record.

COLD IN DEATH

Hon. J. Sterling Morton Passed Away Sunday.

FORMER SEC. OF AGRICULTURE

Was a Member of Cleveland's Cabinet—Died On His 70th Birthday Anniversary—Remains Will Be Buried Tuesday at Nebraska City, Neb.

Chicago, April 28.—Hon. J. Sterling Morton, former secretary of agriculture, died at 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon at Lake Forest, at the home of his son, Mark Morton. For several weeks Mr. Morton had been gradually failing. A week ago he was brought from his home at Nebraska City, Neb., to Lake Forest, for medical attendance. The change brought no improvement and he failed gradually until death came.

The interment will be at Nebraska City. A special train, bearing the remains of Mr. Morton and members of his family and friends will leave Lake Forest at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon for Nebraska City.

Nebraska City, Neb., April 28.—The illness of Secretary Morton dates from last November, when he contracted a severe cold while speaking at the stock show in Chicago. The cold ran into an attack of the grip, and Mr. Morton was in a hospital for some time. When he was able to do so, he returned to his home in this city, where he suffered a relapse. After a partial recovery he left, early in March, for the City of Mexico, expecting to regain his health. During his stay in the south a disease of the bronchial arteries developed, and he returned north. He suffered severely on the return journey, and reached his home with his general health much impaired. Three weeks ago Mr. Morton returned to Chicago, with the hope of securing the services of a specialist. The condition of his throat again became aggravated and a week ago he suffered an attack of apoplexy.

From this last attack he rallied but little. His immediate death, however, according to Dr. Ginn, his local physician, was due to an inflammation of the branchial arteries.

Stole a March on Them.

Monroe, Mich., April 28.—The Toledo & Monroe Railway played its final trump card early Sunday morning in regard to the much-talked-of grade crossing over the Lake Shore & Michigan Central tracks in Elm avenue. Late Saturday night a gang of men left Detroit on a Trenton car, transferring on to the Shore line to this city and work was immediately begun. Lake Shore and Michigan Central officers tried to prevent the crossing by running trains on the spot, but threats from the men soon put them out of the way, and the work went on. In a remarkably short time the crossing was completed and trains in operation.

More Mormon Missionaries.

Detroit, Mich., April 28.—A public meeting, at which fifteen men and three women were present, opened the annual conference of the Latter Day Saints (Mormons) at Dickinson's hall Saturday evening. A short business session was held in the afternoon, 13 elders, including Elder A. H. Woodruff of Chicago, who is president of the Northern States Mission, attending. Two new missions will be founded in Michigan, elders being assigned to commence labors in Ypsilanti and Wyandotte.

Child Burned to Death.

Detroit, Mich., April 28.—The three-year-old boy of Mrs. John Bunge, of 751 Riopelle street, was burned to death Sunday afternoon, together with a barn in the rear of her residence. The child was playing in the barn with a neighbor's boy, and the children had evidently secured matches from some source and with which the fire was set. The child's mother was the first on the scene, but the flames had already advanced too far to permit her saving her babe.

Crushed Under Land Roller.

Eaton Rapids, Mich., April 28.—About 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon Ira Long was killed at his father's farm, two miles northwest of here, while rolling a meadow. The lines became tangled in the roller, wound up and stopped the team. The boy, who was walking behind, had the lines around him and when they caught it drew him under the roller. Mr. Long, noticing the team standing, hurried to the scene, but the lad's life had been crushed.

McGarry Gets Change of Venue.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 28.—Thomas F. McGarry, under indictment for bribery in the Lake Michigan water boodle scheme, will be tried in another county than Kent. This was decided by Judge Newnham Saturday when he granted a motion of the defense for a change of venue, but the county to which the case is to be transferred has not been announced by the judge.

New Michigan Postmasters.

Washington, D. C., April 28.—Michigan postmasters appointed Saturday: Acme, Grand Traverse county, C. B. Litchy, vice M. H. Stiles, resigned; Colonville, Clare county, D. E. Corrier, vice W. S. Hamilton, resigned; Ely, Emmet county, Robert Duncan, vice H. N. Crandall, resigned; Meyers, Monroe county, Josephine Boyce, vice C. J. Meyer, resigned.

Barn Burned—Loss, $1,000.

Mt. Morris, Mich., April 28.—Fire destroyed the barn of Wm. Davis, in Mt. Morris township, together with a quantity of hay and grain and also farming implements. Cause unknown; loss $1,000.

A nearly Fatal Runaway,

Started a horrible ulcer on the leg of J. B. Orner, Franklin Grove, Ill. which defied doctors and all remedies for four years. Then Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him. Just as good for boils, burns bruises, cuts, corns, scalds, skin eruptions and piles, 25c at C. A. Wright's drug store.

THE OMNIBUS BILL

Carries Several Appropriations for Michigan.

BATTLE CREEK WANTS $80,000

Appropriations Total $15,800,000—Will Be Introduced in House Today and Will Be Up for Consideration Next Tuesday.

Washington, April 26.—Rep. Mercer of Nebraska will introduce in the house today the omnibus public building bill agreed on by his committee, and on next Monday a special rule will be presented to the house for consideration of the bill on Tuesday. The rule will provide for three hours' debate and a vote without apportunity for amendment. The bill will carry authorizations for public buildings in every state of the union except Delaware and Idaho, for which states no bills were introduced.

In all, there are 173 authorizations in the bill. The authorizations aggregate $15,800,000. No new postoffice building is provided for New York city, but the bill authorizes a commission, consisting of the secretary of the treasury, postmaster-general and attorney-general, to select a site in the borough of Manhattan. No limit of cost is placed on the site to be selected. The only condition attached to it is that it shall consist of a block, or square.

The bill repeals the present law for the erection of a department of justice building in this city and covers the $1,000,000 which it appropriated back into the treasury. It provides for the sale of the old custom house in Kansas City and make the proceeds available for the completion of the new building at that place. It also provides for the sale of the old custom house at Buffalo. It provdes for the sale of the old building at Wheeling, W. Va., on the completion of the new building, and makes a similar provision with regard to the old building at Providence, R. I.

In Menominee, Mich., the limit of cost of the public building is increased from $50,000 to $51,500.

Appropriations are made on condition that sites are sold to the United States, at a nominal cost, to Grand Haven, $50,000; Adrian, $40,000; Muskegon, $70,000; Owosso, $35,000.

In the latter appropriations for building and site, there is a proviso that the cost of site in each case shall in each case shall not exceed 15 per cent of the total amount fixed.

One section provides for acquiring a site for a municipal building in Washington, D. C., building and site to cost $1,500,000.

Provision is made for reports as to the capacity of the public buildings at Grand Rapids and Kalamazoo.

FATAL TO ONE MAN

TWENTY CARS DEMOLISHED

Two Sections of Train Crashed Together After Separating on Heavy Grade—Exploding Oil Set Fire to Debris.

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 28.—A railway wreck on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern at this place about 7 o'clock last evening occasioned the loss of one life and damaged property to the amount, roughly estimated, of between $20,000 and $25,000. It was occasioned by the breaking in two of a heavily-loaded freight loaded with merchandise going north on a heavy grade about two miles south of the station here. The engineer put on a heavy force of steam and tried to run away from the loose section, but failed. The cut-off section overtook the forward part of the train at the Grand Rapids & Indiana crossing and ran into them with terrific force, piling up about twenty cars and telescoping several more.

An oil car on the last section was wrecked. The oil exploded and burning oil was scattered in every direction, setting fire to the wrecked cars and burning about half of them and several cars standing on side tracks near the scene of the collision.

Lull & Skinner's carriage works were set on fire by the flying sparks and was damaged to the extent of about $1,000 before the fire department succeeded in extinguishing the flames.

An unknown man, badly cut to pieces, was found in the wreckage. It is supposed that he was stealing a ride. None of the trainmen, however, were aware that he was on the train, and they think he must have been riding underneath, either on the rods or on the brake beams. None of the train crew were injured.

The car on the rear section next to the last car wrecked contained live stock, and a man who was taking care of them. This car was uninjured.

BENEATH CAR WHEELS.

Ford City Man Was Ground to Death by Suburban Car.

Wyandotte, Mich., April 28.—Joseph Perkins, a bartender at Ford City, was ground beneath the wheels of an interurban car at that place about 10:30 last night and instantly killed. His body, frightfully crushed and mangled almost beyond recognition, was picked up and brought to this city.

He attempted to cross the track to the Michigan Alkali plant No. 2, ahead of the rapidly approaching Wyandotte car. He evidently miscalculated the distance and before he had passed the second rail the car was upon him. Bystanders heard one sharp cry of terror and then the crunching of the body between the wheels and the rail.

A Monstrous Gun.

Troy, N. Y., April 28.—The authorities at the Watervliet arsenal expect to complete work on the 16-inch gun, to be placed at Fort Hamilton in New York harbor, by June 1. The gun, which has been in the course of construction about four years, will be first sent to Sandy Hook for proving. Last week the war department decided to mount the gun on a disappearing carriage. Its first trial is eagerly awaited by all the gun-makers of the world. It is claimed the gun will hurl a shell 21 miles. This is disputed by the Krupps, who claim it will not throw the shot more than 15 miles. In order to discharge the gun it will require 1,000 pounds of powder and a 3,000-pound projectile. The gun, when completed, will weigh 150 tons.

"JES' JIM"

By Anna Steese

Copyright, 1901, by A. S. Richardson.

That was what every one called him. There was nothing striking about Jim. He seemed to reach an uninteresting medium in all things, from his family circle, where he was fifth of nine children, to the village sports, where he never distinguished himself.

He was not tall for his age like Tim, his oldest brother, who was already a skilled apprentice to the blacksmith at Bergen Mills, nor had he ever been such a jolly, moon faced brownie as Billy, whom the city folks always stopped to smile upon with such expressions as "Now isn't he the cutest little chap!" or "Palmer Cox ought really to see that boy!"

At school Jim never reached the head of his class nor did he ever drop with a sickening thud to its foot. As his teacher expressed it, he did his work just about three-quarters. When sudden catastrophe forced his playmates to accept him as a substitute in the baseball nine, he was the object of constant attention at the hands of the captain, and play as hard as he might that "chesty" individual was incessantly calling, "Play ball, Jimmy, play ball!"

Even when the big bobsled went to pieces on Beemer's hill, and half the boys were taken to the hospital, Jim trudged home afoot, and his mother exclaimed:

"Well, thank goodness, it was jes' Jim! If it'd been Tim or Fred, now, he'd 'a' broken a leg, knocked out his teeth or had his back broke for life, but Jim"—

She paused eloquently. As usual Jim had struck the medium. Three cuts on his face, a sprained finger and an ugly bruise on one knee completed his injuries, so a physician was not called, and the usual maternal remedies were administered with earnest objurgations to refrain from "bobbing" in the future.

But all these things happened when Jim was young, very young, and before a party of capitalists discovered that the lake beyond Bergen Mills would make a charming summer resort. With the city visitors came a gorgeous carrousel, with superb lions, haughty ostriches and glittering chariots. Jim lost all interest in other things, and every spare moment was spent in watching the giddy whirls of the merry go round and its patrons.

ONE PRINCESS WHO RODE EVERY AFTERNOON.

Then came the day of days, when the youth who collected fares on the carrousel announced that he was tired of country life and was going back to the city. Dismay was pictured on the face of the proprietor of the carrousel, but joy filled the heart of Jim, who stood by, watching the daily polishing of the golden chariots. And, best of all, it was vacation season!

Drawing on a supply of latent energy which he did not dream he possessed, Jim approached the proprietor.

"Say, if you want a boy, I'd like that job. I can rub up the animals and the chariots, and collect the tickets, and hold on the little ones that's afraid, and"—

His list of accomplishments came to an abrupt end. The man studied him with shrewd but not unkindly eyes.

"Yes, I've noticed you hanging round here pretty steady, and I guess you'll do if your folks are willing and won't pull you off to do jobs around home. The uniform will fit you pretty well too."

And so did Jim spring suddenly into the very limelight of Bergen Mills publicity. Before the first week had elapsed, he fitted into his nook as naturally as if he had been in the show business all his life. He could lean with easy nonchalance against the rods of the carrousel as it whirled round at a mad pace. He had a name for every animal in the circle. And his mother had cleaned the red and gold uniform and polished the buttons till they looked like new.

The dizzy existence he led might have caused it, but, somehow, Jim commenced to dream dreams and to see visions. The chariots were ridden by fairy princesses, dainty creatures in white frocks, flower trimmed hats and gay ribbons, who came with the summer visitors. And Jim was always the knight who would some day rescue them, when the ostrich should stretch his long legs and spring from the platform, or the lion, stiffening his tufted tail, should leap straight over the heads of the gaping spectators. Jim would fly after them on his Arabian charger.

But when August came panting down it was not a matter of fairy princesses, but just one princess who rode a lion every afternoon, with a watchful maid seated in the chariot behind her. Jim felt that their positions should be reversed. The colored maid with a gay turban and carrying a spear should mount the lion, while the princess, all in spangled white with glittering wings should sit enthroned in the golden chariot. Jim told the Arabian charger all about it, too, and warned that astute animal to be ready for the call to arms at any moment.

One day while hurrying back to the carrousel from dinner he had worked himself up to a fine pitch of enthusiasm over the thrilling situation when he was roused from his reveries by frightened screams and the hoof beats of a galloping horse. He ran into the dusty street, to face a plunging horse. Hanging on to the reins in the phaeton was the colored maid! The princess was not to be seen. Probably she was crouching in terror at the feet of her servant. Could he do it without the Arabian charger? All this passed through his mind in a flash. The next instant he was clinging to the bridle of the maddened horse—then darkness!

When he woke, he was lying in a strange room with a white capped nurse bending over him. She felt his forehead with her cool hand and gave him something to drink, something cold and delicious. Next came the doctor, who asked him many tiresome questions, and his mother, who cried a great deal and said very little, which proceeding puzzled Jim greatly. After they had gone he and the nurse had a long talk, and then he recalled it all—the princess, the black servant and the plunging horse. And he understood better why his back ached so.

Somehow the ache never stopped night or day, and Jim was beginning to weary of it. One day he astonished his nurse by exclaiming:

"Say! I'm kind of sorry I made up that play. I thought it would be fun to ride the Arabian charger and save the princess, but it's lasting such a long time."

At first the nurse thought he was delirious again, but when she had asked a few questions she understood it all. Later in the day she paid a visit to the superintendent of the hospital and told him all about the princess, the servant and the Arabian charger.

The very next day the princess with her father came to the hospital. She was a serious young maiden, which was well, because some day she would have a large estate to manage. She listened very quietly while the superintendent and the nurse talked. The latter said, as they rose to leave the room:

"Now, remember, whatever else you say he must not know that it was only the colored girl he saved. I think it—it would break his heart."

The princess nodded her head wisely and forced back the tears. She did not know why she felt like crying, except that she had seen something like tears in the nurse's eyes, and even her father had turned away his head once or twice during the conference.

Jim almost shouted with delight when he saw her. She wore the dress he liked best of all—white lawn with lace that showed her pretty shoulders and arms, blue ribbons and a rose trimmed hat. They talked it all over, and when she rose to go he said cheerily:

"I'll be back to the carrousel very soon. I think the Arabian charger must miss me!"

Then the princess looked at the nurse and started in bravely:

"You aren't going back to the carrousel—for awhile. My papa is going to take you to town with us—to another—another hospital where they keep boys with hurt backs. There's the loveliest doctor there. I know him, and he's going to put your back in a plaster paris case, and I'm coming to see you every single day. It's right close to our house."

Jim had grown strangely quiet, and now he turned to her wistfully:

"Will I have to stay this—this way very much longer?"

The princess took a fresh grip on the flowers she still held.

"The doctors hope not, but you won't mind, will you, if I come every single day and bring you books and flowers and things?"

Jim looked yearningly toward the window and the warm September sunshine. He understood now why the nurse had so skillfully parried questions on this subject. Then he turned to the princess. There were tears in her eyes. Could they be for him? He pulled himself together like a young soldier, and groped for her hand.

"No, I shan't mind it—at all."

Then the princess forgot how stately a story book princess should be. She forgot that her father was president of a bank and that Jim's father was only a fireman in the Bergen mills. She dropped her flowers and, bending over the cot, kissed him proudly.

"You're a regularly brave prince, Jimmy, and I'm glad I'm your princess, indeed I am."

Scotch Logic.

A Scotch minister was startled by the original views of a not very skillful plowman whom he had just hired. He noticed that the furrows were far from straight and said:

"John, yer drills are na near straucht ava—that is, na like Tammie's wark," Tammie being the person who had previously plowed the glebe.

"Tammie didna ken his wark," observed the man coolly as he turned his team about. "Ye see, when the drills is crookit the sun gets in on a' sides, an' so ye get early tatties."

The Success of De Blowitz.

The secret of the marvelous success of M. de Blowitz as Paris correspondent of the London Times is said to have been due to the absolute and complete confidence with which he inspired the statesmen, the politicians and the diplomats with whom he was brought in contact and which he never betrayed. They all felt that they could depend absolutely on his discretion, no matter how great the temptation from a journalistic point of view to do otherwise.

When the Duke Decazes while playing billiards at the Quai d'Orsay after dinner one evening suddenly received the news of the purchase by the British government of the khedive's stock in the Suez Canal company and, wild with rage, broke forth into frantic threats against the English government, charging M. de Blowitz to make known his indignation and the fact that he was bent on retaliation, the correspondent of The Times, who had been one of the party present, although he saw the value of the news, made no use of it.

The next day he met the duke, who had recovered his senses and who, grasping him by both hands, exclaimed: "I shall never forget what you have done for us. You have sacrificed journalistic success to your sense of duty and to the cause of peace."

The Tall Grass of Yucatan.

The sisal grass of Yucatan is one of the most remarkable vegetable products known. It grows in long blades, sometimes to the length of four or five feet, and when dry the blade curls up from side to side, making a cord which is stronger than any cotton string of equal size that has ever been manufactured. It is in great demand among florists and among manufacturers of various kinds of grass goods, but as soon as its valuable properties become known it will have a thousand uses which are now undreamed of. Ropes, cords, lines of any description and any size may be manufactured of it, and a ship's cable of sisal grass is one of the possibilities of the future. It is almost impervious to the action of salt water and is not readily decayed or disintegrated by moisture and heat and will in time prove one of the most valuable productions of Central America.

The King and the Seidlitz Powder.

On the first consignment of seidlitz powders to the capital of Delhi the monarch was deeply interested in the accounts of the refreshing box. A box was brought to the king in full court, and the interpreter explained to his majesty how it should be used. Into a goblet he put the twelve blue papers, and, having added water, the king drank it off. This was the alkali, and the royal countenance expressed no sign of satisfaction. It was then explained that in the combination of the two powders lay the luxury, and the twelve white powders were quickly dissolved in water, and as eagerly swallowed by his majesty.

With a shriek that will be remembered while Delhi lasts the monarch rose, stared, exploded and in his full agonies screamed, "Hold me down," then rushing from the throne fell prostrate on the floor. There he lay during the long continued effervescence of the compound, spurting like 10,000 pennyworths of imperial pop and believing himself in the agonies of death, a melancholy and humiliating proof that kings are mortal.—Indian Mirror.

Historical Fiction.

In lecturing Dr. Gardiner was very fond of retailing the hackneyed old historical anecdotes that garnish the schoolbooks, and he would commonly append the comment: "Now, that story is not true. I have reason to know, indeed, that it is pure fiction, but for our purpose it is better than the truth because the truth cannot be rounded off and polished so nicely to suit one's conception of character or of circumstance." For similar reasons he was instant in praise of historical novels. "A genius like Scott or George Eliot, 'especially in 'Romola,'" he would say, "has many advantages over the plodding historian and can often arrive, by the intuition of genius, at truths which the most laborious research could never reveal, and, on the whole," he would add, "historical fiction is much more trustworthy and incomparably more respectable than fictitious history."—London News.

Uses His Ring In His Business.

An east side character well known about the supreme court wears a particularly brilliant solitaire diamond ring, with the stone turned in toward the palm of his hand. He was asked if he wore his ring this way for fear it would be stolen.

"No," he said, scorning the idea. "The thief what is wideawake enough to rob your uncle, he ain't been born yet It's for business reasons that I wear my diamond so. When some fellow comes to touch me, I hold up my hands so (with the back toward him) and say, 'I'm broke, my friend,' and he don't see my diamond, and he goes away. But when I want to do business with a man who has money I turn my hands so (with the palms out) and say, 'What can I do for you, my friend? and he sees the big diamond and thinks I'm a good man to deal with."—New York Times.

Making Drinking Water Safe.

Uncomfortable consequences may follow the use of the best of water by persons who are not accustomed to it, as we all know from experience in changing our usual daily beverage. A simple and efficient way of preventing trouble from a change of water is to carry a small vial of the crystals of permanganate of potash with you and to put one of the pieces in each glass of water that you drink. It will turn the water a slight pinkish tinge and, according to an authority, make it a safe beverage for strange stomachs.

A Soldier's Reply.

A soldier of Marshal Saxe's army, being discovered in a theft, was condemned to be hanged. What he had stolen might be worth 5 shillings. The marshal, meeting him as he was being led to execution, said to him, "What a miserable fool you were to risk your life for 5 shillings!"

"General," replied the soldier, "I have risked it every day for my pay, fivepence." This repartee saved his life.

No Latitude.

A national school inspector in Ireland was once examining a class in geography and, having reason to correct an answer to a question regarding longitude, proceeded to ask for a definition of latitude. There was a slight pause, and a young lad answered "Please, sir, we have no latitude in Ireland. The government won't allow us any."

The Legislative Way.

"But this bill should have been settled long ago," objected the tradesman.

"Well, suh, de gemmen's out; enyhow, you cayn't expect a membuh of congress to settle anything widout a lot of talkin'."—Baltimore Herald.

College Graduate—Sure! The governor did cough up like a gentleman whenever I wrote him for a check.—Philadelphia Press.

The Chinese Bride Wears Red.

Red is the nuptial color in China. The coolies that carry the bride in her litter are dressed in red, and they bear a dwarf orange tree loaded with fruit and coin. The bride's compartments are finished in red trimmings, presents are carried on red trays, the banners borne in the procession are originally crimson, which are brightened by the rosy glow of the lanterns. Red umbrellas are carried, and illuminated signs blaze in color. The canopy itself is decorated according to the wealth and the taste of the bride's family. A poor woman is carried to her wedding feast in a plain chair painted red. If the family has wealth or rank, the palanquin is very ornate, decorated with dragon heads. The Chinese skill in working silk or gold cord is displayed in an artistic manner. When the bride appears, she wears a red veil, and the letters to her ancestors, whose blessing is invoked, are written on red paper. The bride generally wears a crown adorned with tinsel and mock jewels, an idea which is much more prevalent in Sweden.—Woman's Home Companion.

A Military Order In Emergency.

Captain Verne M. Bouvie, who raised and commanded a company in an Ohio regiment in the Spanish-American war, told of a very unusual order he heard given by an officer of a Missouri regiment at Camp Meade.

"The Missourian's company was coming down a muddy road," said Captain Bouvie, "and presently they came to a place where only two abreast could pass. The company was in a column of fours, and the problem of getting them past puzzled their commander completely. The correct order was 'Right, by twos.' After some hesitation he shouted peremptorily:

"'Gee round that puddle!'

"The company had evidently been better drilled than their commander, for they broke into a column of twos. When they had passed the water, I listened eagerly for the next command. After some delay the officer shouted sharply:

"'Twos inter fours, right smart; git!'"

Electric Shocks.

It is generally supposed that electric shocks at 500 volts will invariably prove fatal, but that such is not the case was proved the other day by a member of the Institution of Electrical Engineers, who stated that even with wetted boots he had stood on the rails of the City and South London railway, sat on the live conductor and slapped the running rails with bare hands. He further said that, provided the day were dry and the skin not moist, it was quite safe for the average person to handle live wires. One man fell on a cable carrying a current of 5,000 volts and escaped with only a few burns. Another man was rendered unconscious by a two thousand volt current, but was soon restored unhurt. A one hundred volt current has been known to cause death, but such a case is quite a rare occurrence.—London Globe.

Decidedly Unreasonable.

Clara—Men are the most impatient creatures. Harry knows that I have an offer from Mr. Oldchap, who is just rolling in wealth, yet Harry is just as unreasonable and babyish as if he thought I really cared for that old grayhead. Harry is so ugly about it that he won't do me the smallest favor.

Mother—What did you ask Harry to do?

Clara—I merely asked him to wait and be my second husband.—New York Weekly.

He Knew It.

He was being gently chaffed about his stammering. He took the badinage with customary good nature.

A Long Dinner.

During the hard drinking days in Scotland a country friend, calling at the door of Lord Hermand's house in Edinburgh at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, was informed by the servant that the judge was at dinner.

"But I thought his lordship did not dine till 5 o'clock."

"No more he does," said the servant, "but this is yesterday's dinner!"

Forethought.

"Why, I didn't know you had weak eyes, Mortimer!" exclaimed his very best girl.

"I haven't," returned Mortimer earnestly. "I have come to ask your father for your hand tonight, and it is a state prison offense to strike a person wearing glasses in the eye."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A new one cent postal card is now being printed at the bureau of engarving and printing. Its distinctive feature is that the new card contains a vignette of President McKinley in lieu of President Jefferson's portrait. The issue of the Jefferson card will be discontinued when the present stock on hand is exhausted. When desired by purchasers the new postal card will be furnished in sheets of forty cards each. It is expected this arrangements will effect a large saving to purchasers who have their messages or addresses printed on postal cards.—Petersburg Sun.

The Liverpool Daily Post tells the following tale of an accommodating mourner. "An Edinburgh photographer was visited the other day by a man who wanted a unique picture taken 'You see, it's like this,' the stranger began. 'I had a girl that I loved, and we was going to git married. She had her things made up and we was all ready, when she was taken ill and died. Now, what I want is a picture of me sittin' on her grave weepen.' The photographer was touched at the homely story of grief, and told him he could send a man with him to the grave and have the picture taken as he desired. 'It's some distance,' the stranger explained; it's over in Ireland, I expect it 'ud cost a lot to send over your traps for what I want.' The photographer said it would whereupon his visitor added: 'I thought that mebbe you could rig up a grave here in your shop, and I would weep on it, and it would do just as well. It's no trouble for me to weep anywhere.'"

You can't make him eat either. You can stuff food into a thin man's stomach but that doesn't make him use it.

Scott's Emulsion can make him use it. How? By making him hungry, of course. Scott's Emulsion makes a thin body hungry all over. Thought a thin body was naturally hungry didn't you? Well it isn't. A thin body is asleep—not working—gone on a strike. It doesn't try to use it's food.

Scott's Emulsion wakes it up—puts it to work again making new flesh, That's the way to get fat.

LITERARY NOTES

Mr. Walter H. Page, formerly the editor of the Atlantic Monthly, but now the editor of the World's Work, contributes to the May Atlantic a sparkling and vigorous paper entitled "The Rebuilding of Old Commonwealths," in which he sketches picturesquely the effects of slavery, "which pickled all Southern life and left it just as it found it." Mr. Page declares that the way out lies in the "training of the untrained masses," in other words, through popular education untrammeled by political or race difference.

There are several notable pictorial features of peculiarly timely interest and also others of an artistic flavor in the May Outlook. In the first class may be named that describing District Attorney Jerome's official home on the East Side of New York, and that on the King of Spain, who this month becomes King in act as well as in name, by General Stewart L. Woodford, formerly United States Minister to Spain. Art and music are respectively represented by an article on the great Spanish painter Sorolla, written by one of his pupils and illustrated by reproductions of paintings and original sketches.

Madame Bovary was Flaubert's masterpiece and stands as the source of all realistic fiction. In the May Lippincott George Moore, than whom there is no Englishman more conversant with French art and letters, contributes a short story, called "Emma Bovary," which sums up in the form of fiction the English feeling about that great but offending novel.

There are many hopeful signs in the temperence outlook in America. It is a matter of common observation that social drinking is less the rule than it once was, and our strenuous economical development tends toward temperance and even toward total abstinence. One element of encouragement is the growing spirit of tolerence and practical common sense among temperance advocates of our day.—The May Century.

Thrift of time is as necessary as thrift of money, and he who knows how to save time has learned the secret of accumulating educational opportunity. Men who regard it as sinful to waist money, waste time with a prodigal's lavishness because they do not understand the value of short periods of time; society is full of people who might enrich themselves an hundred fold and make their lives immensely more interesting if they learned this commonplace truth.—May Ladies' Home Journal.

A meeting of the H. S. was held in the A room Monday night after school, its object was for the organizing of a track team, about 30 pupils volunteered to place themselves in training for the team, the school faculty greatly approve the plan of having atheletics in the H. A Trip to the Pacific Coast.

Nelson, B. C. Apr. 22, 1902.

DEAR SIR:

Since writing you before, my plans have changed and I shall not be in Tecumseh as soon as I expected too. I now intend to leave Nelson in a few days for Oregon and would like the HERALD sent to Svensen, Oregon, care of J. W. Lemke, until furthur notice. During the next month I will visit several places on the Pacific coast.

It has been a beautiful winter here in contrast to the extreme cold and storms of the east. The Chinese who excell in gardening have their gardens all made and the lawns are lovely in their dress of green with flowers in abundance. Inclosed find subscription price of the HERALD for 1902.

Very Truly,
MRS. A. P. CODDINGTON.

The Best way.

At the next meeting of the council the committee appointed for that purpose will report with advice about putting the city team in the street or not. In a nut-shell the matter is as follows:

The merchants will subscribe for sprinkling $15.00 per week. It costs $500 a year to hire a man to take care of the team and drive it anyway, and the team will not average $7.50 a week in the gravel pit besides having the team sometimes at a long distance when badly needed. Besides working the team on the street with instructions to do "light" work is a bad example for all the other workers. Certainly the best way is to have the city team in the fire limits on the sprinkler ready for a fire.

The editorial department of the Review of Reviews for May gives an excellent summary and exposition of the various measures before Congress. There are also illuminating paragraphs on foreign politics—the French elections, affairs in the far East, and the South African situation, with discriminating comment on the career of Cecil Rhodes and the purpose and probable results of his remarkable benefactions.

CALICO BALL

FRIDAY EVENING

Was one of the social events of the season.

The dance given by the young ladies at the armory last Friday evening proved a gigantic success, about fifty couples made themselves merry. The costumes were in keeping with the occassion, the ladies appeared in calico dresses, while the gentlemen were supposed to wear overalls and wampuses. Those not complying with the above conditions were fined the large sum of a quarter.

Robert Cornell, of Adrian, furnished music and from the time the music struck up for the first dance, which was a two step, it was an animated scene until the close between 3 o'clock and 3:30 Saturday morning. Those present from out of town were: Chauncey White and Miss Ella Knowles, of Adrian; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fabrique, Bert Kirk, Roy Conklin, John Calhoun, Rob Ward, Ralph Halliday, Earl Haughn, Herman Marshall, Wallace Case, Chas. Semark, of Clinton; Burt Bailey, of Tipton.

BASEBALL MEETING

An Enthasiastic Meeting Held at the Council Building Last Evening

THE PROSPECTS

For the Best Baseball Season ever had in Tecumseh are First class

The baseball meeting held at the council building last evening was very enthusiastic and the outlook bids fair to be the best this season of ever.

Last year there were over $2000 spent here on the team and only $500 of this money was raised by subscription. The work of the team all the season was good and a credit to Tecumseh and the way it was managed was a good advertisement and every dollar spent for the team by the merchants was well invested. In an indirect way baseball helps the town all summer, many dollars come here which would otherwise go elsewhere and it would seem that every one should give all the encouragement possible to the men who are good enough to give their time and money to make the games possible.

It must be a happy vein that runs in the neighborhood of the funny bone.

O. E. Hawkins, of Tecumseh News, was recently expelled from Tecumseh lodge of Odd Fellows. He brought suit in Lenawee circuit court for mandamus to compel the lodge to show cause for their action. The case was disposed of Saturday by Judge Chester denying the petition of Hawkins.—Dundee Reporter.

Old "Ace" T. J. Hardcastle's famous livery horse was found choked to death with his halter last Sunday morning. Ace had few troubles and was always in the best of spirits though he was never known to drink anything but water. No coroner's jury was impaneled but the case was plainly not one of equicide.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Dundee has an effective fire department on south side of river composed of ladies. Wednesday children set fire to the barn of Chas. Wheeler. Discovery was made and the alarm given. The department turned out under the command of Mrs Vogelsang, and after a vigorous fight succeeded in subduing the flames. It is proposed to obtain a supply of ladders for the use of the fire department.—Dundee Reporter.

The following in regard to news paper was clipped from an exchange: The daily papers are all right if you want them, but it is the semi weekly paper that advertises your business, your numerous, societies, your schools, your churches, sympathizes with you in your afflictions and rejoices in your prosperity. In short it is your semi weekly paper that mentions the many items in which you you are interested during the year, and which you do not find in the daily papers.

John Rose of Addison, an old civil war veteran has long been one of the best patrons of Addison's one saloon, in fact it was his custom to turn his pension money over to the saloon man as soon as received. Friday night he filled up as usual in the saloon, then went to the bridge over the mill pond, laid his hat on rail and jumped to his death. He has no relatives and a pint of whiskey found in his pocket is the sole estate so there will be no will to probate. —Exchange.

Brown's business college is to be built at the corner of College Avenue and McKenzie streets and work has already been commenced Of the 200 scholarships offered only 20 remain unsold. The college will be a two story frame building, fitted with all modern improvements and conveniences. The school plans contemplate a main room 80x40 and suitable offices, store rooms, toilet and cloak rooms, recitation rooms, printing office, etc. Mr. Brown hopes to be abld to occupy the building at the opening of the next fall term.—Adrian Press.

An inmate of the Girls' Industrial Home at Adrian, was reproved the other day for an infraction of the rules, and during the night removed the screen from her window, jumped out and left the grounds. The girl reached Sutton a few miles distant, where she weakened and asked a farmer to take her back to the home. When Mrs. Sickels facetiously asked her if she had not stayed out rather late, the wayward one begged the matron's forgiveness. A length of hose, applied where it did the most good, was the dose meted out to truants, at the home up to a few years ago. This little incident may win converts to the love idea, and "the more converts the merrier," say the girls.—Hudson Post.

Nothing ages a woman so quickly as the knowledge that her fashions are out of date.

MUST BELIEVE IT.

When well known Tecumseh People tell it so plainly.

When public endorsement is made by a representive citizen of Tecumseh the proof is positive. You must believe it. Read this testimony. Every backache sufferer, every man, woman or child with any kidney trouble will find profit in the reading.

Mr. W. C. Wetherell, agent for buggies, harness and other machinery, place of business southwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I cannot praise Doan's Kidney Pills highly enough, for they have been a great friend to me. Some years ago I was an expert at sheep shearing and did a lot of that work. Everybody knows it is very hard on the back and it finally brought on a severe pain across the loins. Nothing did any good until a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I got a box and the treatment gave immediate relief. When I finished the box the trouble was entirely removed. If I feel any symptoms of a return a resort to Doan's Kidney Pills quickly wards off the attack. They are a reliable remedy and I consistently recommend them." Just such emphatic endorsement is plentiful in Tecumseh. Call at C. A. Wright's drug store and ask him what his customers report.

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Some folks are willing to make "every allowance" for the unfortunate—except a cash one.

"I had a running, itching sore on my leg. Suffered tortures. Doan's Ointment took away the burning and itching instantly and quickly effected permanent cure." C. W. Lenhart, Bowling Green, O.

The bright lexicon of youth isn't half as useful as the well thumbed copy of later years.

"Cure the cold and save the life." Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup cures coughs and colds, down to the very verge of consumption.

Interrupted Grieving.

A woman in Scotland had lost her husband, and the minister, calling to condole with her, found her sitting in front of a large bowl of porridge.

"Terrible loss, terrible loss!" sighed the minister.

"Aye," was the reply, "it's a terrible loss to me. I've just been greetin' a' nicht, and as sune as I finish this wee drap porridge I'm just gaun to begin again."

The Encroaching Lake.

One of the humorously attractive characteristics of a child is his large sense of personal importance. A little girl was walking with her father on the shore of a large lake, where the waves were gently lapping up on the beach. Suddenly one came up higher than the others and swept over her foot, when she exclaimed, "Oh, papa, the lake stepped on my toe!"

His Position In Politics.

"He's going in for politics. Wouldn't he make a splendid diplomat, though?"

"What? Why, he's a deaf mute."

"Exactly. Just think how easy it would be for him to be absolutely dumb when it was expedient."

"Yes, but then he could never talk without showing his hand."—Philadelphia Record.

Office of the Lungs.

"What is the office of the lungs?" a teacher asked a small pupil in a class in physiology.

"The chest," she promptly replied.

"And," said the teacher, telling the story, "I guess she was somewhat near right, for the lungs certainly do business in the chest."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

UNKNOWN MAN KILLED.

By Train Near Battle Creek—Foul Play Suspected.

Battle Creek, Mich., April 28.—An unknown man was run over and killed Sunday morning by the Grand Trunk Western eastbound freight at 5:30. The accident happened at the east end of the Nichols yard, two miles from the local depot. The train passed over the middle of the body.

Coroner Robinson, accompanied by a jury, visited the scene. His belief is that the man met with foul play.

No money was found on his person, but a Catholic coin depicting Christ on the cross was in his pocket. The letters "W. F. S." and some stars were tattooed on his arm. He has not yet been identified.

THE NEGATIVE SIDE

Of Philippine Bill Receives Attention of Senate This Week.

Washington, April 28.—The plans of the senate for the week do not extend beyond the continuation of the debate on the Philippine government bill and the consideration of minor matters when there is no one prepared to speak on the Philippine bill. There is no prospect thus far for speeches in support of that measure, and consequently all the talk bids fair to continue to be on the negative side of the question.

In the committees, the inquiries into the sugar question, as related to Cuba, and into Gen. Crozier's connection with gun carriage inventions probably will be begun. The committee on the Philippines also will proceed with its investigation into the condition of affairs in the Philippines.

There is a miscellaneous program for the house this week. Today the special rule for consideration of the omnibus public building bill will be brought in and passed, and the remainder of the day will be devoted to District of Columbia business. Tuesday the omnibus bill will be passed. Wednesday consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill will be resumed, and when it is disposed of the District of Columbia appropriation bill will be taken up and probably passed before the end of the week. With its passage only two appropriation bills will remain to be acted on by the house—the naval and general deficiency bills. Seldom have the appropriation bills been so well advanced at a long session of congress as they are this year.

ANOTHER MURDER IN DETROIT.

Boy, 16 Years Old, Shoots Man in Moment of Anger.

Detroit, Mich., April 26.—Friday afternoon Frank Colling, a 16-year-old boy, of 61 Scott street, shot John Beinhardt, aged 43, who lives next door, killing him almost instantly.

Reinhardt became engaged in an altercation with young Colling, who referred to Reinhardt as a drunkard, and told him that he ought to be ashamed to sit around while his wife was out working. Reinhardt, who is a stone mason, had his tools near by, and when young Colling furthered his threats by picking up an ax, Reinhardt grasped a stone mallet and advanced towards him. The boy then pulled a revolver from a holster in a belt he wore and fired at Reinhardt's feet. He sent a second bullet into Reinhardt's leg above the knee, another in his abdomen and still another in his breast. The latter penetrated the heart. Reinhardt crawled a few feet from the yard into a shed and died.

Young Colling immediately took to his heels, pursued by several persons who were near and heard the shots. He gave them quite a chase and several times turned on his pursuers, threatening to shoot, but was finally overtaken and captured by a posse of officers.

Colling was removed from Chene station to police headquarters about an hour after his arrest and will be confined there until a warrant is issued, probably today.

Two Names and Two Results.

A large steamer was once wrecked because one of the sailors was named West. The vessel was outward bound from Rotterdam, and the sailor was on deck polishing some brasswork. Suddenly the captain called him and told him to go below. The second officer on the bridge heard the captain call out the man's name and thought it was an order to change the course of the vessel to west. He did so, and the result was that the ship ran on to a dangerous shoal. That name cost the owners of the vessel the sum of $500,000.

During the Afghan war of 1879 a small British detachment gained a victory over a large body of the enemy by a mistaken order. A private named Vance, who had distinguished himself by several acts of bravery, was a great favorite with one of the officers, and during a skirmish the officer wanted him to carry a dispatch to the colonel in command of another detachment. The man was only a few yards away, and he called out, "Vance!" at the top of his voice. The men thought he had given the order "Advance!" and immediately rushed forward with such dash and spirit that the enemy broke and fled.

Monstrous Force of Tornadoes.

Much has been said about electricity as a factor for destructiveness in the various gyrating stormclouds known as cyclones, drechoes and tornadoes. In all of this voluminous mass of so called scientific opinions and deductions one fact seems to have been entirely overlooked—viz, the almost resistless force of wind when moving with high velocity. When the velocity is but fifty miles an hour, the pressure of air in motion is equal to twelve pounds to the square foot, and when this velocity rises to a hundred miles per hour its force rises to the equivalent of 49.2 pounds to the square foot, the augmentation of force being always proportional to the square of the velocity.

It needs no further elaboration or amplification of this statement to convey to the intelligent reader an idea of the monstrous mechanical force which such a rapid traveling mass of air must have, a power great enough to tear down any structure that has yet been built by man or to uproot whole forests of the largest trees now growing on the surface of the earth.

What's In a Name?

"I became very much interested in a chance companion on a railway train," said a New York clergyman. "He was plainly of Italian birth or extraction, and so I remarked to him:

"'Where were you born?'

"'In Genoa,' replied the young man.

"'And what is your name?'

"'Patrick Murphy.'

"'How in the world did you get that name?' I asked instinctively.

"'I took it,' replied the young man.

"'Why did you choose such a name?'

"'Because I wanted people to think I was an American,' was his reply."

An Interruption.

The prayer meeting was held at good Brother W.'s house on the hill. The meeting had progressed, and prayer and remarks and hymns had occupied the time. The hour of closing had almost arrived. The dominie in a low voice said: "Now there is just a moment left. Isn't there some one who would like to fill in that moment before we close?" There was dead silence when in the twinkling of an eye the door on the clock flew open, and out popped the head of a little bird, which said, "Cuckoo!"—Homiletic Review.

Prunes.

Dr. Hanson, writing on the subject of prunes, says: "A pound of prunes is equivalent as food to a gallon of milk and costs but a quarter as much. It is about equivalent to a pound of bread, but is far more healthful. Considered from an economic standpoint, no fresh meat, fish, milk or eggs can be provided for the same moderate cost, and none of them contains, even approximately, the same aggregate of nutritive elements."

Douglas Jerrold In School.

Douglas Jerrold wrote "Black Eyed Susan" when he was twenty-one and contributed to Punch the immensely popular "Caudle Lectures" not long afterward. But at nine years of age young Jerrold had been scarcely able to read, and it was not until he was apprenticed to a printer, after serving for some time as a midshipman at sea, that he showed either desire or capacity for intellectual improvement.

Two Mindedness.

High mindedness and right mindedness may profitably be supplemented by "two mindedness," which has been defined as the habit of taking into account what is urged on both sides and trying to combine the essential parts of the two opposing arguments into one higher truth. Magnanimity, honesty, breadth—a trio of qualities worth possessing and the last by no means the least.

Placing the Sympathy.

Harris—Not at all. I cannot help sympathizing with the boy, he evidently so thoroughly enjoys making a fool of himself.—Boston Transcript.

Forgot Himself.

She—My husband is a brute.

Friend—All men are brutes, my dear.

She—Mine is simply abominable! I asked him if he did not think you as pretty as I, and he said "Yes."—New York Weekly.

Fire at Glens Falls, N. Y.

Glens Falls, N. Y., April 28.—A disastrous fire visited Glens Falls Sunday, causing a property loss estimated at over half a million dollars. The fire started in the clothing store of Webb Bros., on Glen street, and from thence spread to the large plant of the Joseph Fowler Shirt & Collar Co., occupying the upper story of nearly the entire block. Then, fanned by high wind, the flames communicated to neighboring buildings. The destruction of the Fowler shirt plant throws nearly 800 operatives out of employment and 200 more will be out of work temporarily. It is expected that the insurance will nearly cover the losses

Sons of Revolution to Assemble.

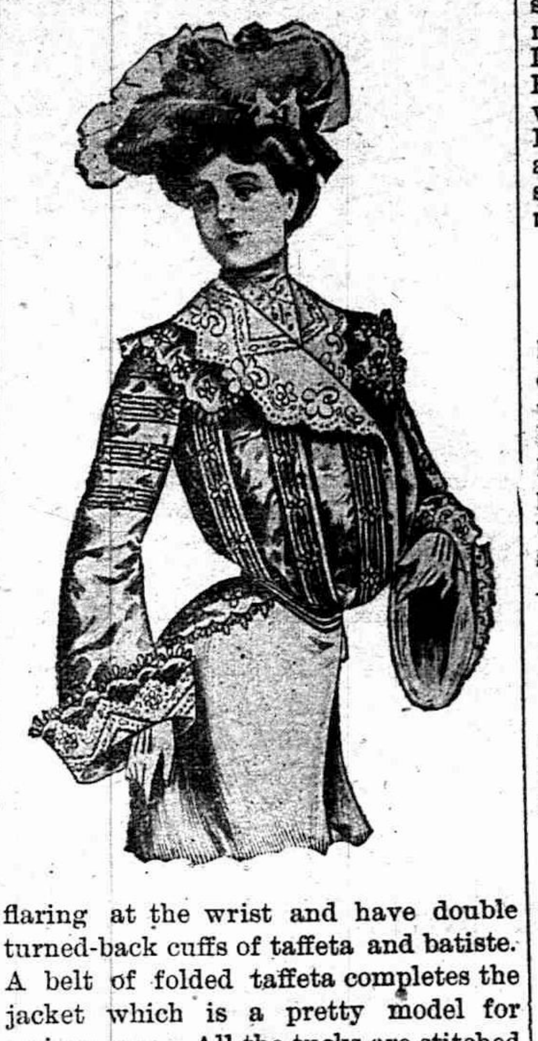
Washington, April 28.—Arrangements have been practically completed for the national congress of the Sons of the American Revolution, which assembles in this city Wednesday. The sessions of the congress will be held at the new Willard hotel. The arrival of delegates has commenced. President General Walter Seth Logan of New York arrived in Washington yesterday, and several others from various parts of the country have registered at hotels.

Stylish Spring Costumes

JACKET OF BLACK TAFFETA.

A Novel Basque.

This charming little jacket is of black taffeta tucked in clusters and perforated in a small, neat design showing the white satin lining. It is fashioned with a novel basque or skirt which appears only at the sides and back, and the large collar is of embroidered batiste over a still larger collar of embroidered taffeta. The sleeves are very wide and flaring at the wrist and have double turned-back cuffs of taffeta and batiste. A belt of folded taffeta completes the jacket which is a pretty model for spring wear. All the tucks are stitched with Corticelli Sewing Silk.



A novel feature for blouse jackets as well as for Eton skirt jackets and dressy garments in general is the jabot vest effect. It has been stated that some of the foremost Paris houses will accentuate the drooping shoulder effect both in waists and in outdoor garments. Quite a feature in jackets is the long coat collar of taffeta which are variously enhanced with large collars and revers of lace or of ribbon-run embroidered linen.

Wanted.

We would like to ask, through the columns of your paper, if there is any person who has used Green's August Flower for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Liver Troubles that has not been cured—and we also mean their results, such as sour stomach, fermentation of food, habitual costiveness, nervous dyspepsia, headaches, despondent feelings, sleeplessness—in fact, any trouble connected with stomach and liver? This medicine has been sold for many years in all civilized countries and we wish to correspond with you and send you one of our books free of cost. If you never tried August Flower try one bottle first. We have never known of its failing. If so, something more serious is the matter with you. Ask your oldest druggist.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE

I have had occasion to use your Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine and am pleased to say that I never used anything for stock that gave half as good satisfaction. I heartily recommend it to all owners of stock.

J. B. BELSHER, St. Louis, Mo.

Sick stock or poultry should not eat cheap stock food any more than sick persons should expect to be cured by food. When your stock and poultry are sick give them medicine. Don't stuff them with worthless stock foods. Unload the bowels and stir up the torpid liver and the animal will be cured, if it be possible to cure it. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine unloads the bowels and stirs up the torpid liver. It cures every malady of stock if taken in time. Secure a 25-cent can of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine and it will pay for itself ten times over. Horses work better. Cows give more milk. Hogs gain flesh. And hens lay more eggs. It solves the problem of making as much blood, flesh and energy as possible out of the smallest amount of food consumed. Buy a can from your dealer.

Senate Held a Heated Discussion Over Alleged Actions of General Smith in Philippines—Teller Radically Denounces Him.

Washington, April 30.—A spirited discussion of the Philippine situation occurred in the senate Tuesday. It revolved around the order alleged to have been issued by Gen. Jacob A. Smith, to make the island of Samar a howling wilderness and to kill all male inhabitants over the age of 10 years. The debate took a wide range, however, and many other points were discussed.

When the Philippine bill was laid before the senate no one was prepared to deliver a set speech on it. Mr. Lodge (Mass.), in charge of the measure, said he felt compelled to press it for consideration. His remarks drew the fire of Mr. Teller (Colo.), who criticized the republicans for not participating in the discussion. This precipitated the debate, and for more than two hours it continued. Mr. Teller declared that Gen. Smith, if he had issued such an order as had been attributed to him, ought to be dismissed from the service, as it was a disgrace to the American army and to the American people.

Mr. Lodge said that while he knew little of the circumstances surrounding the alleged order, he did not approve of cruel methods in warfare, and every right-minded person must regret Gen. Smith's order. To him, it was revolting. He defended the administration, however, saying as soon as knowledge of the order had come to Washington, the president had directed that Gen. Smith be court-martialed.

Under a special order, which allowed three hours' debate, but which cut off all opportunity of amendment, the house Tuesday passed an omnibus public building bill which will distribute $17,405,450 among 174 cities. As the bill covers into the treasury $1,585,000, the total amount carried by the bill is reduced to that extent.

The bill provides for 77 new buildings and sites, six buildings on sites already purchased, 17 buildings on donated sites, and 58 increases in appropriations for buildings already authorized. It also provides for the purchase of 16 sites. The majority for the bill was so overwhelming that only nine members backed a demand for a yea and noes on the passage of bill.

There was some criticism of the method by which it was proposed to pass the bill, without opportunity for amendment, which Mr. Mercer, chairman of the committee, answered by stating that if the bill had been subject to amendment, the appropriations carried by it would have been increased to $60,000,000. The consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill was resumed, but only seven pages were disposed of.

Consul-General Osborne Dead.

London, April 30.—United States Consul-General Osborne died at his residence in Wimbledon Tuesday morning. He was appointed consul-general at London by President McKinley March 18, 1897. He was born at Girard, O., in 1842. Later he removed to Boston. Mr. Osborne was a cousin of the late President McKinley. Mr. Osborne's death was not a surprise to his friends. He had been confined to his home since November last, suffering from Bright's disease and dropsy, which, latterly, affected his heart. He was conscious until near the end. The deceased had never been absolutely well since he arrived in England.

Dallas, Tex., April 30.—A special from Granbury, Tex., confirms the report of damage done at Glenrose by a tornado Monday. Eight deaths are reported, and three of the injured will die. There were 57 persons injured with the exception of the three mentioned as fatally hurt. It is thought that all will recover. In Glenrose, 33 buildings were totally destroyed. More than 100 persons are homeless and destitute of food or shelter. The tornado destroyed farm property and crops for a distance of five miles north of Glenrose and seven miles south.

Put Official Marker On His Grave.

Washington, April 30.—Surrounded by the graves of hundreds of statesmen who have made history, a score of patriotic men, representing the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, assembled Tuesday afternoon in the congressional cemetery, on the banks of the eastern branch of the Potomac, and formally placed the official marker of the order at the monument of Gen. George Clinton, New York's famous revolutionary war governor. President Roosevelt was detained at the White House, but sent a wreath of roses and pansies.

Bad Weather Spoiled the Party.

Washington, April 30.—Owing to the threatening weather Tuesday afternoon, the guests invited to Mrs. Roosevelt's first garden party were received in the east room instead of open air, and all outdoor features of the fete were abandoned. The Marine band played in the red corridor from 4 to 6 o'clock. Mrs. Roosevelt was assisted in receiving the 500 or more visitors by her daughter. Miss Alice Nabbed the Fake Mourner.

Adrian, Mich., May 1.—A woman arrived here over the Monroe branch of the Lake Shore Tuesday night, registering as "Alice Wilson." Fast on her trail last night came Detective Stanton from Detroit, who soon located the woman, and immediately nabbed her. He says she had stolen $600 in bills in Detroit, having masqueraded as a mourner and picked the pocket of another mourner who had the money. The victim mourner had some sort of a fit at the time, and Alice took advantage of the fact. A local young man was arrested with her, but was subsequently released. The woman's name is Alice Cornell, alias Clark. She had spent most of the money.

ACT OF INSANE MAN

A FARMER NEAR ST. JOHNS

St. Johns, Mich., April 30.—J. A. Kimball, a Riley township farmer, shot his wife and cut his own throat Tuesday afternoon. The woman is dead and Kimball is so badly slashed that his recovery is impossible.

From the scant details obtainable, it develops that Kimball went suddenly insane and shot his wife with a revolver. The wound was through her head and she was dying when found. By her side lay her husband, with his throat cut from ear to ear with a butcher knife. Both knife and revolver lay on the floor beside him.

Kimball is a man of considerable wealth, and had always lived happily with his wife. He has always been regarded as eccentric, but no one supposed him insane.

The couple have no children at home, and there was no one in the house at the time of the tragedy.

Pontiac, Mich., April 30.—B. S. Trombley of Ann Arbor, an insane patient at the Eastern Michigan asylum of this city, committed suicide in a horrible manner. When the time for closing the halls came, Trombley was nowhere to be found. A search was started and at 1 o'clock George Rose found the charred remains of Trombley on a blazing pile of old ties near the tracks of the D. & M. railroad.

The fire, which was very intense, had entirely consumed the body with the exception of a portion of a trunk and one of the hands, and from the position in which these lay it was evident that the man had thrown himself face downward into the seething flames, with the idea of having all traces of himself removed.

"April 28, 1902, p. m.
"B. S. Trombley has moved."

It is said that he had told several patients that he wished to take his life, and even in a joking manner offered small sums to his fellow patients to kill him.

He was 58 years of age and had been a book agent. He came to the institution here last August, and his wife lives at 603 Jefferson avenue, Ann Arbor.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 30.—Benjamin Trombley formerly lived in Ann Arbor. He came from Bay City to secure the advantages of the university hospital for an injury which he hoped to have cured by an operation. Before he came to the table, however, he went raving mad, believing that the surgeons were going to harm him, and it was necessary to remove him to Pontiac.

Manistee, Mich., April 30.—At an early hour Tuesday morning fire destroyed the C. O. D. laundry, owned by E. M. McElligott, together with a stable, in which two horses were cremated. Loss estimated at $4,000. Max Bauman's cigar factory adjoining was also damaged $1,000 by water and smoke.

The First London Theater.

The first playhouse to be built in England was the Theater. It was erected in the year 1576, and its builder was James Burbage, father of the famous actor Richard Burbage and himself an actor of some repute. Access to the Theater seems in old times to have been oyer Finsbury fields. The Curtain, which, curiously, is named from the region or old manor on which the playhouse was erected and not from the familiar drapery of the stage, was situated south of Holywell lane, in Moorsfield (modern Gloucester street), and is first mentioned in the following year, 1577. Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" was among the many plays first acted there. The Theater was moved away to the Bankside, and the old materials were employed in building the Globe, Shakespeare's chief theater, in 1598. The Curtain continued to be used as a playhouse far into the reign of King James. No picture of either of these original theaters has been handed down, and owing to their position without the walls none of the old maps represents their precise location.—Lippincott's.

A VERY RICH WIDOW

Mrs. Coffee, Near Allegan, Advertised as Such.

BUT THE LAW GOT HER

Woman Received Letters by the Bushel—She Was Married and Had Children—Officers Found Her in Minnesota With Another Man.

Allegan, Mich., May 1.—Sheriff Bensley arrived here last night with Mrs. Lizzie Coffee and Frank Kipen. He captured them at Fairmount, Minn., living together. They skipped from Burnip's Corners two weeks ago.

Mrs. Coffee for some time advertised in Chicago that she was worth $60,000, was a young widow and handsome. She received several hundred letters daily, enclosing money and stamps. Over 400 letters have arrived in this office since she left, and the pile is steadily increasing.

The prisoners will be prosecuted for adultery. The woman has a husband and children. Her companion is a young man aged 30.

Notice was drawn to Mrs. Coffee's career some time ago through the petition of the postmaster at Burnip's Corners for help, he stating that Mrs. Coffee's mail was so immense that it necessitated an allowance for an additional clerk in the office. The officials investigated and Mrs. Coffee got wind of the fact. She evidently preferred to disappear rather than stand an investigation of her methods.

At this time Mrs. Coffee was living with her husband on their farm near Burnip's Corners. He was apparently in sympathy with her scheme and usually got the mail himself, driving to the office and getting the letters in a bushel basket.

Detroit Woman's Awful Suicide.

Detroit, Mich., May 1.—Mrs. Adelaide Sage, wife of Anthony Sage, a blacksmith for the Olds motor works, and living at 363 Locust street, committed suicide Wednesday morning at her home by saturating herself with kerosene oil and setting fire to her body in the summer dining-room of her home. She was burned almost beyond recognition. Mrs. Sage was 32 years of age and had been married to her husband five years. The couple had three children, two of them, James, aged 4, and Mary, aged 5 months, living, a boy, Russell, 3 years old, having died one month ago of scarlet fever. The family had always been a happy one, but after the death of the little one, and the sickness of James with scarlet fever, a short time ago, Mrs. Sage did not appear herself any longer. She grew melancholy, and this no doubt caused her to commit the dreadful act.

"Gone With Handsomer Man."

Durand, Mich., May 1.—When Wm. Skedule, the inspector of water tanks on the Grand Trunk road, returned to his home in this village Tuesday he found this note on the table: "Will, I shall never return to you. It will do you no good to look for me. Are you surprised? I wish you success." During the intervals during which her husband was absent from home on other parts of the division she frequently entertained a man whom she told the neighbors was her brother. He is said to be a married man living in Battle Creek. She left with $200 belonging to her husband, who vows vengeance if he ever comes across the man who wrecked his home.

Jumped to His Death.

Jackson, Mich., May 1.—Israel V. Cookingham, aged about 80 years, jumped from the tower of No. 1 fire engine house shortly after 7 o'clock Wednesday morning, and was instantly killed. Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THE RESULT OF AN EXPERIMENT

[Original.]

"Good gracious, mamma," said Miss Louise Hewlett at the breakfast table, "just listen to this:

"Wanted.—A woman twenty years old, with artistic tastes, capricious, fond of golf, lawn tennis and dancing, to act as secretary."

"Singular," said the mother thoughtfully, "that the advertiser, whom I suppose to be a man, says nothing about beauty."

Since Miss Hewlett was looking for a position she answered the advertisement and was invited to call, which she did in the company of her mother. She found a man of thirty-five, serious, reticent and apparently in his right mind.

"I need also," said the advertiser, Mr. Dudley Vinton, "a housekeeper. If Mrs. Hewlett will take up her residence here with you in my apartments, filling that position, I will pay each a handsome salary. Pardon me for being so frank, but it is better that I should say in advance that love or matrimony has nothing to do with my intentions.

At this announcement Louise tossed her head.

The offer was accepted, and mother and daughter went to live in Mr. Vinton's apartments. From the first he treated them as guests, though Miss Hewlett was occasionally called upon to write a note or a letter or copy some papers relating to property. At the end of the first month Mr. Vinton paid the salaries and said that he would be glad to continue the arrangement indefinitely. Louise pouted. She filled the terms of the advertisement.

Another month passed. Mr. Vinton was absent occasionally, sometimes by day, sometimes in the evening. Once or twice he was away several days together. What called him where he went or what he did he never told. Louise was piqued and delicately hinted that some reference to these absences would be at least civil. She did not like to be treated like a child or an entire stranger. Mr. Vinton failed to satisfy her curiosity, whereupon she tossed her head and declared that it was high time such a ridiculous arrangement was terminated. Mr. Vinton made no comments upon her action. Indeed he seemed to be rather pleased with it, egging her on to more of the same kind. Finally she became angry and ended the interview in tears. Mr. Vinton then left her without the slightest sign of temper, indeed rather with the appearance of great satisfaction.

One morning a delicate little missive came for Mr. Vinton which fell into Louise's hands. She took it to him and watched him while he read it. His countenance was not to be read. Placing the note in his pocket, he went to his bedroom, and soon after Louise, who was watching him from a window, saw him go out with a suit case.

"Just what I expected," she said. "That note contained an invitation. He's gone to the country to visit some girl he's in love with."

Vinton remained away a week. When he returned, Louise asked him when he intended to be married.

"I am not engaged," he replied.

They were sitting in the library at the time, and Vinton took up a book. Louise tried in vain to keep her tongue in her head. Finally she could endure the silence no longer and asked a number of inadmissible questions. Some of them Vinton answered, others he parried, while others he received in silence. But not for a moment did he manifest any dissatisfaction with her for attempting to pry into his affairs. Finally he told her that he had been to see an invalid who had died during his absence. Louise arose and strode silently out of the room. Vinton called her back.

"If you don't mind," he said, "I am curious to know what has offended you."

"You have led me to believe what was not true."

She stood waiting for him to continue the debate, but as he only said, "Thank you very much," she went out and spent the rest of the day in her room with the door locked.

At the end of the year Vinton invited mother and daughter into the library and announced to them that he desired to terminate their present arrangement.

"And now," he continued, addressing Louise, "I will satisfy your curiosity. A year ago I wished to make a very advantageous match. The lady's characteristics I described in my advertisement. I am a theorist and have a theory about women. It is that if a man wishes to know what a woman will do under certain circumstances he must infer that she will act exactly contrary to what he would expect. I desired to test this theory and if it proved a law I would apply it to the lady I wished to marry and thus enhance my chances of success. During the past year I have applied the test to you seventy-eight times, and you have fulfilled the conditions sixty-nine times. You will readily see the advantage of having two women of like characteristics, the one to practice upon, the other"—

At this point in the theorist's exposition of his methods Louise rose from her seat and was sailing majestically out of the room when Vinton caught her about the waist and held her.

"Darling," he said, changing his tone, "there is one result of the experiment yet to be told. The practice piece became the object piece, and the object piece has passed from the problem. The invalid who died while I was away was the girl I was endeavoring to win. We never became more than strong friends, and while I was planning for the advantages that would have accrued in marrying her I was falling in love with you."

The chronicles of our vice presidents are notoriously barren of incident. This probably was the reason for the way Adlai Stevenson secured the exercise of a constitutional prerogative. It was one sleepy day toward the end of his term as vice president. The United States senate was plowing through the calendar and passing many bills. Bills are considered agreed to in the senate if no oral objection is raised after they have passed through the preliminary stages, but the usual form of asking for the yeas and nays is followed by the presiding officer. The vice president had said:

"Senators in favor of the bill will say 'Aye.'" Pause. "Contrary, 'No.'"

Not a single response.

"The vote is a tie," announced Mr. Stevenson.

The senator in charge of the bill paused on his way to the cloakroom and looked surprised.

"In case of a tie the vice president may cast the deciding vote. In the exercise of his constitutional privilege the vice president votes 'Aye.'"—New York Times.

MY FELLOW TRAMPER

[Original.]

During the season of the White Czar's first visit to Paris I was walking through Europe. I had tramped through Switzerland and climbed the Alps and was now about to descend, intending to make my way to Paris to be present at the great reception.

Pausing to take a last view from a great height, I sat down on the ground and fell to dreaming. I was recalled to myself by a soft voice behind me asking in French:

"Can you tell me, sir, how far it is to Montbard?"

I looked up expecting to see a woman. Instead the person who had addressed me was a young fellow apparently about twenty, though there was not a sign of a hair on his face, and he might have been younger or older.

"Montbard? There is Montbard directly north of us. You can't distinguish the place, for it is twenty-five miles from us in a direct line."

"So far?" with an expression of disappointment.

"I am going that way. Rest awhile, and I will go with you."

The young man sat down beside me, and we chatted for half an hour. He was one of the most attractive persons I ever met. There was so much enthusiasm in him. Everything in which he took an interest he took a deep interest. To one who has become blaze and finds most other people so, such a one is very refreshing. Besides, he was very intelligent and displayed considerable learning. One thing about him amused me. He was very illogical. Everything was felt; nothing was reasoned. At least his reasons were always absurd. For instance, he expressed a firm belief in the divine right of kings because this right was necessary as a basis for their authority.

We started down the declivity, but had not gone far before we were overtaken by a diligence, and my young man got aboard. I continued to tramp, but I confess the rest of the journey seemed dull and uninteresting.

The next evening I reached Montbard, where I found railway transportation to Paris, but was obliged to wait several hours before getting a train. Going into a cafe to get something to eat, I seated myself at a table and was looking over the menu when a familiar voice asked, "What will monsieur have?" The last time I had heard that voice was when my tramping companion bade me adieu before boarding the diligence. Looking up, I saw a waitress standing beside me, and her face was as much like the tramper as the voice. She was looking down upon me with no sign of recognition, and for the moment I considered the likeness a mere coincidence. I gave her an order for supper, but before leaving the cafe I made up my mind that I was not mistaken—the waitress was really my companion of the day before.

A week later while in Paris, where I had many friends, I attended a reception at the house of a prominent American banker, who then lived near the Bois de Boulogne. The czar had arrived, and all Paris was talking about him. As I entered the drawing room I heard a lady, whose back was toward me, say in tones that were familiar:

"Without authority from heaven he would have no more right to rule than you or I."

Moving to a position where I could catch a view of her face, I saw—my tramping companion, the waitress of Montbard.

"Who is that lady?" I asked of my host as soon as I could find him.

"The Countess Nichalowsky."

"A Polander?"

"Yes."

"Please present me."

The countess received me graciously, but without the slightest sign of recognition. I was fully aware that any reference to our former acquaintance would not meet with favor and if persisted in would be resented. I therefore refrained from mentioning either of our meetings, but led the conversation into the same channels as when we were resting on the Alps. Every topic she handled differently from her treatment of it at that time, but with even greater brilliancy. When I begged for permission to call upon her, she said, "I am very sorry, but I leave Paris tomorrow at dawn."

I returned to America by steamer from Cherbourg. I am troubled with seasickness and kept my room till the voyage was half finished. Then one day, the weather being delightful and the sea smooth, I took my steamer chair and my rug to the deck. I had scarcely emerged from the companionway when I was startled at seeing seated before me my tramping friend of the Alps, the waitress of Montbard, the Countess Nichalowsky. I had at least a right to recognize the last named personage and exclaimed:

"Why, countess!"

My words were met by a cold stare.

"You are mistaken, sir," she said in tolerable English. "You address Mme. Bourdalone of Southampton."

I apologized and passed on. The lady did not come on deck again during the voyage, but when we were docked I took a position where I could see her as she went ashore. Her maid first went on to the dock, walked back and forth with her eyes well open, then made a sign, whereupon the mistress followed.

Curiosity led me to Pinkerton's to make inquiries. They told me that they had been advised of the coming of the Countess Nichalowsky, a Polish nihilist, but too late. A plot had been discovered to assassinate the czar on his way to Paris, but had failed. The countess was implicated.

"Oh, Billy, Billy, you helped me once when I needed help! I cannot forget!"

And Geordie, groaning, "Aye, laddie, laddie!" passed out into the fading light of the early evening.

Next day no one went to work, for to all it seemed a sacred day. They carried him into the little church, and there Mr. Craig spoke of his long, hard fight and of his final victory, for he died without a fear and with love to the men who, not knowing, had been his death. And there was no bitterness in any heart, for Mr. Craig read the story of the sheep and told how gently he had taken Billy home; but, though no word was spoken, it was there the league was made again.

They laid him under the pines beside Lewis Mavor, and the miners threw sprigs of evergreen into the open grave. When Slavin, sobbing bitterly, brought his sprig, no one stopped him, though all thought it strange.

As we turned to leave the grave the light from the evening sun came softly through the gap in the mountains and, filling the valley, touched the trees and the little mound beneath with glory, and I thought of that other glory which is brighter than the sun and was not sorry that poor Billy's weary fight was over, and I could not help agreeing with Craig that it was there the league had its revenge.

As we sauntered from the grub camp to the office, where was our bed, we paused to take in the beauty of the night. The moon rode high over the peaks of the mountains, flooding the narrow valley with mellow light. Under her magic the rugged peaks softened their harsh lines and seemed to lean lovingly toward us. The dark pine masses stood silent, as in breathless adoration. The dazzling snow lay like a garment over all the open spaces in soft, waving folds and crowned every stump with a quaintly shaped nightcap. Above the camps the smoke curled up from the campfires, standing like pillars of cloud that kept watch while men slept, and high over all the deep blue night sky, with its star jewels, sprang like the roof of a great cathedral from range to range, covering us in its kindly shelter. How homelike and safe seemed the valley, with its mountain sides, its sentinel trees and arching roof of jeweled sky! Even the night seemed kindly, and friendly the stars, and the lone cry of the wolf from the deep forest seemed like the voice of a comrade.

By this time Craig was standing before her, his face deathly pale. When she came to the end of her words, he said in a voice low, sweet and thrilling with emotion:

"Ah, if you only knew! Do not make me forget myself. You do not guess what you are doing."

"What am I doing? What is there to know but that you tell me easily to go?"

She was struggling with the tears she was too proud to let him see.

He put his hands resolutely behind him, looking at her as if studying her face for the first time. Under his searching look she dropped her eyes, and the warm color came slowly up into her neck and face. Then, as if with a sudden resolve, she lifted her eyes to his and looked back at him unflinchingly.

He started, surprised, drew slowly near, put his hands upon her shoulders, surprise giving place to wild joy. She never moved her eyes. They drew him toward her. He took her face between his hands, smiled into her eyes, kissed her lips. She did not move. He stood back from her, threw up his head and laughed aloud. She came to him, put her head upon his breast and, lifting up her face, said, "Kiss me." He put his arms about her, bent down and kissed her lips again and then reverently her brow. Then, putting her back from him, but still holding both her hands, he cried:

"No, you shall not go! I shall never let you go!"

Tut Tut.

"The word 'reviver' spells the same backward or forward."

It was the frivolous man who spoke.

"Can you think of another?"

"Tut tut!" he cried contemptuously.

And they rode on in silence.

"Minne Giggle" Falls.

"Some years ago I visited an old friend of mine in Minneapolis," said a well known Milwaukee railroad man, "and he spent considerable time taking me about to show me the many interesting places in that interesting city. One day he took me out to see the famous Minnehaha falls, and after I had feasted my eyes on this beautiful work of nature he invited me to accompany him down the gulch through which the little stream flows—at least half a mile—and there called my attention to a little cascade that is an exact miniature of Minnehaha falls.

"'What do you call this cascade?' I asked of my friend.

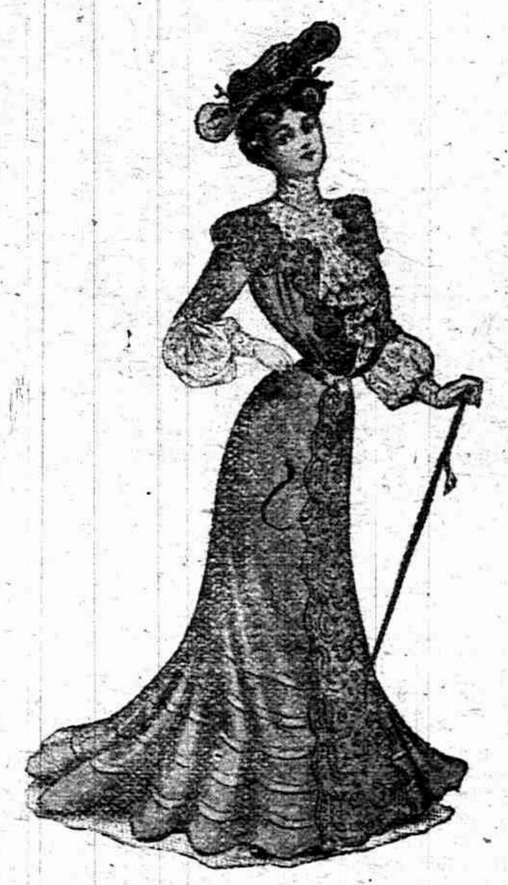
THE NEW TABLIER FRONT.

A Graceful Visiting Gown.

A particularly graceful visiting gown is a soft shade of blue cloth. The yoke and the lower part of the sleeves are of buff embroidered chiffon, while the panel front of the skirt, the berthe and the extensions from the yoke to the belt are appliqued with graceful scrolls for which Corticelli silk is employed. The lower part of the skirt is ornamented with several wide tucks. This model fully emphasizes the fact that the tablier front is to be well represented among the new gowns, not alone those intended for afternoon, but for evening wear as well. It will perhaps interest our readers to know of a recently imported skirt in which the tablier front was pre-eminent. It is cut in four divisions, each one bias and shaped to give the necessary flare. Each section is shirred to the other with tiny upstanding frills and the lower one spreads out into a very full flounce. The skirt joins the tablier at either side and the edges are finished with rosette bows of narrow black velvet ribbon, three or four strands carried from one to the other all the way down.



Took Carbolic Acid.

Battle Creek, Mich., May 1.—C. P. Anderson of Cincinnati was found dead in his room at the New Williams house last night, his death being plainly the result of carbolic acid, self-administered. It is believed that Anderson was partially demented. He has been acting strangely since he came here several days ago, and was arrested on Sunday night for scuffling with an acquaintance in the corridor of the hotel. The other man at the time prevented Anderson's taking a dose of acid, but it was not believed that he was in earnest.

Travel Like Princes.

Those who saw the special train in which H. R. A. Prince Henry of Prussia made his tour of the United States are comparing it with other trains in regular service, and it is admitted that none of the cars in the train compare favorably with the buffet, compartment and standard sleeping cars of the Pioneer Limited trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway in daily service between Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis. The people of this country have the satisfaction of knowing that at any time they cannot only travel like princes, but can get much better service.

Thumb Rings.

Men's thumb rings are no rarities to collectors. Some of the Roman specimens must have been cumbrous wear, one in the Montfaucon collection bearing the bust of Trajan's consort, Plotina, measuring over three inches across. Medieval churchmen of high degree did not allow "the largest, first and shortest of the fingers" to go unadorned. A massive gold ring was found upon the thumb of the supposed skeleton of Hilary, bishop of Chichester, who died in 1169, and the recumbent effigy of Bishop Oldham in Exeter cathedral is remarkable for the pressed together thumbs being inclosed by a single ring.

When the shrine of St. Thomas a Becket was robbed of its treasures, the famous archbishop's thumb ring, given to him by the king of France, graced with a ruby the size of a hen's egg, found its way to the thumb of bluff King Hal, and as the humor of the king is always voted just the thing we may be sure the royal hand was not the only one so decked at court. Mayors and aldermen imitated their betters. "When I was about thy years, Hal," says the fat knight, "I was not an eagle's talon in the waist. I could have crept into an alderman's thumb ring."—Chambers' Journal.

Grace Erskine was among the absent ones Wednesday and Thursday.

Mrs. Anderson, of Pittsburg, Pa., visited the high school Monday forenoon.

The following short address was given by one of the seniors upon being presented with the Junior colors, name not mentioned:

"I wear these colors in honor of the class of 1903. I also see you are very enthusiastic concerning the dog-matism of conjectional emandaions, nevertheless I do not take up a position antagonistic to my former contentions and subsequent words. I am proud and feel highly honored to be permitted or to dare take the liberty of donning these silken cords in honor of the pending class of our devoted and beloved Juniors.

Delivered with great deliberation and consideration on your especial cause and rights by a devoted classmate of the Tecumseh high school.

A Matter of History

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, popularly known as "The St. Paul road," began the use of electricity for train lighting in 1888. In that and many ways it has been a pioneer in the adoption of comforts for the traveler. In building the world famous Pioneer Limited trains a mark was set in luxury and beauty of cars that has never been equalled, and probably never will be.

Very Ill.

It is reported this morning that Gladys Sisson is very ill with appendicitis. Dr. Maxwell, of Toledo, is here in consultation with Dr. Bunnell, of Tecumseh and everything possible is being done to relieve the sufferer.

LATER—At 3:30 the young lady is reported a little better.

Writes Interesting Letters on his

TRIP TO ARIZONA

In Company with Capt. Hayden, Capt. Hayden is so far getting better, is well situated and all are pleased about him.

Plan of the new town Sole Dad, made by the HERALD special artist. The drawing was nicely made but so poorly engraved by the HERALD that it could not be reproduced.

El Paso, April 22, 1902.

Plan of one of the new town now open to the enterprising Yankee, the possibilities small but probabilities great. This illustration as made by your special artist. And is one of the many chances to make a fortune. A person could make a fortune raising jack rabbits if they could live within the city limits.

There is any quantity of sand that the wind will bring and deposit wherever you will put up a wind break. We arrived in El Paso two hours late on account of a furious sand storm that met us near Dog Canyon. Section men were kept busy clearing the track of sand drifts.

Soon after our arrival at El Paso, Will and I went over the river Mucho Rio Grande. We took the whole place by surprise, as I think they did not expect us till after lunch. At any rate the only person to welcome us was a Mexican custom official. And he only grunted. I told him in my best English that I would tell his president of our reception the first time I met him. I do not believe the block head knew who we were even then.

We visited the old Mission church claimed to be over 350 years old, built of adobe. I began to count my beads and got as far as "Now I lay me" when the rest slipped my mind. (Because I was soiling my pant knees.) There was an old Mexican duffer kneeling in the center of the floor talking to himself. The dirt on the floor would not hurt his clothes, for they were of the kind that don't show dirt beyond certain limits.

I fear that these gazelle eyed, liver complected daughters of the sister republic will capture the heart of ——. But no, there is no danger for I am too old. But I do so love to see them with baskets of dirty clothes on their heads going to the river to wash them (I mean the clothes) and earn a dime to put into the poor box to support the fat priest. He would grow thin if they did not.

The associated press agent is tormenting the life out of us for a copy of this, but we said no, that we were specials from the HERALD. And he was about to cry with disappointment when we said that to-morrow we could let him have a copy. We leave for Zimpi at 8:20 in the morning. Will says that the only use he can think of for the desert of New Mexico is that it would be a grand place for piano practice.

Going west from El Paso,
April 23, 1902.

We have decided never to travel "incog." again for one meets so many embarrassments; as an illustration: While sitting in the lobby of Hotel Sheldon at El Paso quietly smoking the pipe of peace with all the world and Texas. two very nicely dressed gentlemen came up and said, "Well, well, Governor, how do you do." With my most polite bow I took his proffered hand and told him I was sorry not to have the pleasure of his acquaintance. "Why, Governor, have you forgotten me?" "My dear sir, I am not governor of Texas," I replied but a judge from Michigan." He was so ready with his apologies I decided not to call him out, although he richly deserved it. At any rate he must settle with the governor of Texas. Will laughed and said "That's one good one on you."

For about fifty miles west of El Paso is where John Milton got the idea of Paradise Lost. Hills, mountains and valleys as bare of vegetation as a sugar coated pill and HOT does not half tell it. Now we are up 4684 feet on a level Mesa. From the north side of the car one can look across this level desert to the mountain peaks miles away. The air here is delightful and the motion of the train gives us a pleasant breeze.

Now at 1 p. m. we are crossing a desert for sure; for miles there is not even a sage brush. One is reminded of human life, drifting, drifting on and on like this restless sand and for what? "Queen sabe!" In the distance is a lake of blue water, we can see reflection of trees and mountain peaks in its smooth surface. We will soon be at its shores and what a relief to the eye to have a change after hours of this sameness; it is gone and nothing but sand is left. Will feels the altitude but we will soon be on the level of our fellow beings.

Take the map of New Mexico and you can easily find Densing. Come here and you will find the town covered with a cactus stump. Alas what delusive pictures are made by the liberal use of printer's ink. We saw three prairie "pullmans" to-day drawn by six horses each and loaded with human freight and their outfit. They must either be fleeing from justice or getting acclimated for the life to come. There has been no rain here since the 15th of last January. Rather dry for even a teetotaler. Eh?

At Lordsburgh, N. M., we find a beautiful valley, and time will make it bloom like the Raisin Valley. There are two smelters here, so we infer that the root of evil lies buried in these hills around about.

Mrs. Pullman is following us just two cars in the rear, but she is very civil. We have not been annoyed a particle. At Dragoon Station we are 4614 feet above our neighbors. The next 55 miles will drop us to 2390 feet, the next 75 miles down almost to the common level 1173 feet. If we continue on our downward course to Volcano Springs we would be 263 feet below sea level. We decline with thanks. This side of the earth is good enough for us and we have an idea that that kind of a spring is not the fountain of perpetual youth. At Tuscan. We will say good-night. Now don't say we ought to have said it long ago, that would not be polite. Here we are at our journey's end at 6 a. m. April 24.

Judging from first appearances, if Paradise was lost in the hills and desert of New Mexico, here it was regained. There seems to be an irrigation system on a large scale. The large fields of wheat, Alfalfa, vineyards are a very agreeable change from the glare of the desert sands.

I shall not inflict any more punishment on you, as I shall leave for home Saturday next at 5 p. m.

P. S. Will is resting on the bed, eats well but cannot walk but little. He did walk up from the depot two and a half blocks and carried his small grip and overcoat.

A Pointer on Bone Setting

A bone that has been misplaced for a number of years cannot be moved from its location without a forcible or surgical operation. After a bone is moved from its proper place and is long standing it forms for itself an artificial socket but by working such bones with the hand they can be loosened by the operation of the hand as a post in the ground two feet deep. It can be swayed to and fro like a tooth in your mouth and beyond this it cannot be moved either way to the right or left until the adhesion and gristle and formation have been removed.

Now in regard to the knee of Mr. Chas. Dillon, of Hudson. He had two abscesses back of the knee, which caused the limb to be swollen and inflamed condition, and, every effort to relieve this condition was a failure until he came to Prof. Wallace, of Adrian, and this is what different doctors referred to in the letter thought to be honeycombed bone. Prof. Wallace never treated him for anything but this and curvature of the spine that caused him to stoop over. His friends and physicians mistook it and called it consumption. Prof. Wallace cured him of that. He is a well man and visited Prof. Wallace's sanitarium yesterday in the best of health and said he did not mean to contradict anything he had said in Prof. Wallace's favor, after all of the above trouble mentioned that was cured. He came back in a year afterwards and took one treatment for the stiffness of the knee joint with the same results he now exhibits. Had he continued, the stiffness in the knee would be all gone now.

So, Mr. Dillon and all his friends have known over three years ago he had no honey-combed bone in his leg. The well known people had they known the history of the case they never would have been led into the trap. I will now leave the matter with the gentleman who employed me, Mr. Lon O'Mealey, of this city, and if he says this is not true, I will have nothing more to say.

This is the case that was given up in Ann Arbor and Detroit as a hopeless case without an operation.

MUST BELIEVE IT.

When well known Tecumseh People tell it so plainly.

When public endorsement is made by a representive citizen of Tecumseh the proof is positive. You must believe it. Read this testimony. Every backache sufferer, every man, woman or child with any kidney trouble will find profit in the reading.

Mr. W. C. Wetherell, agent for buggies, harness and other machinery, place of business southwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I cannot praise Doan's Kidney Pills highly enough, for they have been a great friend to me. Some years ago I was an expert at sheep shearing and did a lot of that work. Everybody knows it is very hard on the back and it finally brought on a severe pain across the loins. Nothing did any good until a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I got a box and the treatment gave immediate relief. When I finished the box the trouble was entirely removed. If I feel any symptoms of a return a resort to Doan's Kidney Pills quickly wards off the attack. They are a reliable remedy and I consistently recommend them." Just such emphatic endorsement is plentiful in Tecumseh. Call at C. A. Wright's drug store and ask him what his customers report.

Building Superstitions.

In remote times a sacrifice of some kind was always offered at the completion of a building, either public or private. Sacrifices were not only offered at the completion of structures of all kinds. The foundations themselves were usually laid in blood, whether the structure was a castle, bridge, cottage or church. Originally—tracing the subject back to heathenish times—the sacrifice was offered to the god under whose protection the building was placed. In Christian times the bloody rite was retained, but was given another significance. In those days it was generally believed that no edifice would stand unless the cornerstone was laid in mortar mixed with blood. Usually the blood was obtained by sacrificing a dog, a pig, a wolf, a black cock or a goat, and not unfrequently some malefactor's blood was poured out to make the ceremony more impressive.

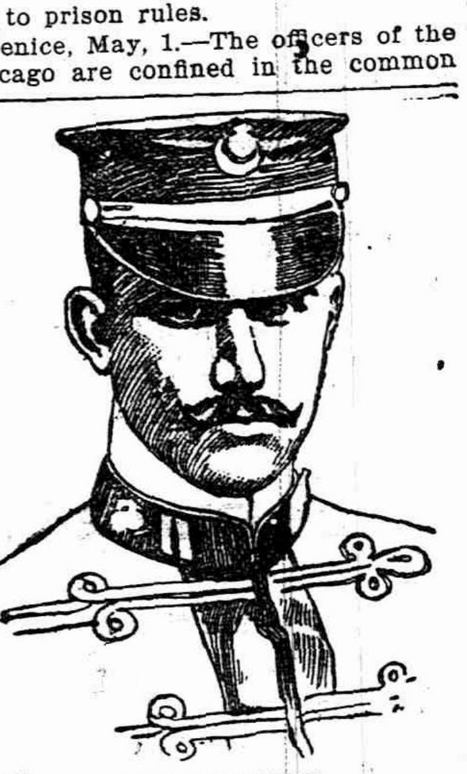
Men of Cruiser Chicago Must Stay in Prison.

Rome, May 1.—The officers of the United States cruiser Chicago, who were arrested at Venice, remain in prison there. An application for their discharge has been rejected. The Italian law does not allow the court to grant pardon in cases of assaults on the police.

The commander of the Chicago continues to keep all his men on board, to avoid further trouble. The officers who are sentenced to imprisonment for disorderly conduct are being treated with a certain regard, but according to prison rules.

Venice, May, 1.—The officers of the Chicago are confined in the common prison of St. Mark. They are all in one room.



CAPTAIN WYNNE.

Officer of the marine corps arrested with several of the sailors of the cruiser Chicago for disorderly conduct in Venice and sentenced to four months' imprisonment.

Washington, May 1.—The state department has begun the exercise of its good offices in the interests of the officers of the Chicago. Secretary Hay has communicated by cable with Mr. Meyer, the United States ambassador, on this subject and good results are hoped for. It is realized that the case is one requiring very delicate handling to avoid wounding Italian pride, but the belief prevails that the Italian government will respond with a magnanimous spirit to an open appeal for clemency for the young officers.

No More Bandits in Samar.

Washington, May 1.—A cablegram from Rear-Admiral Rodgers, commander-in-chief of the United States naval forces on the Asiatic station, says, under date of Yokohama, April 30: "Wildes reports 700 insurgents with 75 rifles surrendered at Catbalogan on the 27th. No more organized bandits in arms in Samar. Evans reported on the 27th and hoisted his flag on the Kentucky on the 28th. Harris has been ordered to duty as temporary governor of Olongapo." Rear-Admiral Evans relieved Rear-Admiral Kempff in command of the second division of the Asiatic fleet.

Congressman Butler Sued.

Washington, May 1.—Congressman J. J. Butler of Missouri is made the defendant in a suit for $10,000 damages instituted in the District supreme court by August Scholz, a waiter at a local hotel. Scholz alleges that, while serving the Missourian the latter assaulted him. He says Mr. Butler used vile and abusive language toward him and struck him a heavy blow with a water bottle.

Carrie Nation Lectures to an Adrian Audience.

Adrian, Mich., May 1.—Mrs. Carrie Nation, ex-saloon smasher, lectured at Whitney's opera house last night to a smashing big house. The cozy hall was crowded with people at 10 cents a head. Carrie's audience seemed sympathetic, and responded to her scoring of republicans, democrats, populists and church members with hearty applause.

Mrs. Nation spoke an hour and 15 minutes, and claimed to be using the proceeds of her lecture toward establishing a home for drunkard's wives. She practically admitted that she started her peculiar campaign for the sake of notoriety, but says she has ceased the smashing warfare and now talks the straight politics of the prohibition party.

Carrie happened over in Monroe county to see a relative, and her admirers here hastily arranged for the lecture on one day's advertising.

At the close of her lecture Mrs. Nation offered for sale emblems in shape of miniature hatchets, studded with rhinestones, at 25 cents and 50 cents each. She says she is soon to meet "Doc" Rose of Ann Arbor, whom she called the educated saloonist, in joint debate.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parent did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops. Jessie Pinkey Hall, Springville, Ala. This remedy is for sale by J. J. Orr.

Caution.

This is not a gentle word—but when you think how liable you are not to purchase for 75c the only remedy universally known and a remedy that has had the largest sale of any medicine in the world since 1868 for the cure and treatment of Consumption and Throat and Lung troubles without losing its great popularity all these years, you will be thankful we called your attention to Boschee's German Syrup. There are so many ordinary cough remedies made by druggists and others that are cheap and good for light colds perhaps but for severe Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup—and especially for Consumption, where there is difficult expectoration and coughing during the nights and mornings, there is nothing like German Syrup, Sold by all druggist in the civilized world. G. G. GREEN, Woodbury, N. Y.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE

I have had occasion to use your Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine and am pleased to say that I never used anything for stock that gave half as good satisfaction. I heartily recommend it to all owners of stock.
J. B. BELSHER, St. Louis, Mo.

Sick stock or poultry should not eat cheap stock food any more than sick persons should expect to be cured by food. When your stock and poultry are sick give them medicine. Don't stuff them with worthless stock foods. Unload the bowels and stir up the torpid liver and the animal will be cured, if it be possible to cure it. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine unloads the bowels and stirs up the torpid liver. It cures every malady of stock if taken in time. Secure a 25-cent can of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine and it will pay for itself ten times over. Horses work better. Cows give more milk. Hogs gain flesh. And hens lay more eggs. It solves the problem of making as much blood, flesh and energy as possible out of the smallest amount of food consumed. Buy a can from your dealer.

Music In a Barber's Shop.

If we go from the gentleman's parlor to the barber's shop of the sixteenth century, we find unmistakable evidences of the popularity of music. People would seem to have had more time in those days than now and do not appear to have minded waiting as much as brisker moderns, and so the barber provided means to amuse those who were waiting their turn. For this purpose he had the virginals in one corner, the virginal being a stringed instrument, the precursor of our piano, in which by pressing keys like our piano keys the strings were struck not by a hammer, as in our piano, but by a quill or elastic piece of wood, of leather or of metal. A virginal of Elizabeth's time is still preserved in the South Kensington museum in England.—Lippincott's.

CITIZENS WANT GRAND JURY

Niles, Mich., May 5.—The citizens of Niles are calling for a grand jury to investigate the charges of corruption that are rife and to look into the matter of securing saloon bondsmen, which has been going by default in this county for years. It is claimed in this county for years. It is claimed in many instances that the proprietors of saloons and their sureties are not good for a judgment should one be rendered against them.

Mayor Baldwin has created a sensation by threatening to arrest for perjury the sureties of some local dealers. The council approved the bonds of these dealers at a meeting held last Monday night, in the face of the fact that one of the aldermen showed conclusively that at least one surety in each case was not worth the property stated in their affidavit. The mayor vetoed the action of the council, but the saloon men defy the mayor in this matter, claiming that the veto is illegal, the matter having been passed upon by direct vote.

The mayor in turn declares that if the council overrides his veto tonight that he will cause the arrest of the sureties. The saloon men restort by declaring that if the mayor so proceeds they will bring him to time for allowing public funds, raised for a specific purpose, to be diverted for purposes other than that for which they were raised, as has been done in the case of the moneys expended for bonuses in getting factories to locate here.

Several ex-aldermen declare that they were approached and offered large sums of money for their votes by dealers in stone crushers and street rollers. The city council recently purchased a stone crusher and street roller for $4,600, and the purchase was most unpopular. The people now demand that the matter be investigated, inasmuch as the purchase price has not yet been paid. The attention of Circuit Judge Coolidge has been called to the matter, and he is of opinion that the transaction can be repudiated if it can be proved that boodle was offered, and that the dealers will be compelled to take back their wares.

At a public meeting recently held, it was announced by public officials that price of the machines in question. Diligent inquiry reveals the fact that such is not the case. The council gave the dealers notes, the first of which falls due next fall, according to the contract entered into.

Mrs. Nation Invades Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., May 5.—Carrie Nation, the hatchetur, invaded Detroit Sunday. Though she did no smashing with her hatchet, she pursued her usual course of attacking several persons in her familiar manner on various scores of smoking, etc. At 3 o'clock she lectured at the Grand River Avenue Baptist church. The edifice was crowded and many were unable to gain admittance. Nearly 2,000 people heard Mrs. Nation speak. In introducing her, Mrs. Andrus referred to Carrie as a mother-hearted, whole-souled woman, fighting the fictitiously legalized saloon. Carrie waded in, without any preliminary frills. For an hour or so she entertained her audience with assaults, a few stabs at the political parties after her usual manner, then departed on the electric road for Ann Arbor.

Oldest Oddfellow Dead.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 5.—The oldest Oddfellow in the state, Jonathan Sprague, died at his home here Sunday afternoon of puenmonia. In 1860 he became grand patriarch of the grand encampment and was Michigan's representative to the sovereign grand lodge of the United States in 1861-2 and '68. He has taken prominent parts in every grand encampment since 1848.

A GALLANT VICTORY

Gen. Davis' Men Take Moro Fort After Hard Fight.

FOUGHT HAND TO HAND

Many Moros Killed—Americans Lose One Officer, Seven Men—Greatest Credit for the Victory Falls to Lieut. Cal. Baldwin and Men.

Manila, May 5.—Gen. Davis, the commander of the American forces in the island of Mindanao, cables that the 84 Moros who survived the attack and capture of the Moro fort by American soldiers in Mindanao Saturday have surrendered and that the sultan of Bayan, Rajah Muda, Sultan Panda Padto and a number of the leading Dattos were killed in the engagement.

The assault on the principal fort, reports Gen. Davis, was one of the most gallant performances of American arms in the Philippines, and the regiment of Lieut.-Col. Frank D. Baldwin, the Fourth infantry, deserves the greatest credit for its conduct. The men of the Fourth infantry had a hand to hand struggle with the Moros in the ditches, under the walls of the fort. When the position was captured these ditches were found to be lined with Moro dead.

Gen. Davis characterizes the rifle fire of the Americans as excellent, and says he has never witnessed a performance excelling the capture of the Moro fort in gallantry and grit.

Gen. Davis says also it is his painful duty to announce that the overthrow of Moro power was not accomplished without severe loss to the Americans. One officer and seven enlisted men were killed, while four officers and 39 enlisted men were wounded.

After the 84 Moros who survived the assault had marched out of the fort eight others who were concealed there made an unsuccessful break for liberty. Some of the Moro wounded tried to stab the American soldiers who were succoring them. It is impossible to give total of Moro dead, as a number of them are lying in the tall grass. The fort was defended by 300 men. Its capture saves a siege, and it would have been impossible to carry the position without scaling ladders.

Gen. Davis further reports his intention of retaining his prisoners until the few adjacent Moro forts are occupied. Then, with the consent of Gen. Chaffee, he will retain ten of his principal captives as hostages and release the others.

The American forces who attacked the fort numbered 470 men and four mountain guns.

EXPENSE OF WAR

Office Finds It Hard to Report on Philippine Campaign.

SECRETARY ROOT EXPLAINS

The Resolution Was Passed by Senate on April 17—The Department Machinery Will Begin the Work as Soon as Senate Demands It.

Washington, May 3.—Secretary Root s writing to Senator Culberson an explanation of the reason why the department thus far has made no response to the senate resolution adopted April 17, calling for exact and detailed statements of the cost of the war in the Philippines. This is in answer to criticisms made by certain senators, to the effect that the department was purposely suppressing information on this subject.

The secretary will show that from the moment the resolution was received, every one of the supply bureaus of the department has been engaged in collecting material for the answer. As soon, however, as the United States senate, by resolution, called for the information the entire machinery of the department was put in motion to meet the demand.

The difficulties in the way of making a satisfactory response were enormous, and in many instances it was found actually impossible to answer specific questions by approximate statements. This is true, notwithstanding the fact that every one of the depot and supply officers here and in the Philippines have been called upon, wherever they are, for the facts desired. The department knows exactly where every cent of expenditure went, and those figures are to be had through the auditor for the war department, but the difficulty in the case is to show how the supplies and expenditures were distributed. Another point that further complicates the whole interrogation is the requirement of law that the army shall be maintained at a minimum strength of 59,000 men. There is no such force in the United States now, but if the surplus were not in the Philippines then the war department would have to quarter and supply the men here, so that the item of expense on that item would remain constant, regardless of the Philippine insurrection, at least, up to the total of 59,000 men, and the question arises whether Secretary Root, in his answer, shall consider as expenses attributable to the Philippine trouble only the cost of maintaining the army strength above that figure.

Washington, May 3.—A lively debate was precipitated in the senate Friday by Mr. Pritchard, in the course of a discussion of the Philippine bill. He suggested that some of the methods employed by the opponents of the bill in this country ought to be reformed. Mr. Pritchard charged that the "red shirts" rode over the state of North Carolina to terrorize republican voters. Mr. Simmons denied that statement and insisted that the red shirts never had committed any unlawful act, and as a matter of fact intended only to organize the voters of the state. The debate waxed warm, Mr. Pritchard declaring that he had been approached by an emissary of the democratic party with a proposition to drop the impeachment proceedings against republican judges in North Carolina if he would nolle prosequi cases pending in the courts against certain democrats for election frauds. Mr. Simmons unqualifiedly denied that such a proposition had been made by any of the democratic party. The Rosebud Indian reservation bill and the sundry civil bill were again considered, but not completed.

Train Robbers Frightened Away.

Eureka Springs, Ark., May 3.—An attempt to hold up the St. Louis-'Frisco express was made near Seligman, the first station north of here. Two men boarded the train there, leveling their revolvers at the engineer and ordered him to reverse. When the train slowed up the robbers became frightened and fled into the timber. Two suspects have been arrested at Seligman.

Roosevelt Will Campaign.

He is to make several speeches during the coming congressional campaign and has conferred with several leaders in the senate and house with regard to the treatment of certain subjects which are expected to become issues in the political canvass.

THREE NEW STATES.

Question of Their Admission Comes Before House This Week.

Washington, May 5.—Republican senators this week will relieve the democrats of the necessity of supplying all the speakers in the senate on the Philippine government bill. They will lead off when the bill shall be laid before the senate at 2 o'clock today. Senator Lodge, chairman of the committee on the Philippines, will open for them with a set speech in support of the administration's Philippine policy. Other republican senators who have indicated a purpose to address the senate on the pending question are Messrs. Foraker, Spooner, Burton, McComas and Platt of Connecticut. The democratic members of the committee o nthe Philippines have no fixed plans.

Other measures which will receive attention during the week are the sundry civil appropriation bill and the bill providing for the opening to settlement of the Rosebud Indian reservation in South Dakota. The resolution providing for the recall of Major Gardener lost its position of advantage Saturday and is now on the calendar, but the chances are that it will be revived and that it will receive further attention.

The principal feature of the program in the house this week will be the bill to place three new stars in the American flag. The omnibus bill for the admission of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona to statehood will be called up on Thursday. There is considerable opposition to the bill on the republican side of the house on the ground that the territories are not yet fitted for statehood, but the friends of the bill entertain no doubt of its passage. The democrats in caucus agreed to give it their united support, and at least 60 republican votes are counted on. Today is District of Columbia day. After the statehood bill is disposed of war claims will be given attention and the naval appropriation bill will be taken up. Three important measures of general legislation—the Heil financial bill, terminating the coinage of silver dollars; the Ray anti-anarchy bill, and the Shattuc bill, codifying and extending the immigration laws—are to be taken up whenever opportunity occurs.

U. S. AGAINST THEM ALL.

Washington, May 5.—"American goods have an established reputation in China and are preferred to all other foreign articles."

This statement appears in an interesting extract from "Commercial relation of the United States for 1901," which was given out today by Mr. Frederic Emory, chief of the bureau of foreign commerce of the state department. Novelties of all kinds find ready sale in China, the wealthy classes in particular taking pride in possessing the latest products of ingenuity. In their yamens are found phonographs, magic lanterns, music work for their amusement. Watches and clocks are extensively sold. There is an increase in the use of American flour. The Chinese procure their wate rsupply from wells by the primitive method of attaching a jar or bucket to the end of a long bamboo pole and dipping it out. The substitution of pumps, not too expensive, it is said, would appeal to the practical sense of the Chinese. Our piece goods have obtained a strong foothold in Manchuria and throughout China.

American capital is being invested in various enterprises in China. An American company has applied for permission to run a line of passenger and freight steamers between Canton Hong Chow and Hong Kong. Concessions for mining gold, silver, copper and antimony ores have been granted by the board of mines to American, French and German parties.

Foreigners who go to China to manage industrial enterprises encounter serious obstacles, it is stated. According to a decree, the Chinese retain controlling interest in railroad and other concessions. They get beyond their depth, however, it is stated, when they attempt to manage such enterprises, and therefore secure foreign superintendents for their undertakings.

The Way of the World.

Funny world we live in. A man who has six horses standing idle in a stable walked two miles out in the country on a little matter of business a day or two ago, while another man who had no horses and very little money hired a team to go the same distance. This was an actual occurrence and shows the perversity of human nature. He who has the facilities for driving prefers to walk, while he who could much better prefer to walk and has no team goes and hires one. Men are crazy to own a team, and it soon becomes bore to give the horse necessary exercise. It has always been thus and, we presume, always will be.

IS IT A SCANDAL?

Niles' Mayor is Having Trouble With Council and Saloons.

CITIZENS WANT GRAND JURY

Niles, Mich., May 5.—The citizens of Niles are calling for a grand jury to investigate the charges of corruption that are rife and to look into the matter of securing saloon bondsmen, which has been going by default in this county for years. It is claimed in this county for years. It is claimed in many instances that the proprietors of saloons and their sureties are not good for a judgment should one be rendered against them.

Mayor Baldwin has created a sensation by threatening to arrest for perjury the sureties of some local dealers. The council approved the bonds of these dealers at a meeting held last Monday night, in the face of the fact that one of the aldermen showed conclusively that at least one surety in each case was not worth the property stated in their affidavit. The mayor vetoed the action of the council, but the saloon men defy the mayor in this matter, claiming that the veto is illegal, the matter having been passed upon by direct vote.

The mayor in turn declares that if the council overrides his veto tonight that he will cause the arrest of the sureties. The saloon men restort by declaring that if the mayor so proceeds they will bring him to time for allowing public funds, raised for a specific purpose, to be diverted for purposes other than that for which they were raised, as has been done in the case of the moneys expended for bonuses in getting factories to locate here.

Several ex-aldermen declare that they were approached and offered large sums of money for their votes by dealers in stone crushers and street rollers. The city council recently purchased a stone crusher and street roller for $4,600, and the purchase was most unpopular. The people now demand that the matter be investigated, inasmuch as the purchase price has not yet been paid. The attention of Circuit Judge Coolidge has been called to the matter, and he is of opinion that the transaction can be repudiated if it can be proved that boodle was offered, and that the dealers will be compelled to take back their wares.

At a public meeting recently held, it was announced by public officials that $1,500 has been paid on the purchase price of the machines in question. Diligent inquiry reveals the fact that such is not the case. The council gave the dealers notes, the first of which falls due next fall, according to the contract entered into.

In introducing her, Mrs. Andrus referred to Carrie as a mother-hearted, whole-souled woman, fighting the fictitiously legalized saloon. Carrie waded in, without any preliminary frills. For an hour or so she entertained her audience with assaults, a few stabs at the political parties after her usual manner, then departed on the electric road for Ann Arbor.

John H. Murphy, a young farmer near Midland, has been declared insane. The malady is said to have been brought on by a wordy quarrel which he had with a neighbor.

A GALLANT VICTORY

FOUGHT HAND TO HAND

Many Moros Killed—Americans Lose One Officer, Seven Men—Greatest Credit for the Victory Falls to Lieut. Cal. Baldwin and Men.

Manila, May 5.—Gen. Davis, the commander of the American forces in the island of Mindanao, cables that the 84 Moros who survived the attack and capture of the Moro fort by American soldiers in Mindanao Saturday have surrendered and that the sultan of Bayan, Rajah Muda, Sultan Panda Padto and a number of the leading Dattos were killed in the engagement.

The assault on the principal fort, reports Gen. Davis, was one of the most gallant performances of American arms in the Philippines, and the regiment of Lieut.-Col. Frank D. Baldwin, the Fourth infantry, deserves the greatest credit for its conduct. The men of the Fourth infantry had a hand to hand struggle with the Moros in the ditches, under the walls of the fort. When the position was captured these ditches were found to be lined with Moro dead.

Gen. Davis characterizes the rifle fire of the Americans as excellent, and says he has never witnessed a performance excelling the capture of the Moro fort in gallantry and grit.

Gen. Davis says also it is his painful duty to announce that the overthrow of Moro power was not accomplished without severe loss to the Americans. One officer and seven enlisted men were killed, while four officers and 39 enlisted men were wounded.

After the 84 Moros who survived the assault had marched out of the fort eight others who were concealed there made an unsuccessful break for liberty. Some of the Moro wounded tried to stab the American soldiers who were succoring them. It is impossible to give total of Moro dead, as a number of them are lying in the tall grass. The fort was defended by 300 men. Its capture saves a siege, and it would have been impossible to carry the position without scaling ladders.

Gen. Davis further reports his intention of retaining his prisoners until the few adjacent Moro forts are occupied. Then, with the consent of Gen. Chaffee, he will retain ten of his principal captives as hostages and release the others.

The American forces who attacked the fort numbered 470 men and four mountain guns.

EXPENSE OF WAR

Office Finds It Hard to Report on Philippine Campaign.

SECRETARY ROOT EXPLAINS

The Resolution Was Passed by Senate on April 17—The Department Machinery Will Begin the Work as Soon as Senate Demands It.

Washington, May 3.—Secretary Root s writing to Senator Culberson an explanation of the reason why the department thus far has made no response to the senate resolution adopted April 17, calling for exact and detailed statements of the cost of the war in the Philippines. This is in answer to criticisms made by certain senators, to the effect that the department was purposely suppressing information on this subject.

The secretary will show that from the moment the resolution was received, every one of the supply bureaus of the department has been engaged in collecting material for the answer. As soon, however, as the United States senate, by resolution, called for the information the entire machinery of the department was put in motion to meet the demand.

The difficulties in the way of making a satisfactory response were enormous, and in many instances it was found actually impossible to answer specific questions by approximate statements. This is true, notwithstanding the fact that every one of the depot and supply officers here and in the Philippines have been called upon, wherever they are, for the facts desired. The department knows exactly where every cent of expenditure went, and those figures are to be had through the auditor for the war department, but the difficulty in the case is to show how the supplies and expenditures were distributed. Another point that further complicates the whole interrogation is the requirement of law that the army shall be maintained at a minimum strength of 59,000 men. There is no such force in the United States now, but if the surplus were not in the Philippines then the war department would have to quarter and supply the men here, so that the item of expense on that item would remain constant, regardless of the Philippine insurrection, at least, up to the total of 59,000 men, and the question arises whether Secretary Root, in his answer, shall consider as expenses attributable to the Philippine trouble only the cost of maintaining the army strength above that figure.

Pritchard and Simmons Debated.

Washington, May 3.—A lively debate was precipitated in the senate Friday by Mr. Pritchard, in the course of a discussion of the Philippine bill. He suggested that some of the methods employed by the opponents of the bill in this country ought to be reformed. Mr. Pritchard charged that the "red shirts" rode over the state of North Carolina to terrorize republican voters. Mr. Simmons denied that statement and insisted that the red shirts never had committed any unlawful act, and as a matter of fact intended only to organize the voters of the state. The debate waxed warm, Mr. Pritchard declaring that he had been approached by an emissary of the democratic party with a proposition to drop the impeachment proceedings against republican judges in North Carolina if he would nolle prosequi cases pending in the courts against certain democrats for election frauds. Mr. Simmons unqualifiedly denied that such a proposition had been made by any of the democratic party. The Rosebud Indian reservation bill and the sundry civil bill were again considered, but not completed.

Experiment Cost Two Lives.

Spring Valley, Wis., May 3.—Perle Hill, living near here, attempted to boil together some kerosene and lard. The mixture exploded and Hill's wife and one child were burned to death. Hill has one of his hands burned off and four other children were seriously injured. The house and contents were destroyed.

Train Robbers Frightened Away.

Eureka Springs, Ark., May 3.—An attempt to hold up the St. Louis-'Frisco express was made near Seligman, the first station north of here. Two men boarded the train there, leveling their revolvers at the engineer and ordered him to reverse. When the train slowed up the robbers became frightened and fled into the timber. Two suspects have been arrested at Seligman.

Roosevelt Will Campaign.

Washington, May 3.—President Roosevelt has decided on an unprecedented course. He is to make several speeches during the coming congressional campaign and has conferred with several leaders in the senate and house with regard to the treatment of certain subjects which are expected to become issues in the political canvass.

Speculated With U. S. Money.

Washington, May 3.—H. A. Barlows, the disbursing clerk of the United States census office, has been summarily removed as the result of the discovery of a shortage in his accounts. Barrows was subjected to rigid examinations and he gave the amount of his discrepancy as $7,400 and credited the trouble to speculation.

THREE NEW STATES.

Question of Their Admission Comes Before House This Week.

Washington, May 5.—Republican senators this week will relieve the democrats of the necessity of supplying all the speakers in the senate on the Philippine government bill. They will lead off when the bill shall be laid before the senate at 2 o'clock today. Senator Lodge, chairman of the committee on the Philippines, will open for them with a set speech in support of the administration's Philippine policy. Other republican senators who have indicated a purpose to address the senate on the pending question are Messrs. Foraker, Spooner, Burton, McComas and Platt of Connecticut. The democratic members of the committee o nthe Philippines have no fixed plans.

Other measures which will receive attention during the week are the sundry civil appropriation bill and the bill providing for the opening to settlement of the Rosebud Indian reservation in South Dakota. The resolution providing for the recall of Major Gardener lost its position of advantage Saturday and is now on the calendar, but the chances are that it will be revived and that it will receive further attention.

The principal feature of the program in the house this week will be the bill to place three new stars in the American flag. The omnibus bill for the admission of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona to statehood will be called up on Thursday. There is considerable opposition to the bill on the republican side of the house on the ground that the territories are not yet fitted for statehood, but the friends of the bill entertain no doubt of its passage. The democrats in caucus agreed to give it their united support, and at least 60 republican votes are counted on. Today is District of Columbia day. After the statehood bill is disposed of war claims will be given attention and the naval appropriation bill will be taken up. Three important measures of general legislation—the Heil financial bill, terminating the coinage of silver dollars; the Ray anti-anarchy bill, and the Shattuc bill, codifying and extending the immigration laws—are to be taken up whenever opportunity occurs.

U. S. AGAINST THEM ALL.

Washington, May 5.—"American goods have an established reputation in China and are preferred to all other foreign articles."

This statement appears in an interesting extract from "Commercial relation of the United States for 1901," which was given out today by Mr. Frederic Emory, chief of the bureau of foreign commerce of the state department. Novelties of all kinds find ready sale in China, the wealthy classes in particular taking pride in possessing the latest products of ingenuity. In their yamens are found phonographs, magic lanterns, music boxes, cameras and other articles, which appeal to their curiosity and work for their amusement. Watches and clocks are extensively sold. There is an increase in the use of American flour. The Chinese procure their water supply from wells by the primitive method of attaching a jar or bucket to the end of a long bamboo pole and dipping it out. The substitution of pumps, not too expensive, it is said, would appeal to the practical sense of the Chinese. Our piece goods have obtained a strong foothold in Manchuria and throughout China.

American capital is being invested in various enterprises in China. An American company has applied for permission to run a line of passenger and freight steamers between Canton Hong Chow and Hong Kong. Concessions for mining gold, silver, copper and antimony ores have been granted by the board of mines to American, French and German parties.

Foreigners who go to China to manage industrial enterprises encounter serious obstacles, it is stated. According to a decree, the Chinese retain controlling interest in railroad and other concessions. They get beyond their depth, however, it is stated, when they attempt to manage such enterprises, and therefore secure foreign superintendents for their undertakings.

The Way of the World.

Funny world we live in. A man who has six horses standing idle in a stable walked two miles out in the country on a little matter of business a day or two ago, while another man who had no horses and very little money hired a team to go the same distance. This was an actual occurrence and shows the perversity of human nature. He who has the facilities for driving prefers to walk, while he who could much better prefer to walk and has no team goes and hires one. Men are crazy to own a team, and it soon becomes a bore to give the horse necessary exercise. It has always been thus and, we presume, always will be.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

BLACK ROCK

By
RALPH

CHAPTER I.

CHRISTMAS EVE IN A LUMBER CAMP.

IT was due to a mysterious dispensation of Providence and a good deal to Leslie Graeme that I found myself in the heart of the Selkirks for my Christmas eve as the year 1882 was dying. It had been my plan to spend my Christmas far away in Toronto with such bohemian and boon companions as could be found in that cosmopolitan and kindly city. But Leslie Graeme changed all that, for, discovering me in the village of Black Rock, with my traps all packed, waiting for the stage to start for the Landing, thirty miles away, he bore down upon me with resistless force, and I found myself recovering from my surprise only after we had gone in his lumber sleigh some six miles on our way to his camp up in the mountains. I was surprised and much delighted, though I would not allow him to think so, to find that his old time power over me was still there. He could always in the old varsity days—dear, wild days—make me do what he liked. He was so handsome and so reckless, brilliant in his class work and the prince of halfbacks on the Rugby field and with such power of fascination as would "extract the heart out of a wheelbarrow," as Barney Lundy used to say. And thus it was that I found myself just three weeks later—I was to have spent two or three days—on the afternoon of the 24th of December, standing in Graeme's Lumber Camp No. 2, wondering at myself. But I did not regret my changed plans, for in those three weeks I had raided a cinnamon bear's den and had wakened up a grizzly. But I shall let the grizzly finish the tale. He probably sees more humor in it than I.

The camp stood in a little clearing and consisted of a group of three long, low shanties, with smaller shacks near them, all built of heavy, unhewn logs, with door and window in each. The grub camp, with cook shed attached, stood in the middle of the clearing; at a little distance was the sleeping camp with the office built against it, and about a hundred yards away on the other side of the clearing stood the stables and near them the smiddy. The mountains rose grandly on every side, throwing up their great peaks into the sky. The clearing in which the camp stood was hewn out of a dense pine forest that filled the valley and climbed half way up the mountain sides and then frayed out in scattered and stunted trees.

It was one of those wonderful Canadian winter days, bright and with a touch of sharpness in the air that did not chill, but warmed the blood like drafts of wine. The men were up in the woods, and the shrill scream of the bluejay flashing across the open, the impudent chatter of the red squirrel from the top of the grub camp and the pert chirp of the whisky jack hopping about on the rubbish heap, with the long, lone cry of the wolf far down the valley, only made the silence felt the more.

As I stood drinking in with all my soul the glorious beauty and silence of mountain and forest, with the Christmas feeling stealing into me, Graeme came out from his office and, catching sight of me, called out, "Glorious Christmas weather, old chap!" and then, coming nearer, "Must you go tomorrow?"

"I fear so," I replied, knowing well that the Christmas feeling was on him too.

"I wish I were going with you," he said quietly.

I turned eagerly to persuade him, but at the look of suffering in his face the words died on my lips, for we both were thinking of the awful night of horror when all his bright, brilliant life crashed down about him in black ruin and shame. I could only throw my arm over his shoulder and stand silent beside him. A sudden jingle of bells roused him and, giving himself a little shake, he exclaimed:

"There are the boys coming home."

Soon the camp was filled with men talking, laughing, chaffing, like light hearted boys.

"They are a little wild tonight," said Graeme, "and tomorrow they'll paint Black Rock red."

Before many minutes had gone the last teamster was "washed up" and all were standing about waiting impatiently for the cook's signal—the supper tonight was to be "something of a feed"—when the sound of bells drew their attention to a light sleigh drawn by a buckskin broncho coming down the hillside at a great pace.

"Bedad, and it's him has the foine nose for turkey," said Blaney, a good natured, jovial Irishman.

"Yes, or for pay day, more like," said Keefe, a black browed, villainous fellow countryman of Blaney's and, strange to say, his great friend.

Big Sandy McNaughton, a Canadian highlander from Glengarry, rose up in wrath. "Bill Keefe," said he, with deliberate emphasis, "you'll just keep your dirty tongue off the minister, and, as for your pay, it's little he sees of it or any one else, except Mike Slavin, when you're too dry to wait for some one to treat you, or perhaps Father Ryan, when the fear of hell fire is on to you."

The men stood amazed at Sandy's sudden anger and length of speech.

"Bon! Dat's good for you, my bully boy," said Baptiste, a wiry little French Canadian, Sandy's sworn ally and devoted admirer ever since the day when the big Scotsman, under great provocation, had knocked him clean off the dump into the river and then jumped in for him.

It was not till afterward I learned the cause of Sandy's sudden wrath which urged him to such unwonted length of speech. It was not simply that the Presbyterian blood carried with it reverence for the minister and contempt for papists and Fenians, but that he had a vivid remembrance of how, only a month ago, the minister had got him out of Mike Slavin's saloon and out of the clutches of Keefe and Slavin and their gang of blood suckers.

Keefe started up with a curse. Baptiste sprang to Sandy's side, slapped him on the back and called out:

"You keel him! I'll hit (eat) him up, me."

It looked as if there might be a fight when a harsh voice said in a low, savage tone:

"Stop your row, you blank fools! Settle it, if you want to, somewhere else."

I turned and was amazed to see old man Nelson, who was very seldom moved to speech.

There was a look of scorn on his hard, iron gray face and of such settled fierceness as made me quite believe the tales I had heard of his deadly fights in the mines at the coast. Before any reply could be made the minister drove up and called out in a cheery voice:

"Merry Christmas, boys! Hello, Sandy! Comment ca va, Baptiste? How do you do, Mr. Graeme?"

"First rate. Let me introduce my friend, Mr. Connor, sometime medical student, now artist, hunter and tramp at large, but not a bad sort."

"A man to be envied," said the minister, smiling. "I am glad to know any friend of Mr. Graeme's."

I liked Mr. Craig from the first. He had good eyes that looked straight out at you, a clean cut, strong face, well set on his shoulders, and altogether an upstanding, manly bearing. He insisted on going with Sandy to the stables to see Dandy, his broncho, put up.

"Decent fellow," said Graeme; "but, though he is good enough to his broncho, it is Sandy that's in his mind now."

"Does he come out often? I mean are you part of his parish, so to speak?"

"I have no doubt he thinks so, and I'm blowed if he doesn't make the Presbyterians of us think so too." And he added, after a pause: "A dandy lot of parishioners we are for any man. There's Sandy, now. He would knock Keefe's head off as a kind of religious exercise, but tomorrow Keefe will be sober, and Sandy will be drunk as a lord, and the drunker he is the better Presbyterian he'll be, to the preacher's disgust." Then, after another pause, he added bitterly: "But it is not for me to throw rocks at Sandy. I am not the same kind of fool, but I am a fool of several other sorts."

Then the cook came out and beat a tattoo on the bottom of a dishpan. Baptiste answered with a yell; but, though keenly hungry, no man would demean himself to do other than walk with apparent reluctance to his place at the table. At the farther end of the camp was a big fireplace, and from the door to the fireplace extended the long board tables, covered with platters of turkey not too scientifically carved, dishes of potatoes, bowls of apple sauce, plates of butter, pies and smaller dishes distributed at regular intervals. Two lanterns hanging from the roof and a row of candles stuck into the wall on either side by means of slit sticks cast a dim, weird light over the scene.

There was a moment's silence, and, at a nod from Graeme, Mr. Craig rose and said:

"I don't know how you feel about it, men, but to me this looks good enough to be thankful for."

"Fire ahead, sir," called out a voice quite respectfully, and the minister bent his head and said:

"For Christ the Lord, who came to save us, for all the love and goodness we have known and for these thy gifts to us this Christmas night, our Father, make us thankful. Amen."

"Bon! Dat's fuss rate," said Baptiste; "seems lak dat's make me hit more better for sure."

And then no word was spoken for a quarter of an hour. The occasion was far too solemn and moments too precious for anything so empty as words, but when the white piles of bread and the brown piles of turkey had for a second time vanished and after the last pie had disappeared there came a pause and a hush of expectancy, whereupon the cook and cookee, each bearing aloft a huge, blazing pudding, came forth.

"Hooray!" yelled Blaney. "Up wid ye!" And, grabbing the cook by the shoulders from behind, he faced him about.

Mr. Craig was the first to respond and, seizing the cookee in the same way, called out:

"Squad, fall in! Quick march!"

In a moment every man was in the procession.

"Strike up, Batchees, ye little angel!" shouted Blaney, the appellation a concession to the minister's presence, and away went Baptiste in a rollicking French song with the English chorus:

"Then blow, ye winds, in the morning,
Blow, ye winds, ay oh!
Blow, ye winds, in the morning,
Blow, blow, blow!"

And at each "blow" every boot came down with a thump on the plank floor that shook the solid roof. After the second round Mr. Craig jumped upon the bench and called out:

"Three cheers for Billy the cook!"

In the silence following the cheers Baptiste was heard to say:

"Bon! Dat's mak me feel lak hit dat puddin' all hup meself, me."

"Hear till the little baste!" said Blaney in disgust.

"Batchees," remonstrated Sandy gravely, "you've more stomach than manners."

"Fu sure, but de more stomach dat's more better for dis puddin'," replied the little Frenchman cheerfully.

After a time the tables were cleared and pushed back to the wall, and pipes were produced. In all attitudes suggestive of comfort the men disposed themselves in a wide circle about the fire, which now roared and crackled up the great wooden chimney hanging from the roof. The lumberman's hour of bliss had arrived. Even old man Nelson looked a shade less melancholy than usual as he sat alone, well away from the fire, smoking steadily and silently. When the second pipes were well a-going, one of the men took down a violin from the wall and handed it to Lachlan Campbell. There were two brothers Campbell just out from Argyll, typical highlanders—Lachlan, dark, silent, melancholy, with the face of a mystic, and Angus, red haired, quick, impulsive and devoted to his brother, a devotion he thought proper to cover under biting, sarcastic speech.

Lachlan after much protestation, interspersed with gibes from his brother, took the violin and, in response to the call from all sides, struck up "Lord Macdonald's Reel." In a moment the floor was filled with dancers, whooping and cracking their fingers in the wildest manner. Then Baptiste did the "Red River Jig," a most intricate and difficult series of steps, the men keeping time to the music with hands and feet.

When the jig was finished, Sandy called for "Lochaber No More," but Campbell said:

"No, no; I cannot play that tonight. Mr. Craig will play."

Craig took the violin, and at the first note I knew he was no ordinary player. I did not recognize the music, but it was soft and thrilling and got in by the heart till every one was thinking his tenderest and saddest thoughts.

After he had played two or three exquisite bits he gave Campbell his violin, saying, "Now, 'Lochaber,' Lachlan."

Without a word Lachlan began, not "Lochaber"—he was not ready for that yet—but "The Flowers o' the Forest" and from that wandered through "Auld Robin Gray" and "The Land o' the Leal," and so got at last to that most soul subduing of Scottish laments, "Lochaber No More." At the first strain his brother, who had thrown himself on some blankets behind the fire, turned over on his face, feigning sleep. Sandy McNaughton took his pipe out of his mouth and sat up straight and stiff, staring into vacancy, and Graeme, beyond the fire, drew a short, sharp breath. We had often sat, Graeme and I, in our student days, in the drawing room at home, listening to his father wailing out "Lochaber" upon the pipes, and I well knew that the awful minor strains were now eating their way into his soul.

Over and over again the highlander played his lament. He had long since forgotten us and was seeing visions of the hills and lochs and glens of his far-away native land and making us, too, see strange things out of the dim past. I glanced at old man Nelson and was startled at the eager, almost piteous, look in his eyes, and I wished Campbell would stop. Mr. Craig caught my eye and, stepping over to Campbell, held out his hand for the violin. Lingeringly and lovingly the highlander drew out the last strain and silently gave the minister his instrument.

Without a moment's pause and while the spell of "Lochaber" was still upon us the minister, with exquisite skill, fell into the refrain of that simple and beautiful camp meeting hymn, "The Sweet By and By." After playing the verse through once he sang softly the refrain. After the first verse the men joined in the chorus, at first timidly, but by the time the third verse was reached they were shouting with throats full open, "We shall meet on that beautiful shore." When I looked at Nelson, the eager light had gone out of his eyes, and in its place was a kind of determined hopelessness, as if in this new music he had no part.

After the voices had ceased Mr. Craig played again the refrain, more and more softly and slowly. Then, laying the violin on Campbell's knees, he drew from his pocket his little Bible and said:

"Men, with Mr. Graeme's permission, I want to read you something this Christmas eve. You will all have heard it before, but you will like it none the less for that."

His voice was soft, but clear and penetrating as he read the eternal story of the angels and the shepherds and the Babe, and as he read a slight motion of the hand or a glance of an eye made us see, as he was seeing, that whole radiant drama. The wonder, the timid joy, the tenderness, the mystery of it all, were borne in upon us with overpowering effect. He closed the book and in the same low, clear voice went on to tell us how, in his home years ago, he used to stand on Christmas eve listening in thrilling delight to his mother telling him the story, and how she used to make him see the shepherds and hear the sheep bleating near by, and how the sudden burst of glory used to make his heart jump.

"I used to be a little afraid of the angels, because a boy told me they were ghosts, but my mother told me better, and I didn't fear them any more. And the Baby, the dear little Baby—we all love a baby."

There was a quick, dry sob. It was from Nelson.

"I used to peek through under to see the little one in the straw and wonder what things swaddling clothes were. Oh, it was all so real and beautiful!"

He paused, and I could hear the men breathing.

"But one Christmas eve," he went on in a lower, sweeter tone, "there was no one to tell me the story, and I grew to forget it and went away to college and learned to think that it was only a child's tale and was not for men. Then bad days came to me, and worse, and I began to lose my grip of myself, of life, of hope, of goodness, till one black Christmas, in the slums of a far-away city, when I had given up all and the devil's arms were about me, I heard the story again, and as I listened, with a bitter ache in my heart, for I had put it all behind me, I suddenly found myself peeking under the shepherd's arms with a child's wonder at the Baby in the straw. Then it came over me like great waves that his name was Jesus, because it was he that should save men from their sins. Save! Save! The waves kept beating upon my ears, and before I knew I had called out, 'Oh, can he save me?' It was in a little mission meeting on one of the side streets, and they seemed to be used to that sort of thing there, for no one was surprised, and a young fellow leaned across the aisle to me and said, 'Why, you just bet he can!' His surprise that I should doubt, his bright face and confident tone, gave me hope that perhaps it might be so. I held to that hope with all my soul, and," stretching up his arms and with a quick glow in his face and a little break in his voice, "he hasn't failed me yet, not once, not once!"

He stopped short, and I felt a good deal like making a fool of myself, for in those days I had not made up my mind about these things. Graeme, poor old chap, was gazing at him with a sad yearning in his dark eyes; big Sandy was sitting very stiff and staring harder than ever into the fire; Baptiste was trembling with excitement; Blaney was openly wiping the tears away. But the face that held my eyes was that of old man Nelson. It was white, fierce, hungry looking, his sunken eyes burning his lips parted as if to cry.

The minister went on. "I didn't mean to tell you this, men. It all came over me with a rush. But it is true, every word, and not a word will I take back. And, what's more, I can tell you this—what he did for me he can do for any man, and it doesn't make any difference what's behind him, and," leaning slightly forward and with a little thrill of pathos vibrating in his voice, "oh, boys, why don't you give him a chance at you? Without him you'll never be the men you want to be, and you'll never get the better of that that's keeping some of you now from going back home. You know you'll never go back till you're the men you want to be." Then, lifting up his face and throwing back his head, he said, as if to himself:

"Jesus—he shall save his people from their sins," and then, "Let us pray."

Graeme leaned forward with his face in his hands; Baptiste and Blaney dropped on their knees; Sandy, the Campbells and some others stood up. Old man Nelson held his eyes steadily on the minister.

Only once before had I seen that look on a human face. A young fellow had broken through the ice on the river at home, and as the black water was dragging his fingers one by one from the slippery edges there came over his face that same look. I used to wake up for many a night after in a sweat of horror, seeing the white face with its parting lips and its piteous, dumb appeal and the black water slowly sucking it down.

Nelson's face brought it all back, but during the prayer the face changed and seemed to settle into resolve of some sort, stern, almost gloomy, as of a man with his last chance before him.

After the prayer Mr. Craig invited the men to a Christmas dinner next day in Black Rock. "And because you are an independent lot we'll charge you half a dollar for dinner and the evening show." Then, leaving a bundle of magazines and illustrated papers on the table, a godsend to the men, he said goodby and went out.

I was to go with the minister, so I jumped into the sleigh first and waited while he said goodby to Graeme, who had been hard hit by the whole service and seemed to want to say something. I heard Mr. Craig say cheerfully and confidently: "It's a true bill. Try him."

Sandy, who had been steadying Dandy while that interesting broncho was attempting with great success to balance himself on his hind legs, came to say goodby.

"Come and see me first thing, Sandy."

"Aye, I know. I'll see you, Mr. Craig," said Sandy earnestly as Dandy dashed off at a full gallop across the clearing and over the bridge, steadying down when he reached the hill.

"Steady, you idiot!"

This was to Dandy, who had taken a sudden side spring into the deep snow, almost upsetting us. A man stepped out from the shadow. It was old man Nelson. He came straight to the sleigh and, ignoring my presence completely, said:

"Mr. Craig, are you dead sure of this? Will it work?"

"Do you mean," said Craig, taking him up promptly, "can Jesus Christ save you from your sins and make a man of you?"

"Well, here's his message to you: 'The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which is lost.'"

"To me? To me?" said the old man eagerly.

"Listen. This, too, is his word: 'Him that cometh unto me I will in nowise cast out.' That's for you, for here you are, coming."

"You don't know me, Mr. Craig. I left my baby fifteen years ago because"—

"Stop!" said the minister. "Don't tell me—at least not tonight, perhaps never. Tell him who knows it all now and who never betrays a secret. Have it out with him. Don't be afraid to trust him."

"If this is no good, it's hell for me."

"If it's no good," replied Craig, almost sternly, "it's hell for all of us."

The old man straightened himself up, looked up at the stars, then back at Mr. Craig, then at me and, drawing a deep breath, said:

"I'll try him."

As he was turning away the minister touched him on the arm and said quietly:

"Keep an eye on Sandy tomorrow."

Nelson nodded, and we went on, but before we took the next turn I looked back and saw what brought a lump into my throat. It was old man Nelson on his knees in the snow, with his hands spread upward to the stars, and I wondered if there was any one above the stars and nearer than the stars who could see. And then the trees hid him from my sight.

Children's Fertilizer.

That's a good name for Scott's Emulsion. Children are like young plants. Some will grow in ordinary soil. Others need fertilizers.

Fertilizers make things grow. That's just what Scott's Emulsion does. It makes children grow in flesh, grow in strength, grow rich blood, grow in mind, grow happy. That's what we make it for.

Of All the Jolly Crowds in town is the "Smart Set"

The young gentlemen of the "Smart Set" delightfully entertained their young lady friends at the home of Ralph Orr on Friday evening at 63. The first prize was won by Miss Ruby Paisley, which was a silver teaspoon, and the consolation by Miss Lotie Erskine, an after dinner coffee spoon.

After the prizes were awarded the young people lined up and marched into the dining room where an excellent luncheon was served by Mr. and Mrs. Orr. At a late hour they departed each declaring they had had a most enjoyable time (but if the unforseen things from Toledo, of which we heard much of, had arrived the evenings enjoyment would have been complete.)

Five years later they came to Tecumseh where they have since lived. She was a fond wife and loving mother, and those who knew her best found in her a kind and sympathizing friend. She was one who lived for home and loved ones. She leaves a husband and daughter who deeply mourn her loss.

CHILSON & MOORE.

On entering the barn Sunday morning, Frank Davidson, who lives two miles east of Tecumseh, found his driving horse and his work team had been struck by lightning during the storm Saturday night. A horse owned by Wm. Miller was in the same barn and was very badly shocked. A veterinary surgeon was called at once to care for the animal and is bringing it out in good shape. The former's horses were insured in the Farmer's Mutual, but at the same time it is a great loss to Frank.

I will be pleased to take your orders for hard coal at $6.25 for May delivery and give you first class screened coal. It will be higher in June so save money by getting it now. C. A. SLAYTON.

GLADYS SISSON

After an Illness of One Week

PASSED AWAY

At Noon Saturday, May 3rd.

A week ago Sunday afternoon Gladys Sisson sang for the last time with the others in the Episcopal choir, and on Saturday at noon she passed away from all, the last of a beautiful, loving girl. She could hardly be called a young lady, although 15 years old, but all her years she had been so beautiful and lovable a child that she had been to her people, her sister and all still a little girl.

Her father, mother and "Bunnie" are heart broken, it seems now that the wound could never be healed, that the home could never again be filled. It even seems this way to the friends of father and mother. The loss of so dear a child, one so loved and loving, one so beautiful and kind and thoughtful is to those left behind a most terrible calamity, yes, the shock of so quick a passing away extends to the whole community, and today there is not a heart amongst us that beats steadily, nor an eye that sheds not tears of sympathy for the grieving family.

Gladys Sisson was born in Adrian and lived in that city till six years ago when she moved to Tecumseh with her parents. Soon after coming here she was confirmed and has been an active little worker in the Episcopal church since.

In towns like Tecumseh every one has a kindly interest in every person and in this way she was known and loved by all. Her words were always kind her thoughts cheerful and with the thoughtful interest of her friends she was cared for and loved by them all. Truly, outside her immediate family even, her place cannot be filled and to father, mother and sister there will always be a day of mourning.

The funeral was held at the Sisson residence on Shawnee street at 10 o'clock this morning. The pall bearers were Leon Williamson, Paul Rowland, Geo. Adamson, Donald Heesen, Raymond Mills, Percy Slayton and the honary bearers were Misses Stella Zimmerman, Leora Boyd, Florence Rosacrans, Ruth Keeney, Mildred Heesen and Blanche Schieder.

Among those from out of town who attended the funeral were Mrs. Jas. Sisson, Mrs. Elizabeth Sisson, of Chicago; Mrs. Anne Bliven, Dr. and Mrs. Kiger, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Warren, Kenneth Phillips, of Sylvania, Miss Katherine Dillon, of Toledo; Mr. and Mrs. Washburn and daughter Miss Corneil; Dr. and Mrs. Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sterns and Miss Kells of Adrian.

MUCH LIGHTNING

And Plenty of Thunder in and About Tecumseh Saturday and

SUNDAY NIGHTS

Cattle and Horses Kiled and Much Fire.

A most terrible electrical storm occurred in this vicinity Sunday evening. Frank Davidson lost three valuable horses, in fact all over southern Michigan the storm raged and much damage was done to buildings near Saginaw and St. Louis. It is certainly wonderful that people will risk so much from lightning when lightning rods are so cheap and so sure a protection. Lenawee county's veteran lightning rod man who has been in the business 49 years has made this immediate vicinity practically safe from danger by lightning having put rods on so many houses.

He has so good a reputation in this vicinity for honest and careful business methods that no one ever thinks to question him in any way, besides he gives a guarantee that no charge will be made for rods put on any building damaged by lightning and his guarantee is as good as gold. At this time of the year it is well to think about the safety of property and the only way is to have the property quickly and properly rodded by John Hicks, the reliable lightning rod man.

CURIOUS SIGHTS

Seen Enroute from Tempe, Arizona, to Tecumseh by

PERRY HOSMER

Another Interesting Letter from our Townsman.

From the car window.

I left Tempe at 6 p. m. (Pacific time) homeward bound and a few minutes' ride takes us out of the irrigated district. Night spreads her mantle of charity over the sun parched waste and the blue dome above is lighted with millions of greater and lesser lights. At Tuscan we got breakfast and are privileged to pay 75 cents for a cup of last years coffee and about one-half what you want to eat.

The view from the car window is monotonous yet interesting. Now we have a broad valley with gray, blue and red mountain peaks beyond. Two monster engines are pulling us up, up to the continental divide, now a curve in the road brings us to the base of the peaks. Here in the valley some pioneer has built a cabin, dug a well, put up a wind mill and can sit in the fanciful shade of his vine and fig tree and sing "Home Sweet Home."

Nature has not fully forgotten this land, for in the hills the miners are after the precious metals. The soap weed is a good substitute for its name sake, and with its bloom the cacti adds the most beautiful coloring. Now we pass a "Butti" that is as white as chalk while its neighbor is very dark. Whereever water is poured upon the dry land fruit comes forth almost as quickly as it did to Aaron's rod.

At Pantanjo station, a freighter has started for the hills with four wagons coupled up like freight cars and drawn by five span of mules, carrying to some distant miner or ranchman the necessities of life. Now we are over the divide and 30 telegraph poles go past the window in a minute.

I can see little mounds of earth marked only with a cross of sticks on a rude fence of crooked stakes set around it to tell where some mother's darling will sleep till the last revelie shall blow wrapped only in his blanket and oblivion. Now a mirage comes in the panoramic view, now an alkali flat as white as snow, now a whirlwind away in the distance picks up the dust and carrying it high in the air a whirling cloud.

At Wilcox hundreds of bales of wool are piled up ready for shipment. At another station ore in sacks is being loaded to go to the smelter at El Paso. Uncle Sam's mail goes out from all these stations, mostly carried on the back of a pony or jack, but sometimes in a rig they call a stage.

At Bown station we get 20 minutes for dinner. And I must confess that here are the most famous cooks I ever "met up with." They can make oyster soup without oysters, mince pies without mince meat and make one believe that bilge water is coffee. At any rate we used to pump just such looking and smelling stuff out of the able man-of-war, where these eating house fellows got it is a mystery. I doubt not it is as nourishing as cod liver oil, if not so pleasing to the taste, it is more expensive.

A large portion of the people through this section are Mexicans, the most of whom live in box shaped, flat roofed houses made of adobe. To make the adobe brick, a hole is dug in the ground about two feet deep, water is then put in, the adobe clay, chaff, straw, etc. is put in. The mexicans roll up their pants and mix the mass by treading it with their bare feet, then with their hands they fill it into moulds, 4x6x12 inches. Lays them out flat in the sun to bake, when dry they are laid up with the same mud used as mortar.

I am told that this belt of orrid land extends from San Bornidina, Cal., to Ft. Worth, Texas, and from British Columbia nearly to the city of Mexico. The great Rock Island railroad is extending its line west from El Paso, what for or where to no one but a novelist can imagine. One thing peculiar about this route is that in our trip of over 2000 miles we have not been through one tunnel. Another is since leaving Missouri we have seen absolutely no timber, sage brush, greasewood and a very little musquiriti, some of the latter as large as my arm and as crooked as the path of sin, are used for fence posts to which are fastened four barbed wires.

At 1:45 p. m. Sunday we cross the line into New Mexico. The rocks from here to El Paso are more pronounced, volcanic and stratified, the later are said to be rich in fossil remains. A donkey on the hill top raises his voice and cries aloud "Go-in, go-in, gone." Yes, my dear brother, we part to meet no more. Never again shall I hear your tremulous notes. Again farewell.

Around a Mexican home are playing seven or eight children, boys and girls. Don't ask me how I know for my eye sight is good to all nature and the distance is not great. At Lordsburg we met two of nature's freaks, a jew and a sand storm. The storm we soon left behind. The jew's tongue like Banco's ghost will not down. Go hide behind Rebecca and tell her you have sinned by using the sacred name of woman coupled with language that no gentleman will use. I wish I knew your name that I might put that in the HERALD. I confess that this is not very interesting to a reader. But it makes me feel as if I had rid myself of some vile tasting lump of filth.

Some of the better houses have double roofs, as a protection against the sun's heat, which at times brings the mercury up to 115 and 120 degrees. Through this portion of Arizona and New Mexico the boys in blue "rustled" the Apachee Indians.

At Deming, New Mexico, we "met up with" a dust storm that paled our former experience. At times we could not see the fence along the railroad right of way. Our winter blizzards are gentle breezes in comparison to these desert storms. One can readily see how one could lose themselves. Think of the worst dust blows we ever had down Chicago street, multiply it ten times and continue it to a day at a time and you get some idea what we now are passing through.

Night draws near and soon these sand hills will clothe in the beauty of obscurity and we at El Paso.

Tucumcari, Guadelupi Co. N. M.

What a transformation scene night has put before us. We have been climbing higher all night and are now 4500 feet above sea level. Ona Maso bounded only by the horizon. On the 35th paralel exactly is Mount Tucumcari. This mountain has a base of about 1800 acres that slopes up about 200 feet and then drops backs forming a table land, say twenty rods wide all around. Then rises abruptly 250 feet, having on its top 600 acres of level land.

It shows no volcanic action because the rock formation is entact and perfectly level, showing no signs of caloric action. This land mark can be seen for 100 miles from the Pan Handle of Texas from Oklahoma territory and New Mexico. There are no foot hills around it. The land rolls in gentle swells in either direction.

Reading the horoscope I see great future for this section. The great Rock Island road has opened up this wide section of country from Liberal, Kansas to El Paso, Texas. They have disturbed the slumbers of Uncle Sam that to quiet the sobs of his crying children he has forced the thieving cattle men to remove the unlawful fences from five million acres of as productive land as there is under the sun.

Already since January last 500 people are each trying to build a city here. There are hundreds of one-quarter sections yet open to the settler. Good grass, plenty of water and the air delightful, coal cheap, plenty of sand stone for building. Young man here is the home for you Be one of the first.

We cross the Canadian river over an iron bridge 500 feet long and 150 feet high, 10 miles this side of the future great. The station of Sand Spring, N. M., is noted for the "Carrie Nation saloon," an imposing structure 12x20 feet, dash board front. Dalhart, Texas, the C.-R. & I. P. crosses the Denver and Ft. Worth railroad Hope railroad crossing and Blue Sky are its principal attractions.

Frequent rains might induce the daring to drink with her sons at this fountain of prosperity. My smoker friend tells me that in this section for many miles the cattle barons have control of all the running water. Thereby keeping homeseekers off the ranges. For then the handwriting is on the wall. "Texhoma," beautiful, grand magnificent, and the far away future are the are the foundation stones on which this throne of power is to be built and we have only 5,000 years to wait (in my opinion).

Liberal, Kansas, a smart cattle town in southwestern Kansas. At Arkalon, we cross the Cimerone river. Jack rabbits as large as a lump of chalk. Here they expect and we suspect they will find mineral. The land is poor enough to produce from beneath. It will not on the surface.

Around about here is the home of the prairie chicken, prairie dog and cotton tail rabbit. They all flee from the howling monster that rushes past their quiet homes. Night draws nigh and we draw near to Pratt. The boys in the smoker are shooting at the prairie dogs. Good-night.

CHILSON & MOORE.

On entering the barn Sunday morning, Frank Davidson, who lives two miles east of Tecumseh, found his driving horse and his work team had been struck by lightning during the storm Saturday night. A horse owned by Wm. Miller was in the same barn and was very badly shocked. A veterinary surgeon was called at once to care for the animal and is bringing it out in good shape. The former's horses were insured in the Farmer's Mutual, but at the same time it is a great loss to Frank.

GLADYS SISSON

After an Illness of One Week

PASSED AWAY

At Noon Saturday, May 3rd.

A week ago Sunday afternoon Gladys Sisson sang for the last time with the others in the Episcopal choir, and on Saturday at noon she passed away from all, the last of a beautiful, loving girl. She could hardly be called a young lady, although 15 years old, but all her years she had been so beautiful and lovable a child that she had been to her people, her sister and all still a little girl.

Her father, mother and "Bunnie" are heart broken, it seems now that the wound could never be healed, that the home could never again be filled. It even seems this way to the friends of father and mother. The loss of so dear a child, one so loved and loving, one so beautiful and kind and thoughtful is to those left behind a most terrible calamity, yes, the shock of so quick a passing away extends to the whole community, and today there is not a heart amongst us that beats steadily, nor an eye that sheds not tears of sympathy for the grieving family.

Gladys Sisson was born in Adrian and lived in that city till six years ago when she moved to Tecumseh with her parents. Soon after coming here she was confirmed and has been an active little worker in the Episcopal church since.

In towns like Tecumseh every one has a kindly interest in every person and in this way she was known and loved by all. Her words were always kind her thoughts cheerful and with the thoughtful interest of her friends she was cared for and loved by them all. Truly, outside her immediate family even, her place cannot be filled and to father, mother and sister there will always be a day of mourning.

The funeral was held at the Sisson residence on Shawnee street at 10 o'clock this morning. The pall bearers were Leon Williamson, Paul Rowland, Geo. Adamson, Donald Heesen, Raymond Mills, Percy Slayton and the honary bearers were Misses Stella Zimmerman, Leora Boyd, Florence Rosacrans, Ruth Keeney, Mildred Heesen and Blanche Schreder.

Among those from out of town who attended the funeral were Mrs. Jas. Sisson, Mrs. Elizabeth Sisson, of Chicago; Mrs. Anne Bliven, Dr. and Mrs. Kiger, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Warren, Kenneth Phillips, of Sylvania, Miss Katherine Dillon, of Toledo; Mr. and Mrs. Washburn and daughter Miss Corneil; Dr, and Mrs. Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sterns and Miss Kells of Adrian,

MUCH LIGHTNING

And Plenty of Thunder in and About Tecumseh Saturday and

Cattle and Horses Kiled and Much Fire.

A most terrible electrical storm occurred in this vicinity Sunday evening. Frank Davidson lost three valuable horses, in fact all over southern Michigan the storm raged and much damage was done to buildings near Saginaw and St. Louis. It is certainly wonderful that people will risk so much from lightning when lightning rods are so cheap and so sure a protection. Lenawee county's veteran lightning rod man who has been in the business 49 years has made this immediate vicinity practically safe from danger by lightning having put rods on so many houses.

He has so good a reputation in this vicinity for honest and careful business methods that no one ever thinks to question him in any way, besides he gives a guarantee that no charge will be made for rods put on any building damaged by lightning and his guarantee is as good as gold. At this time of the year it is well to think about the safety of property and the only way is to have the property quickly and properly rodded by John Hicks, the reliable lightning rod man.

CURIOUS SIGHTS

Seen Enroute from Tempe, Arizona, to Tecumseh by

PERRY HOSMER

Another Interesting Letter from our Townsman.

From the car window.

I left Tempe at 6 p. m. (Pacific time) homeward bound and a few minutes' ride takes us out of the irrigated district. Night spreads her mantle of charity over the sun parched waste and the blue dome above is lighted with millions of greater and lesser lights. At Tuscan we got breakfast and are privileged to pay 75 cents for a cup of last years coffee and about one-half what you want to eat.

The view from the car window is monotonous yet interesting. Now we have a broad valley with gray, blue and red mountain peaks beyond. Two monster engines are pulling us up, up to the continental divide, now a curve in the road brings us to the base of the peaks. Here in the valley some pioneer has built a cabin, dug a well, put up a wind mill and can sit in the fanciful shade of his vine and fig tree and sing "Home Sweet Home."

Nature has not fully forgotten this land, for in the hills the miners are after the precious metals. The soap weed is a good substitute for its name sake, and with its bloom the cacti adds the most beautiful coloring. Now we pass a "Butti" that is as white as chalk while its neighbor is very dark. Where-ever water is poured upon the dry land fruit comes forth almost as quickly as it did to Aaron's rod.

At Pantanjo station, a freighter has started for the hills with four wagons coupled up like freight cars and drawn by five span of mules, carrying to some distant miner or ranchman the necessities of life. Now we are over the divide and 30 telegraph poles go past the window in a minute.

I can see little mounds of earth marked only with a cross of sticks on a rude fence of crooked stakes set around it to tell where some mother's darling will sleep till the last revelie shall blow wrapped only in his blanket and oblivion. Now a mirage comes in the panoramic view, now an alkali flat as white as snow, now a whirlwind away in the distance picks up the dust and carrying it high in the air a whirling cloud.

At Wilcox hundreds of bales of wool are piled up ready for shipment. At another station ore in sacks is being loaded to go to the smelter at El Paso. Uncle Sam's mail goes out from all these stations, mostly carried on the back of a pony or jack, but sometimes in a rig they call a stage.

At Bown station we get 20 minutes for dinner. And I must confess that here are the most famous cooks I ever "met up with." They can make oyster soup without oysters, mince pies without mince meat and make one believe that bilge water is coffee. At any rate we used to pump just such looking and smelling stuff out of the able man-of-war, where these eating house fellows got it is a mystery. I doubt not it is as nourishing as cod liver oil, if not so pleasing to the taste, it is more expensive.

A large portion of the people through this section are Mexicans, the most of whom live in box shaped, flat roofed houses made of adobe. To make the adobe brick, a hole is dug in the ground about two feet deep, water is then put in, the adobe clay, chaff, straw, etc. is put in. The mexicans roll up their pants and mix the mass by treading it with their bare feet, then with their hands they fill it into moulds, 4x6x12 inches. Lays them out flat in the sun to bake, when dry they are laid up with the same mud used as mortar.

I am told that this belt of orrid land extends from San Bornidina, Cal., to Ft. Worth, Texas, and from British Columbia nearly to the city of Mexico. The great Rock Island railroad is extending its line west from El Paso, what for or where to no one but a novelist can imagine. One thing peculiar about this route is that in our trip of over 2000 miles we have not been through one tunnel. Another is since leaving Missouri we have seen absolutely no timber, sage brush, greasewood and a very little musquiriti, some of the latter as large as my arm and as crooked as the path of sin, are used for fence posts to which are fastened four barbed wires.

At 1:45 p. m. Sunday we cross the line into New Mexico. The rocks from here to El Paso are more pronounced, volcanic and stratified, the later are said to be rich in fossil remains. A donkey on the hill top raises his voice and cries aloud "Go-in, go-in, gone." Yes, my dear brother, we part to meet no more. Never again shall I hear your tremulous notes. Again farewell.

Around a Mexican home are playing seven or eight children, boys and girls. Don't ask me how I know for my eye sight is good to all nature and the distance is not great. At Lordsburg we met two of nature's freaks, a jew and a sand storm The storm we soon left behind. The jew's tongue like Banco's ghost will not down. Go hide behind Rebecca and tell her you have sinned by using the sacred name of woman coupled with language that no gentleman will use. I wish I knew your name that I might put that in the HERALD. I confess that this is not very interesting to a reader. But it makes me feel as if I had rid myself of some vile tasting lump of filth.

Some of the better houses have double roofs, as a protection against the sun's heat, which at times brings the mercury up to 115 and 120 degrees. Through this portion of Arizona and New Mexicu the boys in blue "rustled" the Apachee Indians.

At Deming, New Mexico, we "met up with" a dust storm that paled our former experience. At times we could not see the fence along the railroad right of way. Our winter blizzards are gentle breezes in comparison to these desert storms. One can readily see how one could lose themselves. Think of the worst dust blows we ever had down Chicago street, multiply it ten times and continue it to a day at a time and you get some idea what we now are passing through.

Night draws near and soon these sand hills will clothe in the beauty of obscurity and we at El Paso.

Tucumcari, Guadelupi Co. N. M.

What a transformation scene night has put before us. We have been climbing higher all night and are now 4500 feet above sea level. Ona Maso bounded only by the horizon. On the 35th paralel exactly is Mount Tucumcari. This mountain has a base of about 1800 acres that slopes up about 200 feet and then drops backs forming a table land, say twenty rods wide all around. Then rises abruptly 250 feet, having on its top 600 acres of level land.

It shows no volcanic action because the rock formation is entact and perfectly level, showing no signs of caloric action. This land mark can be seen for 100 miles from the Pan Handle of Texas from Oklahoma territory and New Mexico. There are no foot hills around it. The land rolls in gentle swells in either dtrection.

Reading the horoscope I see great future for this section. The great Rock Island road has opened up this wide section of country from Liberal, Kansas to El Paso, Texas. They have disturbed the slumbers of Uncle Sam that to quiet the sobs of his crying children he has forced the thieving cattle men to remove the unlawful fences from five million acres of as productive land as there is under the sun.

Already since January last 500 people are each trying to build a city here. There are hundreds of one-quarter sections yet open to the settler. Good grass, plenty of water and the air delightful, coal cheap, plenty of sand stone for building. Young man here is the home for you Be one of the first.

We cross the Canadian river over an iron bridge 500 feet long and 150 feet high, 10 miles this side of the future great. The station of Sand Spring, N. M., is noted for the "Carrie Nation saloon," an imposing structure 12x20 feet, dash board front. Dalhart, Texas, the C. R. & I. P. crosses the Denver and Ft. Worth railroad. Hope railroad crossing and Blue Sky are its principal attractions.

Frequent rains might induce the darling to drink with her sons at this fountain of prosperity. My smoker friend tells me that in this section for many miles the cattle barons have control of all the running water. Thereby keeping homeseekers off the ranges. For then the handwriting is on the wall. "Texhoma," beautiful, grand magnificient, and the far away future are the are the foundation stones on which this throne of power is to be built and we have only 5,000 years to wait (in my opinion).

Liberal, Kansas, a smart cattle town in southwestern Kansas. At Arkalon, we cross the Cimerone river. Jack rabbits as large as a lump of chalk. Here they expect and we suspect they will find mineral. The land is poor enough to produce from beneath. It will not on the surface.

Around about here is the home of the prairie chicken, prairie dog and cotton tail rabbit. They all flee from the howling monster that rushes past their quiet homes. Night draws nigh and we draw near to Pratt. The boys in the smoker are shooting at the prairie dogs. Good-night.

There is no truth in the statement "A married man lives longer than a single one." Some married men just think they do.

ANSWER IT HONESTLY.

Are the Statements of Tecumseh Citizens not more reliable than those of utter Strangers?

Mr. S. Erskin, proprietor of the well known barber shop says: "For ten years off and on I had a dull pain in my back, imperfect action of the kidneys, and often I could hardly stoop or get up again. I think it was caused by standing so much at my work. Be that as it may, I was in bad shape. I used a great many medicines but without receiving much benefit until Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and I got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store. I must confess that I was agreeably surprised for after using one box I was much relieved. After the use of two boxes my back is stronger and better than it has been for a long time. Doan's Kidney Pills are the best medicine I have ever used and I have such faith in them, I believe I will be conferring a kindness on those suffering from kidney trouble in making known their merits"

A Strange Pond.

Hicks pond, in Palmyra, Me., is a strange body of water. It is only twelve acres in area, but it is more than 100 feet in depth. It has no visible inlet, although a fair sized stream flows from it into Lake Sebasticook. The volume of its water is not materially affected by either drought or freshet, and the water is always cold.

Murder in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, May 5.—Guiseppio Moriello shot and instantly killed Antonio Valle last night. When arrested Moriello said he had formerly worked for Valle, but quit him after they had quarreled. Seeing Valle come out of his house, he walked toward him, intending to patch up the trouble. Valle, he says, made a move for his hip pocket, and Moriello, thinking he intended to shoot, pulled his own revolver and put one bullet in Valle's head and one in his abdomen.

San Domingo Has Fallen.

Jacmel, Haiti, May 5.—It is reported here that Santo Domingo, the capital of Dominican republic, surrendered Saturday to the insurgent forces.

Autumn Haze.

"Autumn haze," says a meteorological expert, "is dust composed of the finest particles of soil, dead leaves, smoke or ashes from wood fires, salt from ocean spray, the shells or scales from microscopic siliceous diatoms, germs of fungi, spores of ferns, pollen of flowers, etc. In the still air of damp nights these dust particles settle slowly down, and the morning air is comparatively clear. During the daylight the sun warms the soil, which heats the adjacent air, and the rising air currents carry up the dust as high as they go. Under certain conditions this layer of dust reaches higher and higher each day. During long, dry summers in India it reaches to a height of 7,000 feet, with a well defined upper surface that is higher in the daytime than at night. The reason why we have more of hazy weather in autumn is because there is then less horizontal wind and more rising air."

Tired Out

"I was very poorly and could hardly get about the house. I was tired out all the time. Then I tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and it only took two bottles to make me feel perfectly well."—Mrs. N. S. Swinney, Princeton, Mo.

Tired when you go to bed, tired when you get up, tired all the time. Why? Your blood is impure, that's the reason. You are living on the border line of nerve exhaustion. Take Ayer's Sarsaparilla and be quickly cured. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Ask your doctor what he thinks of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He knows all about this grand old family medicine. Follow his advice and we will be satisfied.

STRIKERS WON THEIR POINT.

Buhl Malleable Works, Detroit, Was Obliged to Close.

Detroit, Mich., May 3.—The scenes of violence and disorder which have threatened to result in a serious riot at the plant of the Buhl Malleable Co. were checked last evening by radical action on the part of the management. During the day the passions of the strikers and sympathizers found vent in frequent disturbances, which necessitated the presence of 200 policemen. President Buhl averted possible bloodshed by agreeing to discharge the non-union molders and close down the plant.

The announcement was made at 5:30 o'clock when the excitement was at its height, and had a marvelous effect upon the crowd. The men speedily dispersed, and a half hour later only a comparative handful remained near the plant. Then the grimy strikebreakers, who had been cooped up for weeks within the besieged plant, filed silently out, escorted by a strikers' committee and Commissioner Fowle.

Bliss and Anti-Bliss Forces Clashed at Hastings.

Hastings, Mich., May 3.—The republican county convention to elect 13 delegates to the congressional convention at Dowagiac, May 7, was held in this city Friday, and largely attended. As a chairman of the republican county committee was to be elected at this convention, a scrap between the Bliss and anti-Bliss forces of the county resulted.

The Bliss forces, led by Senator Potter and P. T. Colgrove, were overwhelmingly defeated, and the former was defeated for county chairman by Mr. John C. Ketchum of this city. An anti-Bliss delegation to the state convention was elected.

Strong anti-boodle resolutions were passed.

The delegates elected to attend the congressional convention will vote for Congressman Hamilton's renomination. Len W. Feigner heads the delegation.

An Ancient Monument.

In the churchyard at Bewcastle, Cumberland, England, an isolated spot about twelve miles from any railway station, is a monument bearing the inscription, "The First Year of Ecgfrith, King of This Realm"—i. e., A. D. 670. Another inscription (Runic) on the west side says that it was set up as a "Standard of Victory In Memory of Alchfrith, Lately King" (of Northumbria), who played so important a part in the history of the time.

An interesting account of the cross is given in Bishop Browne's work, "The Conversion of the Heptarchy." He says that the inscriptions are "the earliest examples known to be in existence of English literature," and, "looking to the importance in the history of the world of the conversion of England, there is no historical monument in these lands to compare with the Bewcastle cross."

The shaft as it stands is a square pillar composed of a single block of gray freestone fourteen and a half feet high. The cross head is gone, but when entire the monument must have been about twenty-one feet high.

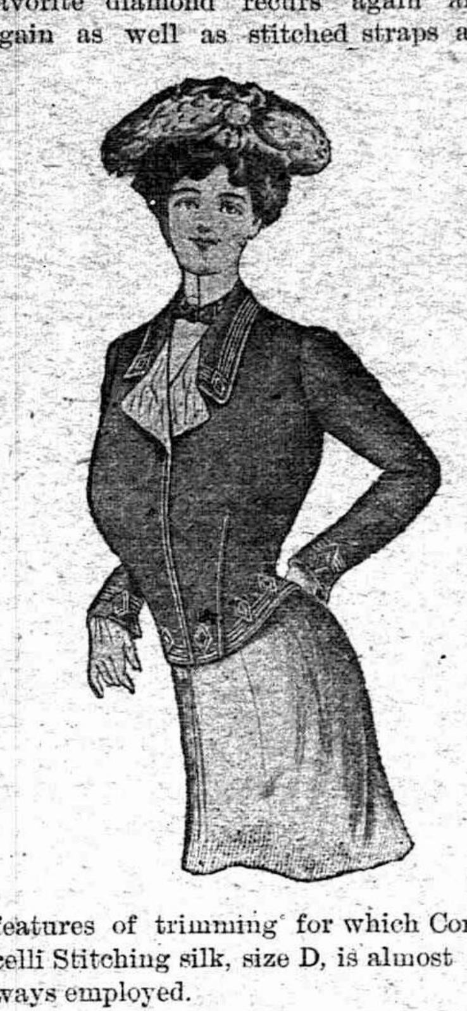
A SERVICEABLE JACKET.

The Long Turn-Down Collar.

A jaunty and serviceable garment is made of black broadcloth of an exquisitely fine texture stitched with white Corticelli silk. It is cut with a long turn-down collar and has white moire revers. Fancy stitching, in which the favorite diamond recurs again and again as well as stitched straps are features of trimming for which Corticelli Stitching silk, size D, is almost always employed.



Other modes of garniture are cording, perforated straps and straps of peau de sole or satin as well as moire, followed by a varied assortment of braids. Perforations following some dainty pattern or design and showing the foundation of some special lining are very handsome, also the appliqued trimmings of cloth, taffeta or moire.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parent did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops. Jessie Pinkey Hall, Springville, Ala. This remedy is for sale by J. J. Orr.

Statues in the Paris Streets.

It is not the Londoner only who grumbles at the lack of beauty in the statues adorning the streets and squares of his city. The Frenchman makes a point of grumbling quite as loudly at the "almost unanimous" ugliness of the modern statues "incumbering" Paris. These statues, says the outspoken Journal des Debats, are not so much erected in honor of one dead man as for the glorification of several living ones, who form the "commission" for the erection of a statue and receive decorations for their endeavors.

A famous French sculptor is quoted in this connection who had sent in his design for a statue of Pasteur. He had suggested the genius of the great scientist by symbols, but the commission would have none of them. "Your work," they said, "is fine, but it is incomplete. What about the diseases of silkworms, the manufacture of vinegar and of beer and vin, about cholera in fowls?"

And nothing the artist could say as to the impossibility of reproducing sick silkworms and cholera ridden roosters on a monument could move the commission. Under such conditions it is small wonder Paris statues are no better than they should be.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT THE ORIGINAL LIVER MEDICINE

A sallow complexion, dizziness, biliousness and a coated tongue are common indications of liver and kidney diseases. Stomach and bowel troubles, severe as they are, give immediate warning by pain, but liver and kidney troubles, though less painful at the start, are much harder to cure. Thedford's Black-Draught never fails to benefit diseased liver and weakened kidneys. It stirs up the torpid liver to throw off the germs of fever and ague. It is a certain preventive of cholera and Bright's disease of the kidneys. With kidneys reinforced by Thedford's Black-Draught thousands of persons have dwelt immune in the midst of yellow fever. Many families live in perfect health and have no other doctor than Thedford's Black-Draught. It is always on hand for use in an emergency and saves many expensive calls of a doctor.

Mullins, S. C., March 10, 1901.
I have used Thedford's Black-Draught for three years and I have not had to go to a doctor since I have been taking it. It is the best medicine for me that is on the market for liver and kidney troubles and dyspepsia and other complaints. Rev. A. G. LEWIS.

Useless Expense.

A prince received from the house steward his monthly statement of accounts, in which occurred the item of 1.50 lire for the keep of a cat in the palace. The prince immediately wrote in the margin, "If there are no rats in the house, it is no good keeping a cat; if there are any rats, the charge for the keep of the cat is superfluous." And he struck out the item.

A Success.

"Mrs. Bilkins learned to play poker so she could keep her husband in at night."

"And does he stay in now?"

"I should say so. She wins so much of his spending allowance that he hasn't the price of a drink."—Philadelphia Record.

Prima Facie Evidence.

The late Lord Morris on one occasion gave a characteristic illustration of the meaning of "prima facie evidence."

"If," he said to the jury, "you saw a man coming out of a public house wiping his mouth, that would be prima facie evidence that he had been having a drink."

DEATH CALLED HIM

Rear-Admiral Sampson Passed Away Tuesday.

HEMORRHAGE OF THE BRAIN

He Was Born of Poor Parents, but His Thriftiness Brought Him Outside Aid for Naval Education—Was Twice Married.

Washington, May 7.—Rear-Admiral Sampson died at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, after a violent hemorrhage of the brain.

For several days past the admiral had been growing weaker and the hemorrhage in the morning brought on the sinking spell.

Rear-Admiral Sampson's father was a day laborer in Palmyra, N. Y., fifty years ago. The family existed on scant wages. Sampson when a boy was so plucky and persistent in his search for work, so thoroughly clean, that he attracted the attention of Congressman Morgan of Wayne county and came forward with an offer to give him a start. The assistance proffered was in a chance to try for the naval academy at Annapolis. He did try, passed, went to the academy and graduated an honorable pupil in 1861.

Free from the academy he was assigned to the frigate Potomac. Later he was returned to Annapolis as an instructor, and in 1865 was executive officer of the Potapsco, of the South Atlantic blockading squadron.

He acted in various capacities up to the time President McKinley called him to be president of the board of inquiry on the Maine disaster, and from that work he succeeded Admiral Sicard in command of the North Atlantic squadron.

His home was in Glen Ridge, N. J., 30 minutes out of New York city. He was married twice and his family consisted of two sons, Ralph and Harold, and his daughters, Olive Farrington, Hannah, known better as "Nan;" Margaret, the wife of Lieut. Roy C. Smith, and Kate, the wife of Ensign Jackson, the hero of Samoa. In his private life and when away from his ship, Admiral Sampson was passionately fond of tennis.

The principal events of Sampson's life are of too recent occurrence to need any extended mention. His command of the North Atlantic squadron at the fall of Santiago and the subsequent Sampson-Schley controversy, his refusal to indorse the application of Gunner Morgan for promotion because of the latter's "social unfitness," all contributed to make him the most talked-about man which the Spanish-American war developed.

IN BEHALF OF RATHBONE

Hanna Appeals in Person to the President.

Washington, May 7.—The case of Major Estes G. Rathbone, who was convicted in the Cuban courts of maladministration of his office in the island, was the subject of an extended conference at the White house last night. Senator Hanna made an earnest application to the president for a new trial for Rathbone, protesting that he believed him innocent of the crime of which he was convicted.

The president manifested a great deal of interest in the case, but it is understood that up to this time no final determination has been reached. The question of a pardon to Rathbone came up incidentally at the conference, but it is said that Major Rathbone, declaring that he is innocent, is not seeking a pardon.

Good News from Africa.

Pretoria, May 7.—The peace situation is developing encouragingly. According to reliable information which has reached here, several of the nearer commandoes have received the burgher delegates in an amicable spirit. It is understood that Commandant Beyers has announced his willingness to abide by the decision reached by the Transvaal government. Considerable opposition to the peace movement, however, is developing among the irreconcilables of Gen. Delarey's force.

Letter Carriers Want Increase.

Washington, May 7.—James C. Keller of Cleveland, in behalf of the letter carriers of the country, was heard Tuesday by the house committee on postoffices and post roads on the proposed increase of pay to letter carriers, particularly those in first-class cities, from $1,000 to $1,200 a year. He urged that for the character of the work done, the present rates were low.

Le Roux Denies the Assertions.

New York, May 7.—Hughes LeRoux, the French lecturer, in a dispatch to the Associated Press, denies that while in Chicago a few days since he stated that Capt. Dreyfus had confessed his guilt. Mr. Le Roux says that he did not make any reference to Dreyfus in the lecture referred to and that the interview, widely published throughout the country, was a pure invention.

Revolution in Portugal.

London, May 7.—A dispatch to a news agency from Madrid says that advices received there from Portugal indicate there is danger of an actual revolution in that country. The military and naval officers are advocating that King Charles establish a dictatorship.

SEVEN DROWNED

Frightful Accident on the Maumee at Toledo.

LAUNCH WAS OVERTURNED

The Boat Contained Eleven Persons—Just Returning From a Ride on Lake Erie When They Were Struck by a Tug Boat.

Toledo, May 8.—Seven young people, members of a Sunday school class of the First Baptist church, were drowned in the Maumee river, just below the city, last night at 10 o'clock, as the result of the naptha launch Frolic, on which they were taking a pleasure ride, being run down by the tug Arthur Woods, of the Great Lakes Towing Co.'s fleet.

The launch is owned by Joseph W. Hepburn of this city, who invited 11 young people to take an evening ride with him. They started out on a trip to Lake Erie early in the evening and were returning when the accident happened.

The dead are: Irwin Swayne, Bessie Leesee, Edna Lowe, aged 19; Wm. Fanner, aged 19; Bess Byscrum, Eulalie Rickard, aged 17; Grace Haspin.

Mr. Hepburn, Miss Clara Marks, Arthur Marks and Miss Grace Lowe are the only survivors.

Mr. Hepburn states that he saw the lights of the approaching tug, and, thinking it was bound straight down the river, turned to the east. When nearly abreast of the launch, the tug suddenly turned to the east in order to make the dock at Ironville, and before the launch could get out of the way it was struck by the tug and turned over and sunk about 100 feet from the dock. The tug brought the rescued to this city.

ALMOST A CYCLONE

Wind, Rain and Lightning in Southern Michigan.

RAISED HOVAC EVERYWHERE

Clinton County Suffered Greatly—Lightning Strikes Hotel in Owosso—Fenton Newspaper Office Blown Into River—Factory Demolished.

Maple Rapids, Mich., May 7.—The most destructive gale in the history of Clinton county struck the section lying about two miles northeast of this place Tuesday afternoon and did damage to the amount of at least $10,000. Five buildings, three of them residences, were unroofed, fences were flattened and valuable fruit trees were blown down.

Two men were injured by the collapse of the barn and one of them, Charles Barnhart, a well-known farmer and owner of the barn, may die from his injuries.

The cyclone seemed to traverse a path of about a mile and a half in length. Not a building in the strip passed through unscathed, although in some cases broken windows were the only damage inflicted.

A considerable number of cattle and stock in the destroyed barns were also lost.

Owosso, Mich., May 7.—A bolt of lightning struck the electric light wire at the Wildermuth house during the storm Tuesday. It evidently divided, as shocks were felt by guests and others all over the house.

Miss Ethel Van Zant, a dining-room girl who was working in the kitchen, received a shock from the fluid which followed the gas pipe. She was unconscious for several hours, but is out of danger.

In Corunna a bolt struck the house and barn of Charles Wilkinson simultaneously. Mrs. Wilkinson received a shock and may not recover, the doctors say.

Fenton, Mich., May 7.—Fenton was visited by a tornado at 2 p. m. yesterday. Chimneys, outbuildings and trees were blown down, sidewalks torn up, and a great amount of damage done. Part of the roofing of the A. J. Phillips factory was taken off, damaging the building about $200.

J. H. Jennings of the Fenton Independent and a small outbuilding were blown into the Shiawassee river. He escaped with severe bruises.

Many barns and outbuildings in the country were damaged. At the Hillman school, about five miles southwest sheds were blown down and a man who had driven in was roughly handled.

Tekonsha, Mich., May 7.—A de- [illegible] tion Tuesday afternoon, spreading havoc in its wake. Two large barns belonging to L. M. Batt were blown down. Three men in one of the barns escaped with slight injuries. Ten hogs, two cattle and a number of sheep were killed.

Union City, Mich., May 7.—The plant of the Peerless Portland Cement Co. was badly damaged by a wind storm yesterday afternoon. The big rotary kiln building was partially destroyed, entailing a loss of $4,000. Numerous buildings in this vicinity were damaged by the wind and lightning.

Fell to His Death.

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 7.—The body of George Deer, aged 56, night watchman at the Plant King paper mill, now in process of construction, was found in a cellar Tuesday morning. It is believed he went to sleep on the second floor of the building, where his lantern was found, was partly awakened and peering down the shaft, fell headlong.

Can't Get a Jury.

Allegan, Mich., May 7.—The trial of T. F. McGarry was taken up in the circuit court here yesterday and an effort was begun to secure a jury. The attorneys made short work of the regular panel of 24 jurors and Judge Wolcott was forced to adjourn court for the day, pending the arrival of a special venire of talesmen.

A JURY AT LAST.

McGarry's Trial at Allegan Begins—Cameron Testifies.

Allegan, Mich., May 8.—A jury was secured to try T. F. McGarry of Grand Rapids on a charge of bribery and conspiracy in connection with the recent Lake Michigan water scandal in that city, during the forenoon yesterday and the formal trial of the case was begun.

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Ward, in his opening statement, gave a resume of the case, which differed little from those of the Salsbury and McLeod cases.

During the statement Mr. Ward was frequently interrupted by the defense, who stated that they would object strenuously to the introduction of any evidence showing the movements of any of the alleged parties to the deal, after July 7, except those of the man who is on trial. The court ruled that this evidence would be admitted only in as much as it showed the facts of the conspiracy charge.

Robert Cameron, the star witness of the prosecution, then took the stand. His story contained very few new features and a large part of it consisted of the reading of telegrams which passed between the witness and Garman, who was managing the deal in New York.

McGarry's spring brook trip, the delivery of the $100,000 to MacLeod and the alleged turning over of $25,000 by the promoters to McGarry were all brought out fully in the testimony and court was adjourned to meet today.

Durand, Mich., May 8.—Carrie Nation passed through here Wednesday morning, and during the half hour stop held a public reception. She first attracted attention by tapping on the window and speaking to some men who were smoking, and asked them into the car. She said smoking causes booze fighters. As the train pulled out she held up a valise and said it contained her hatchet.

Detroit, May 8.—Under the wheels of a Jefferson car, the life of James Pulleyblank was cruelly ground out Wednesday morning near Fourth and riding a wheel at the time, and in endeavoring to escape the car made a sudden turn, the machine slipped from under him and he was precipitated onto the track directly in front of the oncoming car.

Strike Question Not Settled Yet.

Scranton, Pa., May 8.—The executive boards of the United Mine Workers of America for the three districts comprising the anthracite coal region, met here at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning to consider the report of special committee which had been in conference with the presidents of the coal carrying railroads and to decide whether the men are to remain at work or go on strike for increased pay, a shorted day's work and an insistance that the coal shall be weighed at the mines. Nothing was done of which any definite knowledge would be given the public. When the meeting adjourned President Mitchell gave out the following meagre and indefinite response to a request for an account of what had been done:

"The committee is canvassing the situation very carefully. No decision has as yet been reached. The committee will meet again today." When asked if anything had been heard from the operators, Mr. Mitchell said: "I have heard nothing from the operators. No concessions have been granted, and I know nothing of any movement to secure concessions." ..

Schurman Refuses to Serve.

Ithaca, N. Y., May 8.—It has been learned here that President Schurman of Cornell university has written Carl Schurz, declining membership on the committee appointed to investigate the alleged Philippine atrocities. He did not attend the meeting in New York, at which the committee, consisting of Carl Schurz, Charles Francis Adams, Andrew Cargnegie, Wayne McVeagh, Edwin Burritt Smith and Herbert Welch were appointed. Mr. Schurman when seen by the Associated Press representative, said he feels that the conduct of the investigation and the vindication of the honor of the army may safely be left in the hand of President Roosevelt, who, in his order on the subject, has nobly voiced the sentiments and determination of the American people.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

BLACK ROCK

By RALPH CONNOR

CHAPTER II.

THE BLACK ROCK CHRISTMAS.

MANY strange Christmas days have I seen, but that wild Black Rock Christmas stands out strangest of all. While I was reveling in my delicious second morning sleep, just awake enough to enjoy it, Mr. Craig came abruptly, announcing breakfast and adding:

"Hope you are in good shape, for we have our work before us this day."

"Hello!" I replied, still half asleep and anxious to hide from the minister that I was trying to gain a few more moments of snoozing delight. "What's abroad?"

"The devil," he answered shortly and with such emphasis that I sat bolt upright, looking anxiously about.

"Oh, no need for alarm! He's not after you particularly—at least not today," said Craig, with a shadow of a smile. "But he is going about in good style, I can tell you."

By this time I was quite awake "Well, what particular style does his majesty affect this morning?"

He pulled out a showbill. "Peculiarly gaudy and effective, is it not?"

The items announced were sufficiently attractive. The Frisco Opera company was to produce the "screaming farce," "The Gay and Giddy Dude," after which there was to be a grand ball, during which the "Kalifornia Female Kickers" were to do some fancy figures, the whole to be followed by a "big supper," with "two free drinks to every man and one to the lady," and all for the insignificant sum of $2.

"Can't you go one better?" I said.

He looked inquiringly and a little disgustedly at me.

"What can you do against free drinks and a dance, not to speak of the high kickers?" he groaned. "No," he continued. "It's a clean beat for us today. The miners and lumbermen will have in their pockets $10,000 and every dollar burning a hole, and Slavin and his gang will get most of it. But," he added, "you must have breakfast. You'll find a tub in the kitchen. Don't be afraid to splash. It is the best I have to offer you."

The tub sounded inviting, and before many minutes had passed I was in a delightful glow, the effect of cold water and a rough towel and that consciousness of virtue that comes to a man who has had courage to face his cold bath on a winter morning.

The breakfast was laid with fine taste. A diminutive pine tree in a pot hung round with wintergreen stood in the center of the table.

"I hope you will enjoy it all."

There was not much talk over our meal. Mr. Craig was evidently preoccupied and as blue as his politeness would allow him. Slavin's victory weighed upon his spirits. Finally he burst out: "Look here! I can't—I won't stand it! Something must be done. Last Christmas this town was for two weeks, as one of the miners said, 'a little suburb of hell.' It was something too awful. And at the end of it all one young fellow was found dead in his shack, and twenty or more crawled back to the camps, leaving their three months' pay with Slavin and his suckers. I won't stand it, I say!" He turned fiercely on me. "What's to be done?"

This rather took me aback, for I had troubled myself with nothing of this sort in my life before, being fully occupied in keeping myself out of difficulty and allowing others the same privilege. So I ventured the consolation that he had done his part and that a spree more or less would not make much difference to these men. But the next moment I wished I had been slower in speech, for he swiftly faced me, and his words came like a torrent:

"God forgive you that heartless word! Do you know— But, no; you don't know what you are saying. You don't know that these men have been clambering for dear life out of a fearful pit for three months past and doing good climbing, too, poor chaps. You don't think that some of them have wives, most of them mothers and sisters, in the east or across the sea, for whose sake they are slaving here, the miners hoping to save enough to bring their families to this homeless place, the rest to make enough to go back with credit. Why, there's Nixon, miner, splendid chap, who has been here for two years and drawing the highest pay. Twice he has been in sight of his heaven, for he can't speak of his wife and babies without breaking up, and twice that slick son of the devil—that's Scripture, mind you—Slavin, got him and 'rolled' him, as the boys say. He went back to the mines broken in body and in heart. He says this is his third and last chance. If Slavin gets him, his wife and babies will never see him on earth or in heaven. There are Sandy and the rest too. And," he added in a lower tone and with the curious little thrill of pathos in his voice, "this is the day the Saviour came to the world."

He paused, and then with a little, sad smile, "But I don't want to abuse you."

"Do. I enjoy it. I'm a beast, a selfish beast!" For somehow his intense, blazing earnestness made me feel uncomfortably small.

"What have we to offer?" I demanded.

"Wait till I have got these things cleared away and my housekeeping done."

I pressed my services upon him, somewhat feebly, I own, for I can't bear dishwater, but he rejected my offer.

"I don't like trusting my china to the hands of a tenderfoot."

It was delft a quarter of an inch thick, so I smoked while he washed up, swept, dusted and arranged the room.

After the room was ordered to his taste we proceeded to hold counsel. He could offer dinner, magic lantern, music. "We can fill in time for two hours, but," he added gloomily, "we can't beat the dance and the high kickers."

"Have you nothing new or startling?" He shook his head.

"No kind of show—dog show, snake charmer?"

"Slavin has a monopoly of the snakes."

Then he added hesitatingly: "There was an old Punch and Judy chap here last year, but he died. Whisky again."

"What happened to his show?"

"The Black Rock hotel man took it for board and whisky bill. He has it still, I suppose."

I did not much relish the business, but I hated to see him beaten, so I ventured, "I have run a Punch and Judy in an amateur way at the varsity."

He sprang to his feet with a yell.

"You have! You mean to say it? We've got them! We've beaten them!" He had an extraordinary way of taking your help for granted. "The miner chaps, mostly English and Welsh, went mad over the poor old showman and made him so wealthy that in sheer gratitude he drank himself to death."

He walked up and down in high excitement and in such evident delight that I felt pledged to my best effort.

"Well," I said, "first the poster. We must beat them in that."

He brought me large sheets of brown paper, and after two hours' hard work I had half a dozen pictorial showbills done in gorgeous colors and striking designs. They were good, if I do say it myself.

The turkey, the magic lantern, the Punch and Judy show, were all there, the last with a crowd before it in gaping delight. A few explanatory words were thrown in, emphasizing the highly artistic nature of the Punch and Judy entertainment.

Craig was delighted and proceeded to perfect his plans. He had some half a dozen young men, four young ladies and eight or ten matrons upon whom he could depend for help. These he organized into a vigilance committee charged with the duty of preventing miners and lumbermen from getting away to Slavin's.

"The critical moments will be immediately before and after dinner and then again after the show is over," he explained. "The first two crises must be left to the care of Punch and Judy, and, as for the last, I am not yet sure what shall be done." But I saw he had something in his head, for he added, "I shall see Mrs. Mavor."

"Who is Mrs. Mavor?" I asked.

But he made no reply. He was a born fighter, and he put the fighting spirit into us all. We were bound to win.

The sports were to begin at 2 o'clock. By lunchtime everything was in readiness. After lunch I was having a quiet smoke in Craig's shack when in he rushed, saying:

"The battle will be lost before it is fought. If we lose Quatre Bras, we shall never get to Waterloo."

"What's up?"

"Slavin, just now. The miners are coming in, and he will have them in tow in half an hour."

He looked at me appealingly. I knew what he wanted.

"All right. I suppose I must, but it is an awful bore that a man can't have a quiet smoke."

"You're not half a bad fellow," he replied, smiling. "I shall get the ladies to furnish coffee inside the booth. You furnish them intellectual nourishment in front with dear old Punch and Judy."

He sent a boy with a bell round the village, announcing, "Punch and Judy in front of the Christmas booth beside the church," and for three-quarters of an hour I shrieked and sweated in that awful little pen. But it was almost worth it to hear the shouts of approval and laughter that greeted my performance. It was cold work standing about, so that the crowd was quite ready to respond when Punch, after being duly hanged, came forward and invited all into the booth for the hot coffee which Judy had ordered.

In they trooped, and Quatre Bras was won.

No sooner were the miners safely engaged with their coffee than I heard a great noise of bells and of men shouting, and on reaching the street I saw that the men from the lumber camp were coming in. Two immense sleighs, decorated with ribbons and spruce boughs, each drawn by a four horse team gayly adorned, filled with some fifty men, singing and shouting with all their might, were coming down the hill road at full gallop. Round the corner they swung, dashed at full speed across the bridge and down the street and pulled up after they had made the circuit of a block, to the great admiration of the onlookers. Among others, Slavin sauntered up good naturedly, making himself agreeable to Sandy and those who were helping to unhitch his team.

"Oh, you need not take trouble with me or my team, Mike Slavin. Batchees and me and the boys can look after them fine," said Sandy coolly.

This rejecting of hospitality was perfectly understood by Slavin and by all.

"Dat's too bad, heh?" said Baptiste wickedly. "And, Sandy, he's got good money on his pocket for sure too."

The boys laughed, and Slavin, joining in, turned away with Keefe and Blaney, but by the look in his eye I knew he was playing Br'er Rabbit and lying low.

Mr. Craig just then came up.

"Hello, boys! Too late for Punch and Judy, but just in time for hot coffee and doughnuts."

"Bon! Dat's fuss rate," said Baptiste heartily. "Where you keep him?"

"Up in the tent next the church there. The miners are all in."

"Ah! Dat's so? Dat's bad news for the shanty men, heh, Sandy?" said the little Frenchman dolefully.

"There were a clothesbasket full of doughnuts and a boiler of coffee left as I passed just now," said Craig encouragingly.

"Allons, mes garcons. Vite! Never say keel!" cried Baptiste excitedly, stripping off the harness.

But Sandy would not leave the horses till they were carefully rubbed down, blanketed and fed, for he was entered for the four horse race, and it behooved him to do his best to win. Besides, he scorned to hurry himself for anything so unimportant as eating. That he considered hardly worthy even of Baptiste. Mr. Craig managed to get a word with him before he went off, and I saw Sandy solemnly and emphatically shake his head, saying: "Ah, we'll beat him this day!" And I gathered that he was added to the vigilance committee.

LIFE AT TEMPE

Vividly Described by Perry Hosmer.

Tempe, Arizona, April, 26, 1902.

This oasis is located in the Salt river valley nine miles southeast of Phoenix. It gets its name from a valley between Mount Olympas and Mount Ossa, said to be the home of one of the Greek Goddesses. The water from the Salt river has been turned out of its course to irrigate and transform this once dessert waste to a veritable Edon.

Grain of all kinds. Fruit of every variety, except apples, are grown in abundance, 1800 pounds of wheat per acre is the usual amount harvested. The cultivated portion of the valley is from three to six miles wide and ten to twelve miles long.

It is claimed that the city has 1500 inhabitants, good buildings, wide streets and pure water are among the attractions. This morning at sunrise the writer was on top of "Tempe Butte," a bluff hill or mountain in the northeast part of the city. The top rock is 303 feet above the main street at its base on the west. Salt river winds along its northern side, east and south are the farmers and orchards.

As the sun came up from beyond the Suerstition mountains, shooting heavenward its golden rays, and lighting up the homes of the sons of toil away down the valley, carpeted with the most beautiful of carpets of purple alfalfa fields, green fields of wheat and oats, brown and green vineyards, checked off with water in the irrigating ditches is a picture beyond my power to describe.

But look to the west across the valley to the gold tipped peaks of the Maricopa range of mountains. My pencil is still with awe and wonder. All I can think of or say is "How wondrous are thy works" No word painter can half tell of its beauties. And could a color artist make a true copy of the picture here made 365 days in the year. The critic would say little too much color, a bit overdrawn.

At 10:30 a. m. Mr. Carle Hayden came to the hotel for Cap, and I for a drive and the route lay across the river, over stretches of sand desert to the home of the noble red man. Uncle Sam has set apart a portion of his farm for these the first owners of this soil. On this reservation are located the remnant of the Pinna tribe.

We found Mr. and Mrs. "Lo" at home. One able fellow came to the carriage to say "how," shake hands and beg for "tobac." Read Bobby Burns' description of Nannie's costume in Tam O' Shanter and you will know exactly how this old brave was dressed. These Indians make a queer house They set up four posts as corners of a square. Near the top and bottom they fasten poles around from post to post. Then they gather up the arrow reed (a long slim reed about six feet long) and set them close together and fasten them with other poles. Then plaster mud all over. The walls of the house are done, now poles laid across, more reeds, more mud and the palace is complete.

Their village is stretched out in a very irregular way for several miles. The U. S. government furnishes these people wagons, plows, harness and sewing machines. In their way they raise wheat and corn. As in old Bible times they thresh their grain on the ground by driving their horses over it, and with queer shaped baskets they throw the grain up and the wind blows away the chaff.

Should anything unusual happen in any part of the town an old Buck will mount on his house and shout the news to his neighbor, and he to his neighbor and so on. One old fellow here enjoys the name of No Mat. While he was in the matrimonial market, he won the heart of a dusky maiden and took her to his home. He had provided no mat for her to sleep on and that being sufficient cause for divorce, she left with the high sounding name of "No Mat."

There is a nice little mission church built of adobe. The women are experts in making baskets, which are eagerly bought up (the baskets not the women) at fabulous prices by eastern tourists. I did not invest, because this hot air has a contracting influence on my purse.

On our way back to town I came across a queer looking bush. I got a branch and carried it to town and learned that it is called the "crucifiction thorn." Scientists claim of such as this the crown of thorns was made to crown our Saviour. Old settlers say it was never known to have a leaf, bud or a blossom of any kind. It is shunned by every living creature.

On the hills around here is the "Giant Cacius" or the Hercules club, some twenty feet tall and as large around as a bushel basket, studded with thorns in rows from top to bottom. With regret we leave this enchanted vale at 6 p. m., to-day homeward bound.

The May Atlantic contains a paper of great interest and importance, "Second Thoughts on the Treatment of Anarchy" by William M. Salter, of the Ethical Culture School of Chicago. Mr. Salter has stated the case of anarchy incisively, and at the same time more dispassionately than would have been possible some months ago, immediately after the assassination of President McKiney.

The Designer for June is permeated by an atmosphere of early summer. From the attractive cover, on which, amid a mass of midsummer daisies, stands a jaunty girl inviting you to a game of tennis, to the fashions, millinery and miscellany, all is appropriate and delightfully suggestive of the lovely month of June. "In Bridal White" offers toilet hints manifold to the prospective wife, while "Quaint Wedding Customs and Superstitions" will supply her with food for laughter, if not for deep thought. An "An Expert" in the millinery department tells how to make a stylish toque for summer wear, and "Points on Dressmaking," as usual, brings timely assistance to the needlewoman.

Children's Fertilizer.

That's a good name for Scott's Emulsion. Children are like young plants. Some will grow in ordinary soil. Others need fertilizers.

Fertilizers make things grow. That's just what Scott's Emulsion does. It makes children grow in flesh, grow in strength, grow rich blood, grow in mind, grow happy. That's what we make it for.

THEY SAW GHOSTS

A Young Man well known in Tecumseh called

RICHARD MEAD

Was very much frightened while out out riding with a young lady friend Saturday evening.

Rich Meade, of Tecumseh, is quite well known in Adrian and as a good story at his expense, told by himself too, has reached our ears, it might not be a bad plan to spring it. It runs thusly:

One night last week he had a lady friend out riding. No, not in his automobile, he was swindled on that you remember. They rode in an ordinary buggy. As most every young man knows from experience who has called on the young ladies, or the old maids for that matter, the parlor lamp has a faculty of growing very dim after the folks have retired.

Well, Tecumseh electric lights are operated on the same principal. They distribute very little light after the town is wrapped in peaceful slumber. It was after the lights had grown dim that Rich and his lady friend were returning to town after a pleasant drive through the country. To be precise the hour was nearly 12, the time when the ghost walks. Their homeward trip carried them past the cemetery.

As they neared the place of the dead, a dim object clothed in white, hove into sight, coming rapidly up the walk toward them. Their hats poised majestically on the uppermost ends of their hair, and the horse shied to the opposite side of the street. The object in white drew nearer. Sparks flew from the stone walk at every step. Rich is not positive that he smelled sulphur but thinks he did. It was there anyway. Like a flash of lightning the ghost passed them. By the time they had recovered from their fright it had vanished.

Was it a real, live ghost, they asked each other. They didn't want to spring a ghost story unless they were sure they had seen one, and so they finally mustered up courage to drive back toward the cemetery. The ghost shortly appeared coming back. The sparks flew more furiously than before. And the brimstone? Yes, it was there sure this time. No furthur investigation was necessary to convince them that they had seen the real thing, and the next day they sprung it on their friends. Of course they were given the merry "Haw Haw" and told "You must have been a dreaming," but they couldn't see it that way. So some of the wise ones started an investigation with the following result: The ghost was an aspirant for a college track team. He was clothed in the regulation white suit and spiked shoes. He was taking his work out at that unseemly hour because he was afraid he might startle the natives were he to appear in costume during the light of day. The spikes in his shoes striking the stone walk, naturally produced sparks. And as to the sulphur, well, they must have imagined that. It was hard for Rich to swallow this for an example but he had to come to it.—Adrian Telegram.

ROUND ABOUT US.

They say that when a Tecumseh girl gets mad and rises from her fellow's knee, but thinks better of it and goes back again, it's called a relapse.

While attending to his duties at the water works Saturday, Engineer Gloman suffered an injury to the index finger of his right hand by getting it caught in the machinery. The end of the finger was torn off, and Mr. Gloman is doing light duty for a few days. Dr. M. B. Prentiss rendered the necessary surgical aid.—Hudson Post.

A woman was arrested in Adrian, Tuesday night, who had just arrived from Detroit. She had a $100 bill which she wanted changed. A detective was close on her trail and arrested her. It seems she had entered a house in Detroit where there had been a death, and while posing as a mourner had stolen considerable money. She gave the name of Alice Cornell.—Ex.

Some time ago the village council ordered five more electric lights, but as the general fund was then low and the lights were not put up. As we will have one more saloon and more money in the general fund this matter ought to be attended to. The lights at the present time are too far apart, and do not give the satisfaction they would if closer together. The five lights should be started at once.—Milan Leader.

SPRING WEDDING

Miss Lulu Jones and Mr. Albert Deming were United in Holy Wedlock

WEDNESDAY EVENING

At The Bride's Home on Pearl Street In the Presence of Forty Relatives and Friends.

The marriage of Miss Lulu Jones, daughter of David Jones, and Mr. Albert Deming occurred Wednesday evening at seven o'clock at the bride's home on Pearl street in the presence of forty guests. It was in every sense a home wedding, attended by that simplicity which distinguishes at all times the gentle and lovable bride.

Only members of the Deming and Jones family and a few friends were present. The bride and groom walked into the parlor unattended to meet the Rev. W. F. Jones, who spoke the impressive words, using the beautiful ring service. The bride, a stately girl of charming personality, wore a gown of white organdie trimmed with green velvet.

After congratulations, the guests were ushered to the dining room where an elaborate supper was served in charge of Mrs. John Campbell.

Miss Jones is well and favorably known here having been an employe in the post office about eight years. Mr. Deming has driven the fire team for the past two years and has gained many friends in that time who wish them happiness and success.

Among those present from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Smith and two children, of Britton; Mrs. E. W. Cairns, of Toledo; Mrs. Hooten and son, of Franklin; Mrs. Clark Payne, of Adrian; and Miss Myrtelle McDermid, of Clinton.

TRAIN WRECKED

EXPLOSION OF NAPTHA

North bound through freight train No. 54, of the Detroit Southern road, had just pulled through the village of West Cairo, 6 miles north of this city, at 2:35 Tuesday morning and was running along at a rate of speed of about ten or twelve miles an hour when a tank of naptha, the sixth car behind the engine, exploded with a loud report, wrecking three cars, derailing others and sending sheets of flame high in the air. The wreck brought the train to an adrupt standstill and before assistance reached the scene thirteen cars, ten of them loaded and three empty, were burned to their trucks.

Brakeman Norris was sitting in the side door of an empty box car, the fourth car behind the engine and second car ahead of the tank of naptha, when the explosion occurred and doesn't know how he got out of the mix-up. An empty box car that was between the one Norris was in and the tank car was broken into kindling wood when the crash occurred and the rear end of the car he was in were torn off and shattered. After the piling up of cars ceased, Norris found himself at one side of the track and was so badly battered up that he at first feared he was seriously injured. Both of his feet were badly bruised and one ankle and his back were seriously sprained. He managed to limp back to the caboose and later was brought to this city on an engine, and after receiving the attention of a physician, left for Tecumseh on north bound passenger train No. 2.

The wreck train from this place was hurried to the scene as soon as the accident was reported, but when they reached there, there was nothing left of the thirteen cars except the trucks and other iron parts.

IMPURE BAKING POWDER SEIZED.

The New York Board of Health Find it Contains Alum and Rock, Declare it dangerous to Health and Dump it Into the River.

The New York papers report that the Health Department of that city has seized as dangerous to health nearly two tons of cheap mixtures sold for baking powder, and dumped them into the offal scow to be destroyed. More of the powder was found in a sixth avenue department store. The report of the analysis of the Health Department stated that it was "an alum baking powder" containing alum and pulverized rock.

The different health authorities seem to have different ways of repressing the sale of bad baking powders. In England they have prosecuted the groccers under the general law and broken up the traffic. In Missouri the sale of alum baking powder is actually prohibited by law. In New York they seize the unwholesome stuff and cast it into the river, without any discussion. The latter way is certainly effective.

The alum baking powders are usually offered at a low price, ten to twenty cents a pound, or with some prize, as a temptation to the housewife.

Consumers can protect themselves by buying only high-grade baking powder of established name and reputation. Do not be tempted by the grocer to take something else as "just as good" or "our own brand," for the trials show that the grocer himself is often deceived by unscrupulous makers and is selling an alum powder without knowing it.

There are several good powders on the market; let the housekeeper insist on having what she knows is right, and not be induced to risk the life of the family for an imaginary saving of a few cents.

TWENTY-SIXTH

Annual Convention of the W. C. T. U. was held in the

METHODIST CHURCH

Here Wednesday and Thursday, May 7th and 8th.

The twenty-sixth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the 2nd congressional district held in the Methodist church of this place May 7th and 8th, was a time of unusual interest and afforded our people an opportunity which does not often come to many of them of hearing what this organized band of temperance women are doing in our own and adjacent counties.

The session Wednesday morning opened with singing Jesus lover of my soul. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. President of the county union and acting president of the convention. This was an impressive service because of the allusions to the beloved president so recently gone on before.

Then came the seating of the convention by counties, the roll call of officers and superintendents, and appointment of committees on courtesies, credentials, resolutions and auditing.

Mrs. Helen Naftzker read an excellent paper on the subject "Woman's Temperance Deity in Society," in which the importance of agitation was made prominent. In the discussion which followed much emphasis was given to the value of the white ribbon in the promotion of temperance agitation. As this little badge worn by the W. C. T. U. women so often introduces the subject of temperance and makes it the topic of conversation.

The morning session closed by repeating the 23rd Psalm together, followed by the noontide prayer. At the opening of the afternoon session a memorial service in memory of Mrs. S. T. Carpenter, C. E. Weaver and others was conducted by Mary Wood. This was followed by reports of presidents of Washtenaw and Lenawee counties.

Mrs. Merritt Boyd's paper on "The Effect of Ballot on the Character and Public standing of Women," showed that in her mind woman's sphere of usefulness would be enlarged by the ballot and that it would place in her hand the most efficient weapon with which to defend her rights and protect her home. Reports were given by superintendents of jail and prison work, purity, almshouse and flower mission, showing that practical work is done along these lines.

The parliamentary drill by Mrs. Fannie Schermerhorn was instructive and showed that many of the ladies were good parliamentarians. Mrs. Julia Reed gave a recitation. A carefully prepared paper was read by Mrs. Frances Mercer on "The Power of Habit."

Reports were given by the Superintendents of Legislation and Petition, Franchise and Scientific Temperance Instruction. A condensed but interesting report of the national convention by Mrs. Carpenter was read by the corresponding secretary. The evening session was one of unusual interest. The addresses of welcome, In behalf of the churches by Dr. L. G. North; In behalf of the schools by Prof. L. M. Kellogg; In behalf of the business men, Dr. Geo. Howell; In behalf of the Union, Mrs. Fannie Waring were no formal stereotyped words of greeting but genuine and inspiring, showing the sympathy of the speakers with the work and for the workers.

The response was given by Mrs. Jennie Lockwood. An excellent paper was read by Mrs. Caroline Humphrey, subject, The Hope of our Nation. Mrs. Humphrey is District Superintendent of Scientific Temperance instruction and it is based upon the teaching of this principle so generally adopted by our schools that her hope is based.

A recitation was given by Miss Carol Wood in her usual pleasing manner. The music throughout the evening was appreciated by the audience.

Thursday morning the devotinal exercises were led by Mrs. Rawson who read the 90th Psalm. After the reports of recording secretary and treasurer were given, a paper was read by Mrs. Ewing upon the subject, "Is there a decrease in the work of the W. C. T. U. The paper and discussion which followed showed that there are times of discouragement when this thought is entertained but is quickly banished by remembering that it is God's work and cannot fail though the growth may be small.

Reports were given by Superintendents on Work for Railroad Employes, Press and District Reporter, School Savings Banks, Peace and Arbitration, Corresponding Secretary reported 747 members in the district. There were 53 voting delegates present. A considerable time was given to the election of officers. Mrs. Densmore, of Ann Arbor was elected president; Mrs. Warner, Ypsilanti, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Mary E. Wood, Tecumseh, treasurer.

The afternoon session opened with devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. Reed, of Onsted. An excellent paper was read by Mrs. Hawley on the subject "Woman, the Guardian of Public Morals." At this point the children from the primary grades came in and entertained the convention for a few minutes. They sang songs and spoke pieces and Mrs. Caroline Humphrey spoke to the children on liquor drinking, cigarette smoking and State Savings banks. Her teaching was pointed and seemed to impress the children.

The question box in charge of Mrs. E. L. Calkins was an interesting feature of the afternoon session. The report of the committee on resolutions was given, also the report of the Y's.

In the evening Rev. W. F. Jones conducted the devotional exercises and Mrs. Calkins, of Kalamazoo, gave a fine address. The music was in charge of Dr. Maddox as on the previous evening.

It was said of a rich miser that he died of great want—the want of more money.

Mr. S. Erskin, proprietor of the well known barber shop says: "For ten years off and on I had a dull pain in my back, imperfect action of the kidneys, and often I could hardly stoop or get up again. I think it was caused by standing so much at my work. Be that as it may, I was in bad shape. I used a great many medicines but without receiving much benefit until Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and I got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store. I must confess that I was agreeably surprised for after using one box I was much relieved. After the use of two boxes my back is stronger and better than it has been for a long time. Doan's Kidney Pills are the best medicine I have ever used and I have such faith in them, I believe I will be conferring a kindness on those suffering from kidney trouble in making known their merits"

Since using the pills I can say my nervous system has been toned up, I sleep well, the headaches are gone and my indigestion is greatly improved. I think the pills a fine nerve medicine."

VERY DISASTROUS TO CUBA

Is Opinion of Witness If Sugar Duty Is Not Reduced.

Washington, May 8.—Manuel Rionda, a member of the sugar brokerage firm of Czarnikow, Macdougall & Co., of New York and London, was before the senate committee on relations with Cuba yesterday. He says his firm has business connections in all parts of Cuba, but no branch houses in that country. He estimated the annual product of the independent sugar refineries of the United States at 536,048 tons. Senator Platt asked what would be the effect of a reduction of the duty on Cuban sugar, and the witness replied that the Cuban seller would receive the entire benefit. The price on Cuban sugar never would, however, go beyond the parity of beet sugars—that was the danger line—for the purchaser would take the beet sugar in preference. He did not believe that the American Sugar Refining company would get any of the benefits of a concession. The Cuban producers could hold their sugar and the refiners would be compelled to go to another market, with the result that they would advance the price in that market and thus get squeezed themselves instead of squeezing the Cuban producers.

"What would be the effect upon Cuban sugars in case there should be no reduction in the duty?"

"Very disastrous, because those who have made advances on Cuban sugar to the extent of 2½ cents per pound would call all their loans in for fear the price would go lower, and it is to be feared that a panic would ensue."

"Would it not lower the price the world over?"

"Not necessarily, because Cuba is very weak financially."

Expresses Great Sympathy Over Death of Archbishop Corrigan.

New York, May 8.—The Rev. Dr. Ferranti, Italian secretary to Archbishop Corrigan, made public last night a cablegram which was received at the archiepiscopal residence from Cardinal Rampolla, pontifical secretary of state at Rome, expressing the sorrow of Pope Leo at the demise of Mgr. Corrigan. The cablegram was addressed to the Rev. Dr. Farranti and is as follows:

"The holy father, with great sorrow, leans of the death of the grand archbishop, whom he hoped to see in Rome very soon. His holiness, who appreciates very highly the especial merits of the dead prelate, expresses his sympathy from the depth of his heart for the Metropolitan church of New York and he prays God to give to the soul of the great archbishop the repose of the just and the premium of eternal glory."

Masses for the repose of the soul of Archbishop Corrigan were said Wednesday at St. Patrick's cathedral and were largely attended. Later in the morning the body of the archbishop was carried into the cathedral and placed at the end of the center aisle, and just in front of the altar. Thousands viewed the remains during the day.

Tars Did Nothing Wrong.

Vienna, May 8.—It is learned here that the facts of the reported arrest at Trieste of four sailors from the United States cruiser Chicago for alleged disorderly conduct in a cafe are as follows: Last Sunday evening four sailors from the Chicago were baited by a crowd of civilians while ashore at Trieste. The police interfered and arrested one of the civilians. The chief of police at Trieste says that the conduct of the American sailors ashore was above reproach.

French Fishermen Cause Trouble.

St. Johns, N. F., May 8.—The residents of St. George, on the French shore, complain bitterly of depredations practiced by the French fishermen who recently arrived there. No warships are yet on the coast and the lawlessness of the Frenchmen is unchecked. Local fishermen are compelled to carry guns in their boats in order to protect their herring nets. An extra force of police has been ordered to the scene to prevent further trouble.

Sorry He Spoke.

He was in the parlor of a St. Louis residence while his fiancee was playing a Chopin sonata on the piano. Her mother was seated almost opposite her future son-in-law, and when the proper opportunity presented itself she said:

"Don't you think Edna has a great ear for music?"

"I certainly do," replied the young man. "If you'd stretch a few strings across, it would make a lovely guitar"—

But he never finished his sentence.—New York Herald.

It All Depends.

A student long ago asked the president of Oberlin college if he could not be permitted to take a shorter course of study.

"Oh, yes," replied the president, "but that depends upon what you want to make of yourself. When God wants to make an oak, he takes a hundred years, but when he wants to make a squash he takes six months."—Instructor.

Sold for Scrap-iron.

Santiago, May 7.—A representative of an American company has purchased the wrecks of the Spanish warships Almirante Oquendo and Vizcaya, and they will be broken up and sent to Philadelphia as scrap iron. The vessels will yield about 30,000 tons and the government will receive $1 a ton.

Tired Out

"I was very poorly and could hardly get about the house. I was tired out all the time. Then I tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and it only took two bottles to make me feel perfectly well."—Mrs. N. S. Swinney, Princeton, Mo.

Tired when you go to bed, tired when you get up, tired all the time. Why? Your blood is impure, that's the reason. You are living on the border line of nerve exhaustion. Take Ayer's Sarsaparilla and be quickly cured. $1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Ask your doctor what he thinks of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He knows all about this grand old family medicine. Follow his advice and we will be satisfied.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. One Town Must Suffer.

Washington, May 7.—Senator Burrows has introduced in the senate an amendment to the public building bill for enlarging the Kalamazoo postoffice building, at a cost of $60,000. The house refused to vote anything for the Kalamazoo building, but allowed $80,000 for a new building at Battle Creek, which is in the same district. As it is not customary for two towns in one district during a single session, one of the two towns named is fated to be left.

Attempted Suicide.

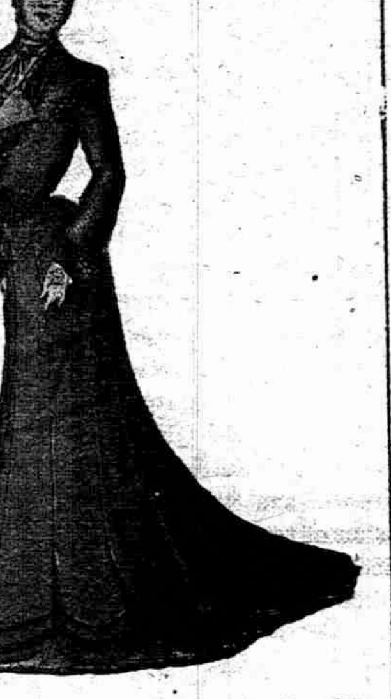
Detroit, Mich., May 7.—Despondency, caused by not being able to get a position with the street car company, was the probable cause of an effort at self-destruction by shooting of W. H. Brunner, of Muncie, Ind., who was stopping at a Fort street rooming house. He committed the act some time Monday night and was discovered the following morning. He was taken to a hospital, but his chances of recovery are very slight.

Stylish Spring Costumes

NEW FEATURES IN TAILOR-MADES.

Gown of Fancy Suiting and White Moire.

The material for this handsome street costume is a fancy suiting, but it will also be quite chic if developed of smooth finished cloth. Some of the newest features in tailor-mades, the basque or skirt as well as the broad shoulder effect are combined in this smart gown. The long rolling collar and the straps over the shoulder and around the bottom of skirt are of moire. The revers and the extension vest are of white moire stitched with several rows of Corticelli silk; small buttons are set down the center of the vest as well as on the fronts, and clusters of buttons are placed on the shoulder straps and sleeves. The latter are quite novel, the fitted undersleeves of moire being complete with cloth oversleeves flaring at the bottom. The skirt is laid in wide tucks and spread out in a very full flare at the hem.



As the season advances the preference for mixed and fancy suitings becomes more and more distinct and it seems almost as if the latter would in a very short time be used entirely instead of the smooth-finished cloths; although the cloth is by far the most dressy in appearance it is of more compact and closer weave than the mixed suitings and homespuns, which, together with Scotch tweed and covert cloth are in the lead at present.

State Republican Convention.

Washington, May 7.—Chairman Diekema, of the republican state committee, has decided definitely to have the committee meet at Grand Rapids May 30, to fix the time and place for the state convention. Word has been received from enough members of the committee to indicate that the convention is likely to be held about the end of June or early in July, in Detroit.

KID-NE-OIDS CURED HIS SUFFERING.

Have been afflicted with kidney and bladder diseases for the past three years, being chronic from the start, was in much pain and forced to stop work. For the past four months I have faithfully tried several of the so-called "guarantee cures" but without any benefit. I finally concluded to try Kid-Ne-Oids and began to feel better immediately after using them. I continued using them and am now permanently cured. I make this statement of my own volition and will make oath to it if necessary.—Geo. S. Estell, Kansas City, Mo.

THEDFORD'S
BLACK-DRAUGHT
THE ORIGINAL
LIVER MEDICINE

A sallow complexion, dizziness, biliousness and a coated tongue are common indications of liver and kidney diseases. Stomach and bowel troubles, severe as they are, give immediate warning by pain, but liver and kidney troubles, though less painful at the start, are much harder to cure. Thedford's Black-Draught never fails to benefit diseased liver and weakened kidneys. It stirs up the torpid liver to throw off the germs of fever and ague. It is a certain preventive of cholera and Bright's disease of the kidneys. With kidneys reinforced by Thedford's Black-Draught thousands of persons have dwelt immune in the midst of yellow fever. Many families live in perfect health and have no other doctor than Thedford's Black-Draught. It is always on hand for use in an emergency and saves many expensive calls of a doctor.

Mullins, S. C., March 10, 1901.
I have used Thedford's Black-Draught for three years and I have not had to go to a doctor since I have been taking it. It is the best medicine for me that is on the market for liver and kidney troubles and dyspepsia and other complaints. Rev. A. G. LEWIS.

Want Murderer Hawley Discharged.

Detroit, Mich., May 7.—James B. Hawley, charged with the murder of his brother, Ed T. Hawley, had his examination before Judge Sellers in the police court Tuesday afternoon, and as a result of the evidence brought out by Attorney George F. Monaghan in his cross-examination of the witness, it is possible that Jim Hawley will be cleared of the charge and be discharged without having to stand trial in the recorder's court. Attorney Monaghan argued that there never was a better case of self-defense, and he urged the court to discharge Hawley at once.

There are so many ordinary cough remedies made by druggists and others that are cheap and good for light colds perhaps but for severe Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup—and especially for Consumption, where there is difficult expectoration and coughing during the nights and mornings, there is nothing like German Syrup. WORK OF RELIEF BEGINS

Report That American and British Consuls and Families Perished Are Confirmed—Island of St. Vincent is Partially Destroyed.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, May 12.—Advices received here from the vicinity of St. Pierre (ten miles from here), contain further details of the terrible volcanic upheaval which resulted in utter destruction of that town and the death of nearly all its inhabitants.

On Monday a stream of boiling lava burst through the top of the crater and plunged into the valley of the river Blanche, overwhelming the Guerin sugar works and killing 23 work people and the son of the proprietor.

But about 8 o'clock on Thursday morning a shower of fire rushed down on St. Pierre and the coast from Le Carbet, which had a population of 6,000, to Le Pecheur, which had a population of 4,000, burning up everything in its path.

Throughout Thursday the heat in the vicinity of St. Pierre was so intense and the stream of floating lava was so unremitting that it was impossible to approach the town during the early part of the day. As evening approached the French cruiser Suchet, after a heroic battle with the heat, suffocation and sulphur fumes, succeeded in making a dash toward the shore, nearing the land close enough to take off 30 survivors of the disaster, all of whom were horribly burned and mutilated.

St. Pierre at that time was an absolute, smoking waste concealing 30,000 corpses, whose rapid decomposition necessitated in some cases instantly completing their cremation, which was only partially accomplished by the lava.

The work of relief is progressing here on the most extensive scale possible. The latest reports received here showed that lava continues to pour down the slopes of the mountain, while fresh crevasses are continually opening.

Paris, May 12.—The minister of marine, M. De Lanessan, has received a cable dispatch from the commander of the French cruiser Suchet, dated Fort de France, Martinique, saying that he conducted a search at St. Pierre Saturday. The captain reports that the town is a mere heap of smoking ruins, under which the victims of the catastrophe are buried. The Suchet was able to convey some of the inhabitants of Le Pecheur to Fort de France, but could not reach the northernmost part of the island on account of the dense rain and ashes.

The captain of the Suchet further reported that the Mont Pelee volcano still had a threatening aspect Saturday evening. Subterranean rumblings were still heard, flashes of flame frequently belched from the volcano and stones were thrown out with immense force. A dispatch received at the colonial office here today from Fort de France says there is no doubt that Gov. Mouttet and the commander of the troops at St. Pierre, Col. Dain, are dead.

Other dispatches confirm the reports that the American and British consuls and their families perished.

President Loubet has contributed 20,000 francs and the cabinet has donated 5,500 francs to the fund being raised here for the sufferers by the St. Pierre disaster.

Kingston, Island of St. Vincent, B. W. I., May 12.—After numerous earthquakes during the preceding fortnight, accompanied by subterranean rumblings in the direction of Soufriere volcano, in the northwestern part of the island, a loud explosion from the crater occurred Monday last, and the water in the crater lake ascended in a stupendous cloud of steam and exploded heavily.

The noises grew louder continually till Wednesday morning, when the old crater, three miles in circumference, and the new crater formed by the last eruption, belched smoke and stones, forcing the residents of Wallibou and Richmond Valley, beneath the volcano, to flee to Chateau Belair for refuge.

The thunderous noises, which continually increased, were heard in neighboring islands 200 miles away.

At midday the creaters ejected enormous columns of steamy vapor, rising majestically eight miles high and expanding into wonderful shapes. The mountain labored to rid itself of a mass of molten lava, which later flowed over in six streams down the side of the volcano.

On the morning of Friday there was a fresh eruption. The crater is still active as this dispatch is sent and great loss of life is believed to have occurred.

The lava has destroyed several districts, with their live stock. People are fleeing to this town, and streams are dried up.

Several districts have not yet been heard from, and the scene of the eruption is unapproachable. Every hour brings sadder news.

New York, May 12.—Rear-Admiral Barker, commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard, said yesterday that he had received orders to get the converted cruiser Dixie ready for sea at the earliest possible moment, but that no orders for sailing had been received, and he had not been informed officially that she was going to St. Pierre.

New Orleans, May 12.—The French flagship Tage, with Admiral Servan in command, left here at daybreak for Martinique. The admiral issued a quick call for contributions and will take along about $4,000 in cash, as well as a great deal of provisions and clothing, furnished by Gov. Heard, Mayor Capdeville and the public in general.

GRAND CEREMONIES

Attended Laying of Cornerstone of Adventist Sanitarium.

CHORUS OF 300 VOICES

New Roman Catholic Church, St. Philip's, Also Dedicated at Battle Creek —St. Simon's Catholic Church at Ludington Lays Its Cornerstone.

Battle Creek, Mich., May 12.—An elaborate program of song and prayer was carried out Sunday at the laying of the cornerstone of the new sanitarium. The opening chorus, under the direction of Prof. Edwin Barnes, was located on a raised platform above the speakers' rostrum, and 300 trained voices sang "Praise Ye the Father," accompanied by the Germania orchestra.

Elder Ycurgus McCoy, chaplain of the institution, read the scripture lesson. Prayer was offered by Rev. Wm. H. Osborne of St. Thomas's Episcopal church. A hymn and chorus, "Send Forth Thy Light," followed.

Elder W. W. Prescott of ceremonies, opened proceedings, saying "Behold, I laid in Zion a stone, a tried stone, a cornerstone." Rev. Demster D. Marton of the First Methodist church spoke fluently. Hon. Edwin C. Nichols made some forcible and appropriate remarks, and was loudly cheered, as were all the speakers. Official duties detained his excellency, Gov. Bliss, but he sent his private secretary, Herbert E. Johnson, who made a short address. Hon. Perry F. Powers, auditor-general; Mayor Fred H. Webb, Dr. David Paulson of the American Medical Missionary college, and Elder W. A. Spicer also spoke.

An interlude was played by the orchestra, and the medical students and nurses in uniform marched on to the platform amid cheers and applause. Dr. John H. Kellogg spoke at some length, and then, at exactly 5:22 o'clock, placed a sealed copper box in the stone, putting the plaster over it with his own hands. In the box were articles of incorporation of the Sanitarium and International Medical Missionary association, copies of local and state papers. Photographs of the fire, of various nurses' classes which had graduated, of the physicians' institution, of Dr. Kellogg's family, his assistant, Dr. George Thomason, charred coins from the ruins, coin over 1,000 years old, and coin of 1902 was also among the deposits.

Ten thousand people were in attendance.

The new Roman Catholic church of St. Phillip's was also dedicated here Sunday, over 50 prists from different parts of the state taking part in the ceremonies, which lasted throughout the day.

At 7:30 in the morning 52 children received their first communion and later on a class of 178 received the sacred rite of confirmation at the hands of the Right Rev. John S. Foley, bishop of Detroit. Rev. Fathers R. J. Sadlier and E. Fisher officiated at the early service.

The dedication service was begun at 10:30, when Bishop Foley officiated, assisted by Rev. James Doherty as deacon and Rev. J. J. Brogan as subdeacon. The solemn high mass which followed was celebrated by Rev. J. P. McManus, assisted by Rev. O'Rourke as deacon and Rev. James Brakaw as sub-deacon. Rev. James Kramer was master of ceremonies.

Vespers were concluded at 7:30 in the evening by Rev. E. Kelly, assisted by Rev. McCann and Rev. M. Ryan, Rev. F. O'Rourke acting as master of ceremonies.

Ludington, Mich., May 12.—The laying of the cornerstone of the St. Simon's Catholic church was the occasion of a great gathering in this city Sunday. Over 1,500 persons were present and saw Bishop H. J. Richter of Grand Rapids bless the stone and place it in position. Fr. Brown, a former Ludington priest, and Fr. Bosche of Milwaukee were also present. The latter preached the sermon for the day. The new church will cost $20,000, and $17,000 of this amount has already been raised.

The Suitor.

Once upon a time a young man fell desperately in love with a girl who consumed many sweets as also many after theater suppers at his expense. He gave her numerous presents and spent a large proportion of his salary for her pleasure.

Finally they were married, and trouble began, for the man could not spend as much on his wife as he had on his fiancee. Then she treated him cruelly and in an unwifely manner, and he brought suit for a divorce from her. The court granted his petition, but decreed that he should pay costs and alimony.

A GENERAL STRIKE

One Ordered in Pa. Anthracite Coal Region.

TO BEGIN MONDAY NEXT

The Executive Committee of the Mine Workers Failed to Gain Any Concessions—A Delegate Convention Will Convene May 14.

Scranton, Pa., May 10.—A general strike of the miners of the anthracite region has been ordered for Monday next, but the order has a reserve qualification attached. The question as to whether the strike is to be made permanent is left to the decision of a convention of delegates of all the local organizations of the mine workers, to be held at Hazelton next Wednesday.

The miners' executive committee of three districts met Friday morning and had a three-hour session. At 4:30 o'clock the committeemen again assembled and remained in session until 7:30 o'clock. When the session concluded, President Mitchell prepared a statement and, assembling the newspaper men at the St. Charles hotel, read to them as follows from a typewritten paper:

"To the Anthracite Mine Workers of Pennsylvania: Gentlemen, the executive committee of the anthracite mine workers who were delegated by the Shamokin convention to represent you with the railroad presidents and mine operators for the purpose of obtaining increased wages, shorter hours and better conditions of employment, have exhausted all peaceable, conciliatory and honorable means at their command and have failed to secure any concessions of a tangible nature. The committees, after three days' serious deliberation, feel that in justice to the anthracite mine workers and those dependent upon them, before a general strike is inaugurated, the question should be further considered by a delegate convention in which representatives from the various local unions shall be fully instructed by their constituents and prepared to vote for or in opposition to a complete cessation of work.

"In the meantime, all persons employed in or around the collieries, strippings, washeries and breakers are instructed to temporarily abstain from working, beginning with Monday, May 12, and continuing thereafter until a final decision is reached by a delegate convention, which will convene Wednesday morning, May 14, at Hazelton, Pa.

"The instruction for all men to suspend work on Monday does not include firemen, engineers, pump men and other labor necessary to preserve the properties of the operators."

The order is signed by all the district presidents and secretaries.

There was a big crowd about the strike headquarters, and the proverbial dropping of a pin could have been audible at any time. President Mitchell, standing in the center of the crowd on a chair, read the statement.

Immediately on the conclusion of President Mitchell's reading the crowd scattered, and in an indescribably short space of time the news had spread by word of mouth and message all through the valley. There is not a particle of question but that the miners will religiously obey the order and that Monday next not so much as a shovelful of coal will be mined.

NATIONAL GRANGE

Preparations Under Way for Its Annual Meeting.

THE MONTHLY CROP REPORT

Shows That April Weather Was Not Favorable to Wheat—Oats Are Slow—Farm Wages Are Higher—Outlook for Fruit Favorable.

Lansing, Mich., May 10.—The executive committee of the State Grange met here yesterday to deliberate on arrangements for the annual meeting of the National Grange, which will be held here next fall.

Arrangements for the degree work are well under way. The first four degrees will be worked simply as object lessons. Capital, Vermontville, Dewitt and probably the Cambria granges will confer the work. Ingham county grange will exemplify the fifth degree, and the sixth and seventh degrees, for which it is expected there will be a vast number of candidates, will be worked by the state and national granges respectively.

The Michigan crop report for May, issued by Secretary of State Warner last evening, says that April weather was not favorable to the growth of wheat and grass, the average temperature being below normal. High wind prevailed much of the time and increased the unfavorable conditions.

The condition of wheat is not as good as it was one month ago, the decline being due to the cool, dry weather. Some correspondents report Hessian fly in the wheat, but as yet no great amount of damage has been done. The average condition of wheat in the state is 82. One year ago it was 79. The per cent of wheat sown in the southern counties that will be plowed up because winter-killed is 5, and in the state 5. The damage by Hessian fly is 6 per cent in the state. One year ago it was reported at 20 per cent.

The conditions of meadows and clover in the state is 89. The acreage sown to clover as compared with 1901 is 95. The acreage of clover that will be plowed up because winter-killed, or otherwise destroyed, is 8 per cent.

Oats were sown quite early this year, but thus far their growth has been slow.

The average monthly wages, with board, are $20.20 for the state. The average wages by the day, without board, are $1.22. Last year these wages were $18.34 and $1.16 respectively. Many correspondents report that farm laborers are very scarce, and this fact is indicated by the continued rise in wages.

Conditions continue to be favorable for a large fruit crop. The peach crop will be light in southwestern Michigan, the buds having been killed last December. The following shows in per cent the prospect for a crop of the various kinds of fruit at the present time: Apples, 89; pears, 80; peaches, 68; plums, 82; cherries, 90; small fruit. 90.

Lumbermen Lose Heavily by Flood.

Midland, Mich., May 10.—The heavy rains of the past week sent the rivers howling over their banks. Lumbermen suffered heavily. W. B. Detroit, Mich., May 10.—The charge of murder against James B. Hawley, who killed his brother Ed, was reduced to manslaughter by Justice Sellers in police court yesterday afternoon, and bail placed at $5,000, and Hawley was bound over to the recorder's court.

His Passion.

A negro man went into Mr. E.'s office for the purpose of instituting a divorce against his wife. Mr. E. proceeded to question him as to his grounds for complaint. Noticing that the man's voice failed him, Mr. E. looked up from his papers and saw that big tears were running down over the cheeks of the applicant for divorce.

"Why," said the lawyer, "you seem to care a great deal for your wife? Did you love her?"

"Love her, sir? I jest analyzed her!"

This was more than professional dignity could withstand, and Mr. E. laughed until the negro, offended, carried his case elsewhere.—Short Stories.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

BLACK ROCK

By RALPH CONNOR

Old man Nelson was busy with his own team. He turned slowly at Mr. Craig's greeting. "How is it, Nelson?" And it was with a very grave voice he answered:

"I hardly know, sir, but I am not gone yet, though it seems little to hold to."

"All you want for a grip is what your hand can cover. What would you have? And, besides, do you know why you are not gone yet?"

The old man waited, looking at the minister gravely.

"Because he hasn't let go his grip of you."

"How do you know he's gripped me?"

"Now, look here, Nelson, do you want to quit this thing and give it all up?"

"No—for heaven's sake, no! Why, do you think I would quit it?" said Nelson almost piteously.

"Well, he's keener about it than you, and I'll bet you haven't thought it worth while to thank him."

"To thank him," he repeated almost stupidly, "for"—

"For keeping you where you are over night," said Mr. Craig almost sternly.

"You're right! Thank God, you're right!"

And then he turned quickly away and went into the stable behind his team. It was a minute before he came out. Over his face there was a trembling joy.

"Can't I do anything for you today?" he asked humbly.

"Indeed you just can," said the minister, taking his hand and shaking it very warmly, and then he told him Slavin's programme and ours.

"Sandy is all right till after his race. After that is his time of danger," said the minister.

"I'll stay with him, sir," said old Nelson in the tone of a man taking a covenant and immediately set off for the coffee tent.

"Here comes another recruit for your corps," I said, pointing to Leslie Graeme, who was coming down the street at that moment in his light sleigh.

"I am not so sure. Do you think you could get him?"

I laughed. "You are a good one."

"Well," he replied half defiantly, "is not this your fight too?"

"You make me think so, though I am bound to say I hardly recognize myself today. But here goes." And before I knew it I was describing our plans to Graeme, growing more and more enthusiastic as he sat in his sleigh, listening with a quizzical smile I didn't quite like.

"He's got you, too," he said. "I feared so."

"Well," I laughed, "perhaps so. But I want to lick that man Slavin. I've just seen him, and he's just what Craig calls him, 'a slick son of the devil.' Don't be shocked. He says it is Scripture."

"Revised version," said Graeme gravely; while Craig looked a little abashed.

"What is assigned me, Mr. Craig? For I know that this man is simply your agent."

I repudiated the idea, while Mr. Craig said nothing.

"What's my part?" demanded Graeme.

"Well," said Mr. Craig hesitatingly, "of course I would do nothing till I had consulted you, but I want a man to take my place at the sports. I am referee."

"That's all right," said Graeme, with an air of relief. "I expected something hard."

"And then I thought you would not mind presiding at the dinner. I want it to go off well."

"Did you notice that?" said Graeme to me. "Not a bad touch, eh?"

"That's nothing to the way he touched me. Wait and learn," I answered, while Craig looked quite distressed. "He'll do it, Mr. Craig, never fear," I said, "and any other little duty."

"Now, that's too bad of you. That is all I want, honor bright," he replied, adding as he turned away: "You are just in time for a cup of coffee, Mr. Graeme. Now I must see Mrs. Mavor."

"Who is Mrs. Mavor?" I demanded of Graeme.

"Mrs. Mavor? The miners' guardian angel."

We put up the horses and set off for coffee. As we approached the booth Graeme caught sight of the Punch and Judy show, stood still in amazement and exclaimed:

"Can the dead live?"

"Punch and Judy never die," I replied solemnly.

"But the old manipulator is dead enough, poor old beggar!"

He looked at me a moment.

"What? Do you mean you"—

"Yes; that is what I do mean."

"He is a great man, that Craig fellow, a truly great man."

And then he leaned up against a tree and laughed till the tears came.

"I say, old boy, don't mind me," he gasped, "but do you remember the old varsity show?"

"Yes, you villain, and I remember your part in it. I wonder how you can even at this remote date laugh at it."

For I had a vivid recollection of how, after a "chaste and highly artistic performance of this mediæval play" had been given before a distinguished Toronto audience, the trapdoor by which I had entered my box was fastened and I was left to swelter in my cage and forced to listen to the suffocated laughter from the wings and the stage whispers of "Hello, Mr. Punch, where's the baby?" And for many a day after I was subjected to anxious inquiries as to the locality and health of "the baby" and whether it was able to be out.

"Oh, the dear old days!" he kept saying over and over in a tone so full of sadness that my heart grew sore for him and I forgave him, as many a time before.

The sports passed off in typical western style. In addition to the usual running and leaping contests, there was rifle and pistol shooting, in both of which old Nelson stood first, with Shaw, foreman of the mines, second.

The great event of the day, however, was to be the four horse race, for which three teams were entered—one from the mines, driven by Nixon, Craig's friend; a citizens' team and Sandy's. The race was really between the miners' team and that from the woods, for the citizens' team, though made up of speedy horses, had not been driven much together and knew neither their driver nor one another. In the miners' team were four bays, very powerful, a trifle heavy perhaps, but well matched, perfectly trained and perfectly handled by their driver. Sandy had his long, rangy roans and for leaders a pair of half broken pinto bronchos. The pintos, caught the summer before upon the Alberta prairies, were fleet as deer, but wicked and uncertain. They were Baptiste's special care and pride. If they would only run straight, there was little doubt that they would carry the roans and themselves to glory, but one could not tell the moment they might bolt or kick things to pieces.

Being the only nonpartisan in the crowd, I was asked to referee. The race was about half a mile and return, the first and last quarters being upon ice. The course after leaving the ice led up from the river by a long, easy slope to the level above and at the farther end curved somewhat sharply round the old fort. The only condition attaching to the race was that the teams should start from the scratch, make the turn of the fort and finish at the scratch. There were no vexing regulations as to fouls. The man making the foul would find it necessary to reckon with the crowd, which was considered sufficient guarantee for a fair and square race. Owing to the hazards of the course, the result would depend upon the skill of the drivers quite as much as upon the speed of the teams. The points of hazard were at the turn round the old fort and at a little ravine which led down to the river, over which the road passed by means of a long log bridge or causeway.

From a point upon the high bank of the river the whole course lay in open view. It was a scene full of life and vividly picturesque. There were miners in dark clothes and peak caps, citizens in ordinary garb, ranchmen in wide cowboy hats and buckskin shirts and leggings, some with cartridge belts and pistols; a few half breeds and Indians in half native, half civilized dress and, scattering through the crowd, the lumbermen with gay scarlet and blue blanket coats and some with knitted toques of the same colors. A very good natured but extremely uncertain crowd it was. At the head of each horse stood a man, but at the pintos' heads Baptiste stood alone, trying to hold down the off leader, thrown into a frenzy of fear by the yelling of the crowd.

Gradually all became quiet till, in the midst of absolute stillness, came the words, "Are you ready?" then the pistol shot, and the great race began. Above the roar of the crowd came the shrill cry of Baptiste as he struck his broncho with the palm of his hand and swung himself into the sleigh beside Sandy as it shot past.

Like a flash the bronchos sprang to the front two lengths before the other teams; but, terrified by the yelling crowd, instead of bending to the left bank, up which the road wound, they wheeled to the right and were almost across the river before Sandy could swing them back into the course.

Baptiste's cries, a curious mixture of French and English, continued to strike through all other sounds till they gained the top of the slope, to find the others almost a hundred yards in front, the citizens' team leading, with the miners' following close. The moment the pintos caught sight of the teams before them they set off at a terrific pace and steadily devoured the intervening space. Nearer and nearer the turn came, the eight horses in front running straight and well within their speed. After them flew the pintos, running savagely, with ears set back, leading well the big roans, thundering along and gaining at every bound. And now the citizens' team had almost reached the fort, running hard and drawing away from the bays. But Nixon knew what he was about and was simply steadying his team for the turn.

The event proved his wisdom, for in the turn the leading team left the track, lost a moment or two in the deep snow, and before they could regain the road, the bays had swept superbly past, leaving their rivals to follow in the rear. On came the pintos, swiftly nearing the fort. Surely at that pace they cannot make the turn. But Sandy knows his leaders. They have their eyes upon the teams in front and need no touch of rein. Without the slightest change in speed the nimble footed bronchos round the turn, hauling the big roans after them, and fall in behind the citizens' team, which is regaining steadily the ground lost in the turn.

And now the struggle is for the bridge over the ravine. The bays in front, running with mouths wide open, are evidently doing their best. Behind them and every moment nearing them, but at the limit of their speed, too, come the lighter and fleeter citizens' team, while opposite their driver are the pintos, pulling hard, eager and fresh. Their temper is too uncertain to send them to the front. They run well following, but when leading cannot be trusted, and, besides, a broncho hates a bridge, so Sandy holds them where they are, waiting and hoping for his chance after the bridge is crossed. Foot by foot the citizens' team creep up upon the flank of the bays, with the pintos in turn hugging them closely, till it seems as if the three, if none slackens, must strike the bridge together, and this will mean destruction to one at least. This danger Sandy perceives, but he dare not check his leaders. Suddenly within a few yards of the bridge Baptiste throws himself upon the lines, wrenches them out of Sandy's hands and, with a quick swing, faces the pintos down the steep side of the ravine, which is almost sheer ice with a thin coat of snow. It is a daring course to take, for the ravine, though not deep, is full of undergrowth and is partially closed up by a brush heap at the farther end. But, with a yell, Baptiste hurls his four horses down the slope and into the undergrowth. "Allons, mes enfants! Courage! Vite! Vite!" cries their driver, and nobly do the pintos respond.

Regardless of bushes and brush heaps, they tear their way through, but as they emerge the high bob sleigh catches a root, and, with a crash, the sleigh is hurled in the air. Baptiste's cries ring out high and shrill as ever, encouraging his team, and never cease till, with a plunge and a scramble, they clear the brush heap lying at the mouth of the ravine and are out on the ice on the river, with Baptiste standing on the front bob, the box trailing behind and Sandy nowhere to be seen. Three hundred yards of the course remain. The bays, perfectly handled, have gained at the bridge and in the descent to the ice and are leading the citizens' team by half a dozen lengths. Behind both comes Baptiste. It is now or never for the pintos. The rattle of the trailing box, together with the wild yelling of the crowd rushing down the bank, excites the bronchos to madness, and, taking the bits in their teeth, they do their first free running that day. Past the citizens' team like a whirlwind they dash, clear the intervening space and gain the flanks of the bays. Can the bays hold them? Over them leans their driver, plying for the first time the hissing lash. Only fifty yards more. The miners begin to yell. But Baptiste, waving his lines high in one hand, seizes his toque with the other, whirls it about his head and flings it with a fiercer yell than ever at the bronchos. Like the bursting of a hurricane the pintos leap forward and with a splendid rush cross the scratch, winners by their own length.

ROUND ABOUT US.

An exchange suggests that the best graduating course a girl can take, after receiving a common school education, is a thorough course in roastology, boilology, stitchology, darnology, patchology and general domesticology, and this should fit her for matrimonology.

A country school teacher boxed the ears of one of his pupils a few days ago. The boy told his mother and the next day the teacher received the following note: "Nature has provided a proper place for the punishment of the boy, and it is not on the ear. I will thank you to use it hereafter.—Brooklyn Exponent.

The poor ye have always with you, and so far as Jonesville is concerned, the people very generally hope this is true. Bert Poor is one of the residents of the place, whom they respect, and he has just moved into a fine new house. Poor is no relation to Gov. Rich, of Detroit, and while Rich is not poor, Poor is rich. Jonesville's Poor house is one of the finest in the burg.—Adrian Press.

Here's another terrible warning to beer drinkers. John Kane, aged 75 of Iron Mountain, was drinking a glass of beer last week and dropped dead while so doing. A few days before, an old man had built the kitchen fire for his wife, and brought a pail of water, then dropped dead before he could speak. There are some laws of nature it seems which it is not safe to violate. —Adrian Press.

Southern Michigan is one of the localities where the seventeen-year locust is due this month, and the goverment has sent out warnings. Specimens of the insect have been plowed up in Pittsfield. The English sparrow is said to be especially fond of locusts and one of the best exterminators of the pest. So there is a use for the sparrow after all, and the repeal of the bounty law was a good thing.—Ex.

A Northville crockery dealer, deals in bread. He couldn't loaf away his time, selling plates, lamps and dishes, as the ennui would drive him to his cups, so rolls in the bread, and gets a crumb of comfort in knowing that he secures a slice of the bakers business. Wait till he sees salt rising, and then hear him explain that everything is booming under republican rule. and that he must have his share of the dough.—Adrian Press.

Co. C. of TecumC, elected Harry Kies of Manchester to be captain, but as he was not within the residence limit of six miles, he couldn't see how he could be captain of Co. C. The members were all at sea, till they discovered Dr. Longwell of their own burg, who had served in the Philipines as a lieutenant in a Montana regiment, and he was promptly chosen as the company leader and will wear shoulder straps with two gold bars, made of regulation metal. See?—Adrian Press.

The latest curiosity in Hillsdale county came to light last week. It is like this: A cow owned by John Graham of Allen, gave birth to a great freak of nature last Tuesday. It is a calf with one body, two distinct and well developed heads and neck, two tails and six legs, one peculiar feature of the legs being that four of them were where they belonged and two grew out of the shoulder, one apparently a front leg and the other a hind one. The monstrosity lived but a short time. Mr. Graham has preserved the hide, hoofs, etc, and will have them mounted.—Hillsdale Leader.

There is no need of worrying, fretting and losing sleep because someone has found fault with what you do. 'Tis the common lot of a man in business. The merchant does not please all his customers; the postmaster is kicked and cussed for alleged mistakes; the railroad agent is froquently backed up in a corner and given to understand this and that and the other thing, the butcher is forever reminded of his tough steak, and even the minister finds it hard to please all the congregation with his best sermons. The newspaper man gets more than his share of it and is expected to get out a cheerful newsy paper just the same. A man befriends another for years and is then turned down and abused. Such things are not pleasant, but they always will be so, and the man who goes through them the easiest is the one who pays the least attention to them and goes right along trying to be pleasant and useful.—Ex.

Blood.

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high, we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain, in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

HON. LYMAN J. GAGE.

"The Boy and the Bank."

One does not often read a more pleasing bit of autobiography than that in the May 1st issue of the Youth's Companion, written by the Hon. Lyman J. Gage, Ex-Secretary of the Treasury. "The Boy and the Bank" is the title of the sketch.

Writing after five years of public service, managing the finances of the nation in war and in peace, Mr. Gage recalls how when a youth he first sought employment in a village bank. His ambition had been kindled by its richly gilded sign, and the sight of men going in and coming out with money in their hands. He was offered the position of "messenger and general assistant" at one hundred dollars a year. The title and the glamour of the name "bank" made resistance to proposal impossible. But his dream of working among heaps of yellow gold and glistening silver was soon dissipated. He says:

"I was immediately introduced to the cellar, where, in place of gold and silver there was found a goodly stock of antharcite coal, intended for the supply of two large stoves on the floor above; and it soon became clear that as 'general assistant' I should have to see that the relations between the coal and the stoves were kept warmly intimate.

In my capacity as 'messenger,' my duty was to carry to merchants and dealers notices of notes becoming due at the bank, or drafts requiring payment, sent to the bank for collection from other towns and cities."

Little by little, however, he was trusted with responsible duties, and thus began his career as banker. "Remembering the insignificant beginning" he says, "and keeping in mind its educative value for higher duties and generous rewards, I am impressed with the reflection that a very humble door may open the way to large opportunities."

Stacy and Frank Davidson each rerdy to plank down the whole amount, while J. D. Shull, Charley Bidwell and Jim Wightman would deem it a pleasure to each add as much more. Condemned in Missouri and Confiscated in New York.

Judge Clark, of St. Louis, has convicted and fined heavily a number of grocers for selling baking powder containing alum.

The week before the Health Department of New York seized a quantity of stuff being sold for baking powder, which they found was made from alum mixed with ground rock, and dumped it into the river.

The health authorities are thus taking effective means to prevent the introduction into our markets of injurious substitutes in place of wholesome baking powders.

As alum costs only two cents a pound there is a great temptation for those manufacturers who make substitutes and imitation goods, to use it. Alum baking powders can be detected by the health authorities by chemical analysis, but the ordinary housekeeper, whose assistance in protecting the health of the people is important, cannot make a chemical examination She may easily know the alum powders, however, from the fact that they are sold at from ten to twenty cents for a pound can, or that some prize—like a spoon, or glass, or piece of crockery, or wooden ware—is given with the powder as an inducement.

As the people continue to realize the importance of this subject and consumers insist on having baking powder of established name and character, and as the health authorities continue their vigorous crusades, the alum danger will, it is hoped, finally be driven from our homes.

K. P. MAY PARTY

Given by the Tecumseh Lodge No. 190, at Sutton's Opera House

THURSDAY, MAY 8,

Was a Very Sociable and Enjoyable Event.

The May Party given by the K. P.'s of Tecumseh at Sutton's opera house last Thursday evening was a grand and most successful affair. The house was prettily and tastefully decorated for the occasion. The color scheme was entirely pink and green. Bands of the same colors were festooned from the center of the ceiling to the gallery and were then fastened to the gas jets.

The stage, which was occupied by Whitmier's orchestra of Ypsilanti, presented a very pretty scene, the back being tastefully draped with the national colors and emblems of the lodge. In the center of the triangle which bore the lodge colors was the photograph of their official goat, being ridden by Cupid.

The front of the stage was banked up with weeping willows and ornamented with palms. The whole effect was very pleasing and was the work of a committee of which J. J. Belcher was chairman and the other members were Guy E. Belding, Thos. Adamson, Geo. Church, John Bradd, Frank J Harris, Paul R. Bowen and Fred Aldrich.

The orchestra, of eight pieces, gave a concert to a well filled gallery, who seemed to appreciate the music. They played for twenty-four dances and gave three extras, obligingly repeating any numbers that were called for again. The dance music was pronounded exceptionally fine.

There were sixty couples in attendance, being the largest party given in this place for many years. The K. P. committee promised that everyone should be kept dancing and they kept their word so well that even in the quadrilles, which have heretofore been almost discontinued for lack of interest, the floor was filled to its utmost capacity. The efforts of the lodge to make the party an event of the keenest social enjoyment to every one attending were certainly crowned with abundant success and have placed the Knights among the social powers in local circles.

About twelve o'clock the entire party were ushered to the K. P. hall where an excellent supper was served by the refreshment committee. Even at this time the decorations were not neglected, the tables being beautifully trimmed with carnations and other cut flowers The first K. P. May party was in every way a grand success and will long be remembered by the happy participants.

Among those present from out of town were Miss Ella Bellamy, of Jackson; Parry Tayer and Chas. Navin, of Adrian; Chas. Voegele, of Mansfield, O. and Harry Dennison, of Toledo.

OPERATIONS

By the aid of the X-ray at Dr. Jones' Office

ADRIAN

Witnessed by a number of Citizens.

Operations by the aid of the X-ray at Dr. Jones' office last night were witnessed by several citizens and from reports of the same they were indeed marvelous. Two gentlemen from Hudson, who had each been given up as hopeless cases long since were operated upon by the doctor. Among those who witnessed the operation were Rev. Mr. Banker, Frank Clay, E. J. Shepherd and Mrs. Boucher, the nurse.

The first case, Mr. John Rumsey, had been before several specialists, after consulting the local talent, and it was decided by the experts that his trouble was tubercolosis of the bones in his foot, and removal of the leg was the only thing to save his life. Upon examination under the X-ray, it proved to be the result of long standing injury which left the bones displaced the same as if the several fingers of the hand were doubled backwards at the third joint, this would make a depression of the knuckles and the palm would bulge foward. The hand and the foot are alike in structure and this description best explains the state of affairs. As a result of the displacement the gentleman had been compelled to place his weight upon his heel when moving about.

It was easy to see the condition of things. But a long standing trouble like this seemed to make the case hopeless, but without an anesthetic and with but little pain the doctor gave a succession of quick movements, which caused one after another of the bones to snap back into line and to the delight of all, upon looking through the foot with the X-ray, the bones had returned to nearly the same condition that were seen in the healthy sound foot, and for the first time in two years the young man placed his foot flatly upon the floor in a natural position.

The witnesses could hardly believe their own eyes. Here, a young man given up by the best specialists to have his foot taken off, to have the condition straightened out by a few movements, and walk to the Lake Shore depot to catch the train for his home, with apparently no difficulty, could it be true?

The second case was no less a marvel: Chas. Dillon, who has had a stiff leg as the result of a horse stumbling and falling on him some ten years ago. This had given him so much trouble that he had been confined to his bed for months at a time ever since. He, as the other gentleman, had exhausted all means known to bring about a cure, finally went to Ann Arbor and Detroit, to be told that to save his life amputation of his leg was absolutely necessary, as it was already badly honeycombed, and that consumption of the bone had ate the bones nearly away.

This man's knee was placed under the X-ray and to the horror of the witnesses who looked through they saw that the lower leg bone was perhaps two inches back of the place it should be, making the front edge of the lower leg bone touch the back edge of the upper leg bone. All this space was filled with thick substance liks gristle.

After about three minutes' manipulation of the joint, the young man for the first time in four years, found he had motion in the knee joint. The doctor positively refused to be interviewed regarding these operations at first. But Mr Dillon insisted that the press should be allowed to have reports of the cases, and the witnesses seemed to think the same.

After accomplishing the above operations, the witnesses had the privilege of looking through the liver, heart and lungs of one of the party present The subject being in good health, and it was easy for the doctor to explain X-ray photographs of different diseases, for instance tumor of the chest, several of the tuberculosis of the lungs, these pictures showing plainly when consolidation of the lung tissues has taken place, one showing a deep cavity in the lung. One in particular, which interested the party was after looking at the normal heart, to see the picture of what is known as pericaiditis with effusion. Then no end of pictures were shown of broken bones, gall stones, kidney stones, stones in the bladder, etc.

Mr. Dillon to-day was so delighted with his changed condition that he went into the bank to see Mr. Clay and when he showed how much motion he had of the leg, Mr. Clay said it was simply a marvel to him, the thing of fixing a diseased leg after some ten years' standing, and at least four years of absolutely no use of the joints, seemed far beyond his comprehension,

Rev. Mr. Banker said the operation was indeed a marvel to us, we could very easily see the condition of things, but what skill could reduce the displacement unless an anaesthetic and the knife was used, was more than we cold see. The doctor has the reputation of being one of the most skilled anatomists in this part of the state, we did not see where even his skill would accomplish that which noted specialists had failed upon. Nevertheless, the work of one evening was enough to make any city specialists satisfied with the results he would obtain after two months' steady treatment in this same case.

The joy of the party, who after being given up as hopeless, to find a place for a cure was indeed good to see.

Mr. Clay and Mr. Shepherd were delighted with the operation. Owing to the lateness of the hour their statements could not be obtained.—Adrian Times.

GREAT GROWTH

Of Plant in Tecumseh in

FOUR YEARS

Incresed from 55 to 375 Phones

It is only four years since James Brailey came to Tecumseh to work up the business of the Tecumseh Telephone Co. and succeeded in starting with 50 phones. At this time this was considered to be a large number of phones for Tecumseh, and it was figured at that time it would be years before the hundred mark was reached.

In a few months the 100 switch board was filled up and then the increase did not stop, then a new board that would take in 400 wires was purchased and now the exchange has 375 subscribers and applications on the books for 35 more 'phones, so that as soon as the wires can be strung and 'Phones put in, Tecumseh will have a telephone exchange of over 400 'Phones, which is by all odds the largest exchange in proportion to population of any place in the county.

The office commenced with one operator and now has to employ regularly six young ladies to attend to the calls and one cause of this wonderful increase in the business has been the careful and efficient service always rendered. In fact Tecumseh has as well and carefully a conducted an exchange as can be found in the state which is the cause of the phenominal growth.

For all that can now be said it will not be long before it will reach the 500 mark, in fact the farmers lines alone will soon make a wonderful business.

JUNIOR RECEPTION.

At the spacious home of Dr. Frost was a scene of merry making last Friday night among the seniors and juniors. It was the annual reception given by the juniors to their schoolmates and friends, who are soon to leave the old brick schoolhouse for their broader fields of work.

The decorations were as usual a mingling of junior and senior class colors, parlor and hallway in black and orange, the rear rooms in lemon and violet, which with the light gowns of the girls made a brilliant mass of coloring Aside from the class members there were present the high school teachers and a few friends forming a goodly assemblage, which the large and conveniently arranged rooms saved from being a crowd.

During the course of the evening a musical program was given by Misses Ethel Slayton, Raye McKenna and Anna McClure and Mrs. Ella Hodges. Miss Lulu Aylesworth also recited very entertainingly a little selection. The whole program was charmingly rendered and enjoyed by all.

The program completed, there came a not unwelcome invitation to some prettily laid tables where everybody did justice to as tempting a four course supper as Mrs. Campbell ever planned and to her is due a great deal of credit.

At about 11:30 most of the guests took their departure, a few remaining to enjoy a little dance before finally bringing to an end an evening fraught with enjoyment to all present.

THREE NEW STATES.

House Passes the Bill Admitting Oklahoma, Arizona, New Mexico.

Washington, May 10.—The opposition in the house to the bill for the admission of Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico collapsed at the last minute Friday, and the bill was passed without division as it came from the committee except for a few verbal amendments. The closing scene of the debate were accompanied by a dramatic incident, which narrowly escaped being a tragedy. Delegate Mark A. Smith of Arizona, who has been fighting for the admission of his territory for a dozen years, had just made a vigorous speech against an amendment when he was seized with a rush of blood to the head. He was conveyed to the lobby, where several physicians, who are members of the house, by the prompt administration of powerful heart stimulants saved him from a stroke of apoplexy. He later rallied and was removed to his home.

The bill as passed provides enabling acts for Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico similar in form to former enabling acts, with the exception that the constitutional convention of New Mexico is empowered to designate the name by which the new state shall enter the Union, and in the case of Oklahoma the convention, by irrevocable ordinance, shall express the consent of that state that congress at any future time may attach all or any part of Indian Territory to it. The enabling acts differ from each other chiefly in reference to the public lands appropriated for educational and public purposes.

The latter part of the session was devoted to private pension bills, 87 of which were passed, 28 original, others increased, and to correct military records.

An effort was made in the senate to fix a time for a vote on the pending Philippine bill, but it was unsuccessful. The minority said many senators still desired to speak on the measure, and it would not be proper to determine at this time upon a vote. Friday's debate on the Philippine bill was mild. Mr. Teller of Colorado occupied considerable time in opposition to the measure. He contended that the Filipinos were capable of self- [illegible] of establishing a gov- [illegible] l to some European gov-

A GOOD THING

Something You can readily believe as its Tecumseh evidence.

Mrs. B. E. Gray of Tecumseh, Mich., says: "Last summer I had an attack of fever which left me in a weak, dizzy, and nervous state. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and after using the pills I can say my nerves were strengthened and I felt better every way. I think the pills all right"

Curious Old Custom.

In one of the suburbs of Paris a wealthy merchant died the other day, and on the evening of the funeral his neighbors witnessed a curious ceremony.

An hour before the body was to be taken to the cemetery the relatives of the dead man, five or six in number, went out into the garden adjoining the house and walked solemnly and silently around it. Each carried a lantern and kept his eyes fixed on the ground, as though he were looking for something. Finally they all halted in front of a large pile of stones and, laying aside their lanterns, proceeded to throw down the pile. After every stone had been removed they examined minutely the spot on which the pile had rested and then slowly and with bowed heads returned to the house.

This is an old Norman custom, and it is observed in this instance because the dead man was a native of Gison. There is a tradition in Normandy that before burying a body all the ground around his dwelling should be searched in order to make sure that the soul has not hidden itself somewhere. At one time every family in Normandy faithfully observed this tradition, but now only a few pay heed to it.

The Year 1881.

The year 1881 was a chronological oddity of the oddest kind, besides being a mathematical curiosity seldom equaled. From right to left and left to right it reads the same. Eighteen divided by 2 gives 9 as a quotient; 81 divided by 9 gives 9; if divided by 9, the quotient contains a 9; if multiplied by 9, the product contains two 9s; 1 and 8 are 9; 8 and 1 are 9. If the 18 be placed under the 81 and added, the sum is 99. If the figures be added thus—1, 8, 8, 1—it will give 18 as the result. Reading to the middle from right to left or from left to right it is 18, and 18 is two-ninths of 81. By adding, dividing and multiplying ten 9s are produced, being one 9 for each year to the beginning of the last decade of the nineteenth century.

No wonder the fortune tellers, the astrologers and the mathematicians weave so many strange fancies around that curious combination of figures. It may have been what induced Mother Shipton to end her prophetic jingle with "And at last the world to an end shall come in eighteen hundred and eighty-one."

A Wonder In Penmanship.

Among the curiosities preserved by the Minnesota Historical society is a lithographed copy of an engrossment of the emancipation proclamation. The engrosser, one W. H. Pratt of Davenport, Ia., was so very skillful in his manipulations of the pen that he succeeded, by careful and exact shading of the letters, in producing a very excellent portrait of Abraham Lincoln, the author of the famous document, in the center of the copy. In other words, the lettering itself is made to form a portrait of Mr. Lincoln. There were probably a large number of them originally struck off, but copies of it are now very rare. As a specimen of penwork it is certainly very unique.

Wood In Egyptian Stonework.

Probably the oldest timber in the world which has been subjected to the use of man is that found in the ancient temples of Egypt in connection with the stonework, which is known to be at least 4,000 years old. This, the only wood used in the construction of the temples, is in the form of ties holding the end of one stone to another. When two blocks were laid in place, an excavation about an inch deep was made in each block, in which a tie shaped like an hourglass is driven. It is therefore very difficult to force any stone from its position.

A King and a Miller.

Every reigning member of the Hohenzollern dynasty has been noted for his sense of fair play in dealing with his subjects.

It is said that the Emperor Frederick the Great was greatly annoyed by the presence of a flour mill that stood close by one of his palaces in Berlin.

The miller refused to sell his mill and insisted that he should retain possession of it as long as he lived. The emperor stormed at him without avail and finally threatened to drive the miller out by force and confiscate his property.

The dauntless miller replied to his threat by saying, "There are still judges in Berlin, your majesty."

This reply, which has since become famous throughout Germany, impressed the emperor so favorably that he withdrew both his threat and his request, and the flour mill is standing to this day.

Expected a Fight.

A Fifeshire farmer gave his herd laddie, Jamie, a half wit, a ticket to admit him to a sacred recital in a neighboring town, to be given by local talent, and told the lad to be sure to enjoy himself.

The farmer was greatly surprised to find his servant in the kitchen long before the conclusion of the performance, and upon asking him why he had returned from the recital Jamie replied:

"Weel, maister, ae man yonder began to sing, 'I'm the King of Glory,' then anither said he 'was the King of Glory,' and when I saw three ithers standin' up an' sayin' they were 'the Kings of Glory' I kent there was to be a fecht, so I cam awa' an' left them to finish it amon' themsel's."—Dundee Advertiser.

What Was Scarce.

Once a distinguished Russian grand duke found himself charged 20 francs apiece for hothouse peaches at the old Cafe de Paris, in the French metropolis.

"Are hothouse peaches so scarce, then, even in midwinter?" he asked.

"No," replied the maitre d'hotel, "but grand dukes are."

Attorney eneral of Missouri Files Ouster Proceedings.

Jefferson City, Mo., May 10.—Atty. n. Crow last night filed in the supreme court ouster proceedings against the Armour Packing Co., the Hammond Packing Co., the Cudahy Packing Co., Armour & Co. and the Krug Packing Co. for alleged violating the state anti-trust laws, in combining to fix and maintain prices and to control the supply of dressed, cured and smoked meats and lard in Missouri.

The information alleges that Nelson, Morris & Co. of Kansas City and Schwartzchild and Sulzburger of Kansas City are in the combination, but as they are co-partnerships, it will require another kind of proceeding to reach them. The proceedings are the result of the inquiry this week before Judge Burgess, where evidence was secured from butchers and dealers.

A Memorial for Rathbone.

Washington, May 10.—Senator Hanna has presented to the president a memorial prepared in behalf of Estes G. Rathbone, urging the president to grant a new trial and to set aside the sentence imposed in Cuba on Rathbone for alleged maladministration of Cuban postal affairs. The memorial asserts that a trial, according to American methods and under our system of judicial procedure, would have resulted [illegible] acquittal of Rathbone instead of his conviction.

A Protest from Colored People.

Washington, May 10.—A protest against racial discrimination on "jim-crow" railway cars was made yesterday before the house committee on commerce by a delegation of prominent colored men, including ex-Congressman White of North Carolina, Assistant Register of Treasury Adams, and Rev. Walter H. Brooks. The delegation asked for an amendment to the interstate commerce law, prohibiting discrimination on passenger cars on account of race or color.

Keep the Balance up.

It has been truthfully said that any disturbance of the even balance of health causes serious trouble. Nobody can be too careful to keep this balance up. When people begin to lose appetite or to get tired easily, the least imprudence brings on sickness, weakness, or debility. The system needs a tonic, craves it, and should not be denied it; and the best tonic of which we have any knowledge is Hood's Sarsaparilla. What this medicine has done in keeping healthy people healthy, in keeping up the even balance of health, gives it the same distinction as a preventative that it enjoys as a cure. Its early use has illustrated the wisdom of the old saying that a stitch in time saves nine. Take Hood's for appetite, strength and endurance.

EXPANSION AND BOYNTON.

Ratio Among Lodges in the State is 3 to 1 in His Favor.

Port Huron, Mich., May 12.—Expansion and Boynton have practically won in the state, although all of the tents have not yet been heard from. The present ratio is 3 to 1, and probably higher than that. This means that the Maccabees of the state, with the exception of a few tents, have elected expansion delegations, and on the floor of the convention the fight will be fierce, but one-sided. In Port Huron city, Boynton has swept everything with the exception of one tent, which elects next Tuesday evening. A fight has been put up in every tent.

Thomas A. Watson, it is claimed, will be defeated for great record-keeper. He and the major have been at sword points. A. M. Slay is Watson's opponent, and it is contended that the Boynton slate will go through. The action of the supreme tent in mixing up in the matter by having several of its clerks as anti-expansion candidates, has been severely criticised.

Petoskey, Mich., May 12.—Boynton and expansion won out here in election of K. O. T. M. delegates.

Find Decree After 23 Years.

Niles, Mich., May 12.—F. Schneewind and B. Frankenburg of this place have secured a final decree in the circuit court of the United States in the now famous Niles water works case, which has been in court for 23 years, which decrees there is due Frankenburg and Schneewind the sum of $57,101 and costs, and that this mortgage, given by this first Niles Water Works Co. to the Central Trust Co. of New York, to secure 40 bonds of $1,000 each, was a valid mortgage and a lien on all the property of the present Niles water works system, the first company having no legal existence. The decree gives the company until June 1 next to pay to Frankenberg and Schneewind said sum due them, and on default that this property be sold by the master in chancery of that court.

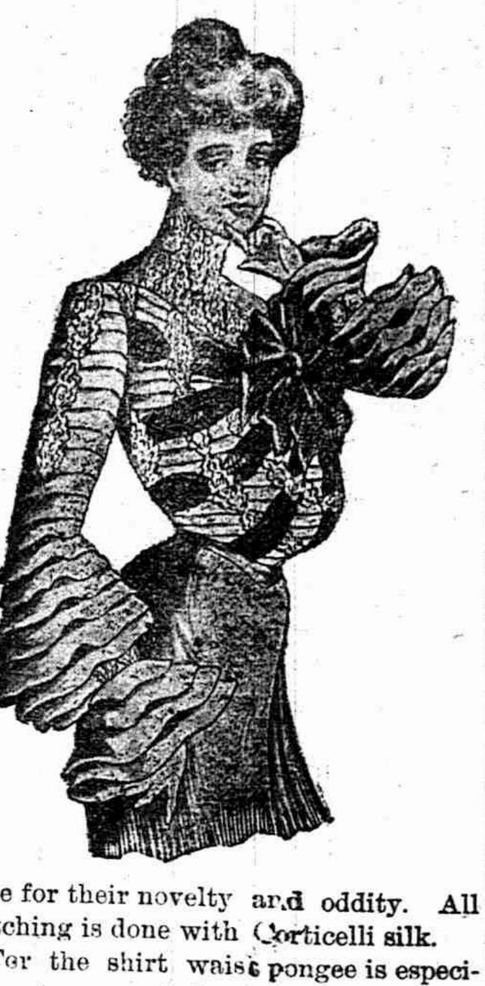
Stylish Spring Costumes

A WAIST OF CREPE DE CHINE.

Trimming of Lace Straps.

A very novel waist is here illustrated made of folds of crepe de chine in tuck effect and trimmed with lace straps and a deep lace yoke. Black chiffon bands are very artistically disposed and a large rosette of the same is placed at the left side. The sleeves are remarkable for their novelty and oddity. All stitching is done with Corticelli silk.



For the shirt waist pongee is especially recommended and it is very fetching made up with bands of ecru embroidery, or over a color with a heavy lace yoke. This material is particularly suitable for the Gibson and Duchess waists, the former giving the broad shouldered effect so much sought after just now, in the shape of folds or tucks extending over the shoulder, the latter fastening under a double fly and showing fronts richly embroirdered with Corticelli wash embroidery silk. The favored color in pongee is the natural ecru tint, although it can also be procured in different shades. Mercerized fabrics of all kinds will be extensively worn, the process having been vastly improved since it was first brought upon the market, and all sorts of silk and linen mixtures are greatly in vogue.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parent did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops. Jessie Pinkey Hall, Springville, Ala. This remedy is for sale by J. J. Orr.

The Value of Pain.

When ether was first discovered and used in surgery, it was said that to abolish pain would be to change the laws of nature herself; that pain is a safeguard; that it indicates in cases of injury the seat of injury and in some instances the cause of injury; that if men learned to minimize or prevent it at pleasure they might annul it altogether and invent a new constitution in which this sentinel of danger would be at all times off duty.

MRS. L. S. ADAMS, Of Galveston, Texas.

"Wine of Cardui is indeed a blessing to tired women. Having suffered for seven years with weakness and bearing-down pains, and having tried several doctors and different remedies with no success, your Wine of Cardui was the only thing which helped me, and eventually cured me. It seemed to build up the weak parts, strengthen the system and correct irregularities."

By "tired women" Mrs. Adams means nervous women who have disordered menses, falling of the womb, ovarian troubles or any of these ailments that women have. You can cure yourself at home with this great women's remedy, Wine of Cardui. Wine of Cardui has cured thousands of cases which doctors have failed to benefit. Why not begin to get well today? BAD EX-CONVICTS

Stir Up Trouble in Saginaw and Niles.

ONE MAN USED HIS PISTOL

Considerable Information Comes to Light Relative to a Robbery and Arson Affair in Macomb County—Sheriff Thinks He Has Right Man.

Saginaw, Mich., May 14.—Fred Caser of Flint, a paroled Ionia convict, who has been serving a four years' sentence for burglary committed at Kalamazoo, is again behind the bars. He gave a sensational performance at Bay City Monday night, entering a house at 900 Center avenue and holding up the inmates at the point of a revolver. He then came on to Saginaw and was arrested here yesterday afternoon by Officer Bishop.

On the way to the police station Caster broke away and opened fire on the officer, who promptly responded, a running fight taking place on the crowded street.

After emptying his gun Caster surrendered. He has been identified by Charles A. Bigelow, one of the Bay City people who was held up on Monday night. In his possession, besides his gun, were a set of dice, a little money and a black cloth mask.

When arrested he gave the name of Frank Considine.

Niles, Mich., May 14.—Harry Swartz, a burly thug and ex-convict, entered the home of Clinton Tromwell last night while drunk and attempted to assault Mrs. Tromwell. The woman picked up a revolver and fired twice at her assailant, but neither shot took effect. She ran from the house calling for help, and when the police arrived a terrific struggle ensued.

Swartz was finally overpowered and taken to jail. When the handcuffs were removed at the jail he struck Chief of Police Francis an awful blow in the face, and the officer, who is an athlete himself, threw aside his club and trounced his man in real championship style. A big crowd gathered about the jail during the fracas.

Pontiac, Mich., May 14.—Sheriff Cady of Macomb county was in the city yesterday and took home with him William Vick of this city, who will be charged with either arson or burglary.

Whitney Bros.' barn in Macomb county burned on the night of May 7. In the barn was a valuable team of horses, which were also supposed to have been burned. The fire was of incendiary origin, and the sheriff of Macomb county was put to work to find the guilty culprit.

Several weeks ago William Vick and Fred Russell were arrested here for larceny of hides from Kovinsky & Lebester of this city.

At that time Russell confessed Vick had proposed that they take a pair of old horses which he had, substitute them some night for the fine team in Whitney Bros.' barn, set fire to the building and then skip with the good horses, sell them and in that way make some money.

A careful examination of the remains of horses found after the barn had burned disclosed the fact that the animals were not the same as those owned by the brothres.

One of the missing horses has already been found, and the other is said to be located. John McDonald of this city, arrested on the same charge, was taken to Mt. Clemens yesterday.

McGarry Trial a Long One.

Allegan, Mich., May 14.—The testimony of Frederick Garman for the prosecution continued steadily during yesterday's session of the trial of T. F. McGarry. The testimony closely followed that of the Salsbury and Taylor trials and the day was a quiet one as far as the attorneys were concerned.. The trial now bids fair to prolong itself into five weeks more, as the prosecution has only begun its work and the defense had a great array of testimony to enter.

Will Sue for Those Tolls.

Washington, May 14.—The department of justice has sent notice to Attorney-General Oren at Lansing that the application for permission of the federal government to sue the state of Michigan for St. Mary's river canal tolls, claimed to have been withheld by the state when the canal was transferred to the government in 1881, will be made next Monday in the United States supreme court.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

The republicans of Berrien county have launched a boom for Hon. Orville W. Coolidge of Niles as a candidate for the supreme bench.

A nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kraphole of Detroit is dead of burns received by the exploding of kerosene used in starting a fire.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of local business men of Traverse City has decided to celebrate the Fourth of July in a manner befitting a banner city of northern Michigan.

In the circuit court at Marshall John Lynch, who was brought back from Kansas City to answer to the charges of larceny, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to three years at Jackson.

S. S. Olds of Lansing has received a telegram informing him of the recovery of the body of his brother-in-law, Fred C. Clemmer, formerly of that city, who was killed in the great snowslide at Telluride, Col., Feb. 28.

George Nixon of Flint, who was struck by the Grand Trunk yard engine Monday while driving over the railroad tracks at the Beach street crossing, died yesterday afternoon of his injuries.

Holds up a Congressman.

"At the end of the campaign," writes Champ Clark, Missouri's brilliant congressman, from overwork, nervous tension, loss of sleep and constant speaking I had about utterly collapsed. It seemed that all the organs in my body were out of order, but three bottles of Electric Bitters made me all right. It's the best all-round medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter." Over worked run down men and weak, sickly women gain splendid health and vitality from Electric Bitters. Try them. Only 50c Guaranteed by C. A. Wright

FOR RATHBONE

President Comes to the Rescue With Concessions.

CASE TO BE REVIEWED

Secretary Root Orders an Amendment to the Cuban Law Whereby the Review is Permitted—Neely and Rathbone's Friends Appeal to Palma.

Washington, May 14.—The president has directed Secretary Root to confer upon the Cuban court of appeals the right to review the testimony in the case of Estes G. Rathbone, convicted of complicity in the Cuban postal frauds, with authority to take additional evidence, if it so desires. This authority will be immediately conferred, and it is presumed the court will act at once.

The method by which the president proposes that Rathbone shall be given another chance to prove his innocence is fully developed in a message by Secretary Root to Gen. Wood. It should be explained that there is not now under Cuban law any means of taking an appeal to a supreme court in cases where there has been an error in proceedure in the lower court; appeals can be taken only where there have been errors of law.

"Washington, D. C., May 13, 1902.—Sir: Counsel for Defendant Rathbone in the postoffice cases has presented to the president an application for an order by the president, directing a new trial in his client's case upon a number of grounds, some relating to the proceedure followed and some relating to the merits of the case. As a reason for urging action by the president, he alleges, among other things, that the jurisdiction of the supreme court on appeal is so limited that they will be unable to afford relief upon the grounds on which he relies, and upon the 20th of May, when the military government terminates, his client will be left without any redress under the laws of Cuba. It has been found impossible as yet to give the full consideration required by the arguments presented, but in view of the fact that the constitution of Cuba, about to take effect, will exclude the president of Cuba from the power to pardon 'public officers who have been convicted of crimes committed in the performance of their duties,' the president deems it desirable that no doubt should be left on the power of the supreme court to review convictions in such cases upon all questions affecting the defendants' substantial rights. It is the general rule in this country that a defendant in a criminal case shall have at least one full review of all such questions by an impartial tribunal other than the trial court, and that practice should be embodied in the law of Cuba before we leave the island, particularly in view of the fact that citizens of the United States may be left there subject to convictions, as to which no such review has been had, and as to which there may exist no pardoning power. You will, accordingly, promulgate an amendment of the law of criminal proceedure substantially in accordance with the draft enclosed herewith, providing for a full review by the supreme court in such cases of all questions of law, fact and proceedure, and authorizing in broad terms such judgment by the supreme court as justice may require.

"Very respectfully,
"ELIHU ROOT,
"Secretary of War."

Havana, May 14.—Friends of Rathbone and Neely, convicted here of postoffice frauds, have appealed to President-elect Palma for his aid in the effort being made to secure their pardon. They ask Senor Palma to recommend their liberation to President Roosevelt.

Washington, May 14.—Senator Mark Hanna says that his old political helper and former director of Cuban postoffices, Rathbone, will not accept an individual pardon, nor would his friends be satisfied to have him released that way.

Eight Persons Injured.

Greenwood, Neb., May 14.—Passenger trains Nos. 1 and 6, west and eastbound on the Burlington road, collided head-on yesterday as the result of a switch failing to work properly. Eight persons were more or less injured, but none fatally. The injured are: A. Hazy, New York, traveling man, wrist hurt, not serious; Hubert Marshall, Cincinnati, shoulder sprained; T. M. Moore, cook dining car, Quincy, Ill., head and back hurt; —— McEdwards, Denver, head and spine injured; serious; W. C. Harrawalt, Berry Station, Pa., back and shoulders injured; Miss Julia Kuhn, Milwaukee, not serious; J. M. Rice, Peoria, Ill., head and neck hurt.

Don't Want Troops Removed.

Manila, May 14.—Within the last few days petitions against the removal of American troop have been received from 16 towns and villages. The reason for these petitions is said to be fear of bandits after the troops have left. It is believed in some quarters that the petitioners are more probably influenced by a desire to retain the trade of the American soldiers in the places in question than by fear of robber depredations.

Rebellion Leaders Captured.

Pekin, May 14.—The government announces that, after two days' fighting, the rebels in the southern part of the province of Chi Li have been completely defeated, and their leaders captured.

Manila Cholera Report.

Manila, May 14.—There have been 960 cases of cholera, with 769 deaths, in Manila. The provinces report 2,888 cases and 2,092 deaths from the disease.

Nourishment by Bathing.

"It is well known that the skin is a great absorbent, and nutrition even can be conveyed through its agency," said a trained nurse. "A physician once ordered a beef tea bath for a child that I was nursing who was apparently dying of some exhaustive bowel trouble and with admirable effect. And I myself have found that rubbing delicate persons with warm olive oil is an excellent tonic. If I had the charge of a puny, sickly baby, I should feel inclined to give it oil baths instead of water baths and try the effect. The oil is quite as cleansing, and it stands to reason that such tiny beings, particularly if they are badly nourished, should not have the natural oil of the body continually washed away."

PROVISIONS WANTED

For 100,000 Persons in Island of Martinique.

DEAD ARE BEING LOOTED

Mont Pelee Still in Action—Consul Ayme Wins Great Praise for His Work—Number of Victims at St. Vincent Now Estimated at 2,000.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, May 14.—The northern section of the island is depopulated.

Provisions are needed here immediately for 100,000 people. A shipload of lime is also needed at St. Pierre for sanitary purposes. The stench there from the dead bodies is overpowering.

Mont Pelee was still erupting smoke and fire at a late hour last night.

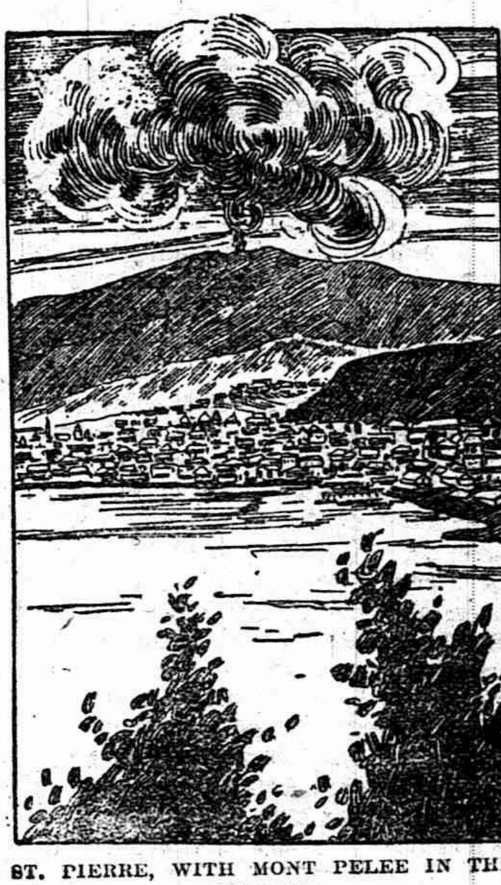
It was reported here yesterday from the British island of Dominica that 300 survivors of the St. Pierre disaster had reached there in canoes.

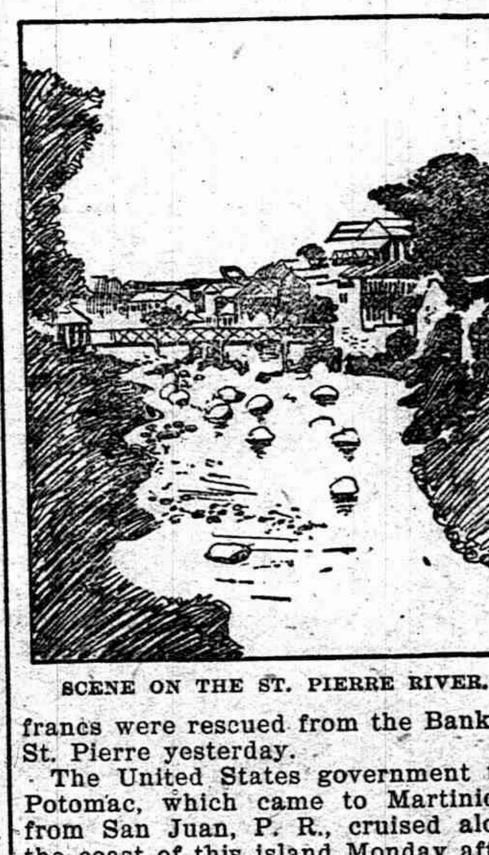
Many strange and incomprehensible incidents are recounted of St. Pierre.



ST. PIERRE, WITH MONT PELEE IN THE DISTANCE.

The charred demains of a woman with a silk handkerchief, unburned and in perfect condition, held to her lips have been found there. The crisped bodies of young girls have been found, but the shoes they wore were unhurt. Great praise is given United States Consul Ayme. He has worked indefatigably to succor the survivors. He has bandaged the limbs of the wounded and has worked without sleep and without food. He is now thoroughly exhausted. Forty persons rescued from the city are now in hospitals here.

In addition to the specie already secured, jewels to the value of 1,000,000 francs were rescued from the Bank of St. Pierre yesterday.



SCENE ON THE ST. PIERRE RIVER.

The United States government tug Potomac, which came to Martinique from San Juan, P. R., cruised along the coast of this island Monday afternoon. She encountered an inky black column of smoke, which made it necessary for her to go five miles out of her course.

Words fail to describe the present situation at St. Pierre. A small detachment of French troops is making efforts to inter the dead, although the government seems to be strikingly unconcerned as to what is done in this direction.

The looting of the dead has begun already. While coming to Fort de France the Potomac picked up a boat containing five colored and one white man, whose pockets were filled with coin and jewelry, the latter evidently stripped from the fingers of the dead. Lieut. B. B. McCormick, the commander of the Potomac, arrested these men and turned them over to the commander of the French cruiser Suchet for punishment. The Potomac also brought a ton of supplies to Martinique.

It is estimated that the total number of deaths on the island of St. Vincent from the volcanic eruption reached 2,000. Most of the victims are said to be Carib Indians.

Dickinson Will Receive Funds.

Washington, May 14.—The president has appointed a committee to receive funds for relief of the sufferers from the recent catastrophe in Martinique and St. Vincent. Don M. Dickinson has been appointed at Detroit to collect and receive the funds.

Revolution Threatened in Ecuador.

Panama, Colombia, May 14.—It is reported here that Gen. Alfaro, the former president of Ecuador, is preparing a revolutionary movement against President Plaza of that republic.

HONORS FOR CARO

OTHER OFFICERS ELECTED

Saginaw Chosen as the Place of Meeting Next Year—Pontiac Lodge of Rathbone Sisters Carries Off the Banner for Attendance.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., May 15.—Grand Chancellor Caro has certainly struck a business gait and has been working the representatives to the grand lodge of the Michigan Pythians full time. Every delegate is expected to be present at roll-call at each session, under penalty of forfeiting their per diem.

Yesterday afternoon was taken up in nominating and electing officers for the ensuing year. Leo Caro of Grand Rapids was re-elected grand chancellor; Robert G. Steel, St. Johns, G. V. C.; E. W. Hampton, Charlevoix, grand prelate; M. E. Greusell, Hastings, G. M. of E.; C. A. Palmer, Manistee, G. M. of A.; H. A. Curtis, Charlotte, G. I. G.; Perley Abbey, Kalamazoo, G. O. G.; Miles S. Curtis, Battle Creek, K. K. of R. and S.; W. D. Hayes, West Branch, grand trustee, and Charles H. Fisk, Detroit, supreme representative. I. L. Hubbell of Belding was appointed as member of the grand tribunal.

Mr. Caro is the first grand chancellor elected to that office two terms in succession within the past 20 years. Saginaw was chosen as the place of meeting for the grand lodge in May of next year. Charles S. S. Neal, president of the board of control of the endowment rank, is in attendance, representing that body.

A resolution will be offered at today's session, rescinding the action of the grand lodge last year, authorizing an assessment of $1 for each member in this domain for the benefit of a Pythian home at Hot Springs. From present indications, it will be about unanimously adopted.

The Rathbone Sisters, representing 75 lodges of the state, have put in a busy day at their temple. Wednesday afternoon the Fanny E. Tompkin lodge of Pontiac, which is the banner lodge of the state in point of numbers, exemplified their staff work.

Last night Detroit temple No. 9 exemplified the realistic work at the hall occupied by the Pythians' grand lodge. The temple will elect officers today.

The local lodge gave a reception to visiting Pythians and Rathbone Sisters at the Avery and Egnew hotels in the evening.

Squaw Burned to Death.

Assinnis, Mich., May 15.—Mrs. Mary Mangus, an old Indian woman, sat under a tree at this place last Tuesday to enjoy a smoke. She lighted her pipe and threw the blazing match into the grass. The grass caught fire, and as the old woman was nearly blind the flames crept up on her and ignited her dress without her noticing it. She was so badly burned that she died that night.

Rev. Andrews to an Asylum.

Lansing, Mich., May 15.—The probable disposition of the case of Rev. J. R. Andrews, against whom charges have been made, will be the minister's commitment to an asylum for the insane. This course has been decided upon by the unfortunate preacher's relatives, who believe that he can regain his normal condition by rest and careful treatment.

Elks Will Have Gala Time.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

RALPH CONNOR

There was a wild quarter of an hour. The shanty men had torn off their coats and were waving them wildly and tossing them high, while the ranchers added to the uproar by emptying their revolvers into the air in a way that made one nervous.

When the crowd was somewhat quieted, Sandy's stiff figure appeared, slowly making toward them. A dozen lumbermen ran to him, eagerly inquiring if he were hurt. But Sandy could only curse the little Frenchman for losing the race.

"Lost! Why, man, we've won it!" shouted a voice, at which Sandy's rage vanished, and he allowed himself to be carried in upon the shoulders of his admirers.

"Where's the lad?" was his first question.

"The bronchos are off with him. He's down at the rapids like enough."

"Let me go!" shouted Sandy, setting off at a run in the track of the sleigh. He had not gone far before he met Baptiste coming back with his team foaming, the roans going quietly, but the bronchos dancing and eager to be at it again.

"Voila! Bully boy! Tank the bon Dieu, Sandy. You not keel, eh? Ah you are one grand chevalier!" exclaimed Baptiste, hauling Sandy in and thrusting the lines into his hands. And so they came back, the sleighbox still dragging behind, the pintos executing fantastic figures on their hind legs and Sandy holding them down. The little Frenchman struck a dramatic attitude and called out:

"Voila! What's the matter wiz Sandy, heh?"

The roar that answered set the bronchos off again plunging and kicking and only when Baptiste got them by the heads could they be induced to stand long enough to allow Sandy to be proclaimed winner of the race. Several of the lumbermen sprang into the sleighbox with Sandy and Baptiste among them Keefe, followed by Nelson, and the first part of the great day was over. Slavin could not understand the new order of things. That a great event like the four horse race should not be followed by drinks all round was to him at once disgusting and incomprehensible, and, realizing his defeat for the moment, he fell into the crowd and disappeared. But he left behind him his runners. He had not yet thrown up the game.

Mr. Craig meantime came to me and looking after Sandy in his sleigh, with his frantic crowd of yelling admirers said in a gloomy voice:

"Poor Sandy! He is easily caught and Keefe has the devil's cunning."

"He won't touch Slavin's whisky today," I answered confidently.

"There'll be twenty bottles waiting him in the stable," he replied bitterly, "and I can't go following him up. He won't stand that. No man would. God help us all!"

I could hardly recognize myself, for I found in my heart an earnest echo to that prayer as I watched him go toward the crowd again, his face set in strong determination. He looked like the captain of a forlorn hope, and I was proud to be following him.

CHAPTER III.

WATERLOO—OUR FIGHT, HIS VICTORY.

THE sports were over, and there remained still an hour to be filled in before dinner. It was an hour full of danger to Craig's hopes of victory, for the men were wild with excitement and ready for the most reckless means of "slinging their dust." I could not but admire the skill with which Mr. Craig caught their attention.

"Gentlemen," he called out, "we've forgotten the judge of the great race Three cheers for Mr. Connor!"

Two of the shanty men picked me up and hoisted me on to their shoulders while the cheers were given.

"Announce the Punch and Judy," he entreated me in a low voice.

I did so in a little speech and was forthwith borne aloft through the street to the booth, followed by the whole crowd, cheering like mad.

The excitement of the crowd caught me, and for an hour I squeaked and worked the wires of the immortal and unhappy family in a manner hitherto unapproached, by me at least. I was glad enough when Graeme came to tell me to send the men in to dinner. This Mr. Punch did in the most gracious manner, and again with cheers for Mr. Punch's master they trooped tumultuously into the tent.

We had only begun when Baptiste came in quietly, but hurriedly, and whispered to me:

"M'sieu Craig, he's gone to Slavin's and would lak you and M'sieu Graeme would follow queek. Sandy, he's take one leel drink up at de stable, and he's go mad lak one diable."

I sent him for Graeme, who was presiding at dinner, and set off for Slavin's at a run. There I found Mr. Craig and Nelson holding Sandy, more than half drunk, back from Slavin, who, stripped to the shirt, was coolly waiting with a taunting smile.

"Let me go, Mr. Craig," Sandy was saying. "I am a good Presbyterian. He is a papist thief, and he has my money, and I will have it out of the soul of him."

"Let him go, preacher," sneered Slavin. "I'll cool him off for you. But you'd better hold him if you want his mug left on to him."

"Let him go!" Keefe was shouting.

"Hands off!" Blaney was echoing.

I pushed my way in. "What's up?" I cried.

"Mr. Connor," said Sandy solemnly, "it is a gentleman you are, though your name is against you, and I am a good Presbyterian, and I can give you the commandments and reasons annexed to them, but yon's a thief, a papist thief, and I am justified in getting my money out of his soul."

"But," I remonstrated, "you won't get it in this way."

"He has my money," reiterated Sandy.

"He is a blank liar, and he's afraid to take it up," said Slavin in a low, cool tone.

With a roar Sandy broke away and rushed at him, but without moving from his tracks Slavin met him with a straight left hander and laid him flat.

"Hooray!" yelled Blaney. "Ireland forever!" and, seizing the iron poker, swung it around his head, crying, "Back, or, by holy Moses, I'll kill the first man that interferes wid the game!"

"Give it to him!" Keefe said savagely.

Sandy rose slowly, gazing round stupidly.

"He don't know what hit him," laughed Keefe.

This roused the highlander, and, saying, "I'll settle you afterward, Mr. Keefe," he rushed in again at Slavin.

Again Slavin met him with his left, staggered him and before he fell took a step forward and delivered a terrific right hand blow on his jaw. Poor Sandy went down in a heap amid the yells of Blaney, Keefe and some others of the gang.

I was in despair when in came Baptiste and Graeme.

One look at Sandy, and Baptiste tore off his coat and cap, slammed them on the floor, danced on them and with a long drawn "Sap-r-r-r-rie!" rushed at Slavin.

But Graeme caught him by the back of the neck, saying, "Hold on, little man," and, turning to Slavin, pointed to Sandy, who was reviving under Nelson's care, and said, "What's this for?"

"Ask him," said Slavin insolently. "He knows."

"What is it, Nelson?"

Nelson explained that Sandy, after drinking some at the stable and a glass at the Black Rock hotel, had come down here with Keefe and the others, had lost his money and was accusing Slavin of robbing him.

"Did you furnish him with liquor?" said Graeme sternly.

"It is none of your business," replied Slavin, with an oath.

"I shall make it my business. It is not the first time my men have lost money in this saloon."

"You lie!" said Slavin, with deliberate emphasis.

"Slavin," said Graeme quietly, "it is a pity you said that, because, unless you apologize in one minute, I shall make you sorry."

"Apologize?" roared Slavin. "Apologize to you?" calling him a vile name.

Graeme grew white and said, even more slowly:

"Now you'll have to take it. No apology will do."

He slowly stripped off coat and vest. Mr. Craig interposed, begging Graeme to let the matter pass.

"Surely it is not worth it."

"Mr. Craig," said Graeme, with an easy smile, "you don't understand. No man can call me that name and walk around afterward feeling well."

Then, turning to Slavin, he said:

"Now, if you want a minute's rest I can wait."

Slavin, with a curse, bid him come.

"Blaney," said Graeme sharply, "you get back." Blaney promptly stepped back to Keefe's side. "Nelson, you and Baptiste can see that they stay there."

The old man nodded and looked at Craig, who simply said:

"Do the best you can."

It was a good fight. Slavin had plenty of pluck and for a time forced the fighting, Graeme guarding easily and tapping him aggravatingly about the nose and eyes, drawing blood, but not disabling him. Gradually there came a look of fear into Slavin's eyes, and the beads stood upon his face. He had met his master.

"Now, Slavin, you're beginning to be sorry, and I am going to show you what you are made of."

Graeme made one or two lightning passes, struck Slavin one, two, three terrific blows and laid him quite flat and senseless.

Keefe and Blaney both sprang forward, but there was a savage kind of growl.

"Hold, there!" It was old man Nelson, looking along a pistol barrel. "You know me, Keefe," he said. "You won't do any murder this time."

Keefe turned green and yellow and staggered back, while Slavin slowly rose to his feet.

"Will you take some more?" said Graeme. "You haven't got much; but, mind, I have stopped playing with you. Put up your gun, Nelson. No one will interfere now."

Slavin hesitated, then rushed, but Graeme stepped to meet him, and we saw Slavin's heels in the air as he fell back upon his neck and shoulders and lay still, with his toes quivering.

"Bon!" yelled Baptiste. "Bully boy! Dat's de bon stuff! Dat's larn him one good lesson!" But immediately he shrieked, "Gar-r-r-e a vous!"

He was too late, for there was a crash of breaking glass, and Graeme fell to the floor with a long, deep cut on the side of his head. Keefe had hurled a bottle with all too sure an aim and had fled. I thought he was dead, but we carried him out, and in a few minutes he groaned, opened his eyes and sank again into insensibility.

"Where can we take him?" I cried.

"To my shack," said Mr. Craig.

"Is there no place nearer?"

"Yes; Mrs. Mavor's. I shall run on to tell her."

She met us at the door. I had in mind to say some words of apology, but when I looked upon her face I forgot my words, forgot my business at her door, and stood simply looking.

"Come in. Bring him in. Please do not wait," she said, and her voice was sweet and soft and firm.

We laid him in a large room at the back of the shop over which Mrs. Mavor lived. Together we dressed the wound, her firm white fingers skillful as if with long training. Before the dressing was finished I sent Craig off, for the time had come for the magic lantern in the church, and I knew how critical the moment was in our fight.

"Go," I said. "He is coming to, and we do not need you."

In a few moments more Graeme revived and, gazing about, asked:

"What's all this about?" and then recollecting, "Ah, that brute Keefe!" Then, seeing my anxious face, he said carelessly: "Awful bore, isn't it? Sorry to trouble you, old fellow."

"You be hanged!" I said shortly, for his old sweet smile was playing about his lips and was almost too much for me. "Mrs. Mavor and I are in command, and you must keep perfectly still."

"Mrs. Mavor?" he said in surprise.

She came forward, with a slight flush on her face.

"I think you know me, Mr. Graeme."

"I have often seen you and wished to know you. I am sorry to bring you this trouble."

"You must not say so," she replied, "but let me do all for you that I can. And now the doctor says you are to lie still."

"The doctor? Oh, you mean Connor! He is hardly there yet. You don't know each other. Permit me to present Mr. Connor, Mrs. Mavor."

As she bowed slightly her eyes looked into mine with a serious gaze, not inquiring, yet searching my soul. As I looked into her eyes I forgot everything about me; and when I recalled myself it seemed as if I had been away in some far place. It was not their color or their brightness. I do not yet know their color, and I have often looked into them, and they were not bright, but they were clear, and one could look far down into them and in their depths see a glowing, steady light. As I went to get some drugs from the Black Rock doctor I found myself wondering about that far down light and about her voice—how it could get that sound from far away.

I found the doctor quite drunk, as indeed Mr. Craig had warned, but his drugs were good, and I got what I wanted and quickly returned.

While Graeme slept Mrs. Mavor made me tea. As the evening wore on I told her the events of the day, dwelling admiringly upon Craig's generalship.

She smiled at this.

"He got me, too," she said. "Nixon was sent to me just before the sports, and I don't think he will break down today, and I am so thankful." And her eyes glowed.

"I am quite sure he won't," I thought to myself, but I said no word.

After a long pause she went on, "I have promised Mr. Craig to sing tonight if I am needed," and then, after a moment's hesitation, "It is two years since I have been able to sing—two years," she repeated "since," and then her brave voice trembled, "my husband was killed."

"I quite understand," I said, having no other word on my tongue.

"And," she went on quietly, "I fear I have been selfish. It is hard to sing the same songs. We were very happy. But the miners like to hear me sing, and I think perhaps it helps them to feel less lonely and keeps them from evil. I shall try tonight if I am needed. Mr. Craig will not ask me unless he must."

I would have seen every miner and lumberman in the place hideously drunk before I would have asked her to sing one song while her heart ached. I wondered at Craig and said rather angrily:

"He thinks only of those wretched miners and shanty men of his."

She looked at me with wonder in her eyes and said gently:

"And are they not Christ's too?"

And I found no word to reply.

It was nearing 10 o'clock and I was wondering how the fight was going on and hoping that Mrs. Mavor would not be needed when the door opened and old man Nelson and Sandy, the latter much battered and ashamed, came in with the word for Mrs. Mavor.

"I will come," she said simply. She saw me preparing to accompany her and asked, "Do you think you can leave him?"

"He will do quite well in Nelson's care."

"Then I am glad, for I must take my little one with me. I did not put her to bed in case I should need to go, and I may not leave her."

We entered the church by the back door and saw at once that even yet the battle might easily be lost.

Some miners had just come from Slavin's, evidently bent on breaking up the meeting in revenge for the collapse of the dance, which Slavin was unable to enjoy, much less direct. Craig was gallantly holding his ground, finding it hard work to keep his men in good humor and so prevent a fight, for there were cries of "Put him out! Put the beast out!" at a miner half drunk and wholly outrageous.

The look of relief that came over his face when Craig caught sight of us told how anxious he had been and reconciled me to Mrs. Mavor's singing. "Thank the good God!" he said, with what came near being a sob. "I was about to despair."

He immediately walked to the front and called out:

"Gentlemen, if you wish it, Mrs. Mavor will sing."

There was a dead silence. Some one began to applaud, but a miner said savagely:

"Stop that, you fool!"

There was a delay of a few moments when from the crowd a voice called out:

"Does Mrs. Mavor wish to sing?" followed by cries of "Aye, that's it!"

Then Shaw, the foreman at the mines, stood up in the audience and said:

"Mr. Craig and gentlemen, you know that three years ago I was known as 'Old Ricketts' and that I owe all I am tonight, under God, to Mrs. Mavor, and," with a little quiver in his voice, "her baby. And we all know why. And what I say is that if she does not feel like singing tonight she is not going to sing to keep any drunken brute of Slavin's crowd quiet."

There were deep growls of approval all over the church. I could have hugged Shaw then and there. Mr. Craig went to Mrs. Mavor and after a word with her came back and said:

"Mrs. Mavor wishes me to thank her dear friend Mr. Shaw, but says she would like to sing."

The response was perfect stillness. Mr. Craig sat down at the organ and played the opening bars of the touching melody, "Oft In the Stilly Night." Mrs. Mavor came to the front and, with a smile of exquisite sweetness upon her sad face and looking straight at us with her glorious eyes, began to sing.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Insomnia and Nervousness.

There can be no doubt that many persons suffer from insomnia which had its origin, or at least its principal strength, in their own nervous apprehension that they are or are about to be afflicted with it. Any one of a dozen causes may induce wakefulness, and yet the person lying in bed with the faculties alert at the moment when they would naturally be expected to be wrapped in slumber has nine times out of ten or ninety-nine times in a hundred nothing serious to apprehend. The stomach may not be in quite its normal condition, and there is no more potent cause of wakefulness.

Now, an hour—ten minutes even—seems a long time in the middle of the night when a person wishes to be sleeping and cannot. If a sensation of dread, of apprehension, is allowed to enter the mind, such a period simply becomes interminable. The nervous apprehension increases the difficulty, and, feeding upon itself, the derangement may quite possibly increase till it becomes a dangerous malady.

Blood.

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high, we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain, in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

PARAGONS OF DUTY.

Droll Legends of Filial Piety as Practiced In Japan.

The Japanese make much of the duty of children to parents. In some of their popular stories they exaggerate the wholesome virtue until it becomes absurd. There is a group of such tales called "The Four and Twenty Paragons of Filial Piety," some of which Mr. Basil Hall Chamberlain collects in "Things Japanese."

One is the story of the paragon whose cruel stepmother was very fond of fish. In spite of her harsh treatment he lay naked on a frozen lake until his body melted a hole in the ice. He caught two fish that came up to breathe and set them before his stepmother. Another paragon lay uncovered at night in order that the mosquitoes should fasten on him alone and allow his parents to slumber undisturbed.

Still another, who was extremely poor, determined to sacrifice his own child in order to save food to support his aged mother. He was rewarded by heaven with the discovery of a vessel filled with gold, on which the whole family lived happily ever after. A fourth gave her father a chance to escape while she clung to the jaws of the tiger which was about to devour him.

The drollest story of all is of Rovaishi. This paragon, although seventy years old, used to dress in baby's clothes and sprawl about the floor. His object was piously to delude his parents, who were more than ninety years of age, into the idea that they could not be so very old after all, seeing that they had an infant son.

Answered.

"If a ship," began the comedian with the rose tinted beard, "is 100 feet long and 40 feet wide and its masts are 100 feet high and the bo'sun is bowlegged, what does the capstan weigh?"

"It weighs the anchor!" hoarsely shouted the audience as it grabbed the benches to prevent itself rising en masse and doing violence to the thespians.—Baltimore American.

Oriental Horseshoes.

The type of horseshoe common in the orient is a plate fitted so as to cover the entire bottom of the hoof, with a perforation in the center. The weight of the average horseshoe is three-fourths of a pound. The native smiths usually cut these plates from sheets of wrought iron and rudely shape them for the purpose in view.

His Debut as an Actor.

Frank J. McIntyre was a newspaper man in Ann Arbor, Mich., before he became an actor. He began as a "cub" reporter while still a student in Michigan university and finally advanced until the editor left him in charge of the paper on one occasion when he took a trip to Detroit.

Two important local items were to be printed, one relating the sad demise of a young man of prominent family, the other telling how a traveling salesman had jumped his board bill at a local hotel. "Mac" had to write the headlines for these stories, and, after scratching his head, he evolved "Passed Away Quietly" for the obituary story and "Jumped His Board Bill" for the hotel beat. "Mac" was proud of his achievement and, lighting a big cigar, leaned back in his chair and began to realize how it feels to be an editor.

The man who "made up" the paper scanned the headings, transposed them, and the friends and relatives of the deceased read that he had "Jumped His Board Bill," and the bereaved landlord learned that his late guest had "Passed Away Quietly."—New York World.

Poor Old Lady Beaconsfield.

There is nothing in his life, says Lord Ronald, that redounds more to Lord Beaconsfield's credit than the manner in which he treated his wife. She could never have been but a somewhat commonplace though good hearted woman. As she grew old she became a wreck of humanity, but the poor, faded, painted old lady was ever treated by her husband with a deference and regard truly touching. It was painful to see how, in what we are pleased to call the highest society, poor old Lady Beaconsfield was made a butt and a laughing stock. Knowing how sensitive Lord Beaconsfield was to anything approaching ridicule, I felt how bitterly he must have suffered when in a crowded hall or drawing room his hosts would what they called "draw out old Lady Beaconsfield" and laugh at her to her face, showing no reticence, regard or decent feeling for the poor husband, who, imperturbable as he ever appeared, was probably suffering acutely at the conduct of his ill bred hosts.

A Normandy Injunction.

A strange old world privilege, dating back to the time when the Norsemen came to Normandy, was exercised last year in the island of Guernsey. It is called the "Clameur de Haro." By the ancient law of the island a person who thinks his land rights are being infringed upon has only to draw up a statement of the case, which he swears to before two witnesses. This he then presents to the bailiff of the island and, dropping upon one knee, cries out in French: "Oh, Rollo, my prince, succor me! I am wronged!"

This proceeding acts as an injunction, and the person complained of as trespasser has to stay his trespass until the matter has been adjudicated upon by the courts. This right of issuing one's own injunction by calling unto Rollo was given to the people of Guernsey by Rollo or Hrolf, the Norwegian pirate who made himself the first Duke of Normandy in 911, and there is probably no example of a legal procedure of like antiquity which is today carried out in the same way as that in which it was first instituted.

James Henderson sold his house and lot on Shwnee street, this spring, and when he moved to the west part of the village it is reported carried away the door and window screens that had been made for and fitted to the house. The new owners objected and interviewed a lawyer on the question, and—well, last Friday afternoon, Henderson toted the screens back on a wheelbarrow. —Tecumseh News.

When Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Hoag bought my house I told them the screens belonging to the house were stored in the barn belonging to Chas. Eldridge and that I would deliver them whenever wanted. Mrs. Hoag asked for them when the time came and I simply fulfilled my part of the agreement. This is the true statement of the affair.

The following is taken from the Ottawa, Ill. Republican Times: As a man of physical strength Chas. L. Barney, of this city proved his superiority over Joseph Burns, of Council Bluffs, last evening without reaching the full limit of his powers by a considerable margin. Barney won each of the ten events in the contest, which was for the championship of the west and Pacific coast, retaining the title which he has held for over a year. He made Burns quit each time, before he was put to the limit of his powers and some of his work was wonderful. For instance Barney lifted with apparent ease in the open hand lift a weight of 1,301 pounds, which closely approaches the world's record. After the exhibition, Barney beat his previous record of 362 pounds, two hand lift from the chest above the head, putting up 366 pounds. He has conquered 11 of Americas best athelets.—It will be remembered that Barney gave an exhibition of strength at the opera house here several years ago, astonishing everybody by his great power of strength.

SOCIAL EVENT

Of the Season. Many present from out of town.

The May party given by the ladies' of Tecumseh, has been looked forward to with great pleasure by all interested and even the wildest dreams were realized. The opera house presented a charming scene, from the dome hung festoons of pink and green bunting, also drapes of the same colors being placed about the balcony.

The stage decorations were very tasteful, white and blue lilacs being banked up across the front, the colors blending nicely together, produced a charming contrast for the green branches of weeping willow, which were used as a back ground. From above hung large branch of dog-wood in blossom, this part of the stage being separated as it was from the rear by an appropriate wood scene, made the place where the tables were set seem more like a picnic ground than meerly a stage. Tastefully placed about the hall were divans, settees, chairs, screens etc.

The arrangements for the party were complete in every detail and every number of every committee seemed to be an expert at her duty. Over 100 couples were present. FORTY-YEARS

HIBBARD HOUSE

By Foreman North of Contractor Pickles' Force.

A bottle, adorned with a gray-headed growth of cobwebs that had been forming for 40 years, was the treasure that was dug out of the walls of the old Hibbard house yesterday afternoon by Foreman North, of Contractor Pickles' force. The foreman lifted it reverently in his hands, shook it and then gazed fondly at its yellow content. It was whiskey of 40 years' seasoning.

He hurried with the long bottle to Mr. Pickles. "That's the bottle that Barney Smith planted here in the walls 40 years ago," was the comment.

It was nearly a half century ago that Smith and a party of congenial spirits placed the bottle in the walls of the then new structure. Appropriate manuscripts were laid side by side with the bottle, but these had disappeared. It stood all by itself, this faithful old bottle, and its contents were left intact after time had decayed all its companions within the dark wall. Thus the bottle sacredly guarded its contents all the years. It was proud of its position. It knew it held a sacred trust in store for a coming generation.

Each year added to the mellowness of its contents and the fruit in store for those who came after all its weary years of waiting would be fine indeed. It was the supremely ancient and honorable bottle among the countless hordes of ordinary bottles that allowed their contents to flicker down the throat from day to day. When this bottle was opened it would be an event. So after all these cold, clammy years of preparation the bottle was brought forth yesterday. Its welcome was warm indeed. It more than atoned for all the years of cold storage.

No time was lost by Mr. Pickles in seeing that the bottle was taken to Dalton's restaurant on Main street. Every one took off his hat while genial "Tom" Dalton plucked the cork. The snap of it was accompanied by a uniform smack of lips on the part of those present. It sounded something like the crack of musketry.

Mr. Dalton tested it first. Then North took a drink. Then everybody had a drink. Then everybody smacked their lips again, and this time the smack startled the little dog in front of the place so that he ran for an alley. Everybody demanded a little more. The "everybody" became effervescent The prime old article of whiskey was toasted and boasted It was the event that the ancient bottle had been longing for all these years in a secret proud way. The gentleman present, if allowed to follow their inclination, would not have said "pause" until the bottle was left barren of its contents. But wiser heads prevailed and the bottle was only partially emptied.

Then the whiskers, which had not been brushed off in the hurry, were removed, and Mr. Dalton placed the bottle in the most conspicuous place on the bar. A number heard of the discovery of the bottle and hovered longingly about last night, but Mr. Dalton has determined that no further depletion of it shall take place until an appointed time.—Jackson Citizen.

Are impure matters which the skin, liver, kidneys and other organs can not take care of without help, there is such an accumulation of them.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Remove all humors, overcome all their effects, strengthen, tone and invigorate the whole system.

Beautifying the Farm Lawn.

The following was clipped from the Detroit Tribune and was written by Mrs. F. N. Miller of this place.

At this season of the year an attempt should be made to improve the lawn, not the front alone, but the entire lawn surrounding a farm house and barn. It seems unnecessary to add, it should be well cleaned, yet many people seem to think if the front yard is passably clean that is sufficient, while those at the side and rear are often a disgrace of the inhabitants of the place.

So many farmers claim they have no time for such work, and in many places the work of cleaning up is left to women of the household, who haven't sufficient strength to do the work inside.

Perennial shrubs and vines, such as roses of many varieties, the old-times flowering currant with its delightful fragrance, a few low, well-kept evergreens and at least one clematis vine trained by the porch to an invisible wire chicken screen. A little rustic summer house adds greatly to the beauty of a large lawn, is easily constructed with no expense whatever, save a little taste and ingenuity and the time spent.

First, set five poles, with the bark on in circular form, tacking from one to the other large branches of the wild grape vine at the top, bottom and half way between. Now tack smaller branches on in true rustic style. A rude seat may be constructed inside or camp stools may be used. Transplant wild grape or any preferred vine around the outside, to be trained over it, and in two seasons a very pretty little summer house is the result.

If there are no shade trees, make haste to plant some, as no farm home is complete without shade trees. Remember, that passers-by often judge the occupants of a place by the general appearance of the surroundings. With a well kept lawn, a hammock and a standard chair swing, a farm home may be very attractive.

Engineer Braddock, with No. 607, a new high speed engine, made the 105 miles from Decatur to Granite City in 101 minutes. A five-minute stop was made at Litchfield, making the actual running time ninety-six minutes, an average of 65.4 miles for the whole distance. Best previous time was ninety-eight minutes.

A SIMPLE QUESTION.

Tecumseh People are Requested to Honestly Answer this.

Is not the word of a representive citizen of Tecumseh more convincing than the doubtful utterances of people living everywhere else in the union. Read this:

Mr. Charles Bartholomew, who runs the bicycle repair shop in the south-eastern section of Tecumseh, says: "Some eighteen years ago the doctors said I had diabetes and that I could not live. I got better but I have been troubled ever since with the kidney secretions, particularly retention of the kidney secretions, which caused me considerable anxiety. I tried all kinds of medicines said to be good for kidney trouble but the annoyance still remained. Finally my attention was called to Doan's Kidney Pills and I got them at C. A. Wright's drug store. They are splendid. They gave me more relief and acted quicker than any remedy I ever used. From my experience I can say they are a reliable remedy and I consistently recommend them."

Lord Told Him to Shoot.

Hart, Mich., May 15.—Rev. Thomas Ridge says he received an order from the Lord to collect a debt from W. L. Shafer, an Elbridge township farmer, or else shoot him. Shafer refused to settle and the minister carried out the alleged orders, the bullet from his revolver striking the debtor and inflicting a dangerous wound. Ridge is in jail and Shafer is under the care of the surgeons, with a chance for recovery.

He helped to carry Mr. Granger into the house, but before they found a doctor the unfortunate man had expired.

A GOOD THING

Something You can readily believe as its Tecumseh evidence.

Mrs. B. E. Gray of Tecumseh, Mich., says: "Last summer I had an attack of fever which left me in a weak, dizzy, and nervous state. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. MATANZAS IS GRATEFUL.

Departure of U. S. Troops Brings Forth Words of Praise.

Washington, May 15.—Gen. Wood has submitted to the war department the following letter, addressed to him from D. Lecuona, mayor of Matanzas, dated April 23:

"Sir: The American troops that were stationed at this city sailed yesterday; therefore bringing to an end in this province the glorious intervention undertaken by your government.

"The demonstration of sympathy and gratefulness made by people of Matanzas in their farewell to them shows the gratitude of the Cubans for the benefits which, so open-hearted, have been bestowed upon by your nation.

"At a public meeting, held by the city council in the evening of the same day, it was resolved: To state in the minutes the satisfaction felt by the council seeing that the people of Matanzas, in looking back into the period of this intervention, have understood the highness of that intervention and knows how to feel grateful for the action of the United States. It was resolved: To state how highly it did please, the correctness observed by the American army in the fulfillment of their delicate and humane commission.

"It pleases me to make you acquainted with the fact."

DIDN'T TAKE ACTION.

Strikers' Convention Worked Silently Behind Closed Doors.

Hazelton, Pa., May 15.—The convention of the anthracite mine workers, called at the instance of the executive boards of the three districts comprising the Pennsylvania hard coal fields, held two sessions yesterday, and without taking any action on the question of inaugurating a permanent strike, adjourned until this morning. The convention is meeting behind closed doors, and although nothing was given out, it is known that the all-important question was not reached, the two sessions being devoted entirely to the organization of the meeting and report of committee on credentials. The day brought forth no definite information bearing on the probable action of the convention, and the discussion was about the same as during the past 48 hours President Mitchell said that all hope of any concessions from the operators was gone.

Quiet reigned everywhere in the region yesterday, and not a pound of coal was mined anywhere. A great crowd of mine workers came into town from the surrounding villages and coal patches. They crowded around the convention hall, waiting for information from the inside. They were greatly disappointed when the convention adjourned without taking definite action.

These Orders Will Become Laws.

Washington, May 15.—In the closing days of his administration, Gen. Leonard Wood has made two orders of importance to Cuba, which orders, under the terms of the Platt amendment, will become a part of the organic law of the new republic. One relates to the Cuban railroads, and through a commission, prescribes, in the minutest detail, the tariff to be charged on all kinds of commodities, passenger rates, baggage allowances and other matters of vital importance to the railroads and to the Cuban republic. Another order prohibits fishing in certain specified zones under penalty of fine. Still another order from Gen. Wood grants a pardon to Elmer C. Westall, of the penalties imposed on him by sentence of the audenzia of Havana last February.

To Attend the Inauguration.

Washington, May 15.—Senator Money and his secretary; Senator Mason, Senator Jones of Arkansas, former Senator Thurston and Rep. DeArmond left here yesterday afternoon over the Atlantic Coast line for Havana, to attend the inauguration of President-elect Estrada Palma.

Three Blown to Pieces.

Pottsville, Pa., May 15.—Patrick Kelly and John Barlich, of Colorado, this county, and John McMichael of Girardville were blown to pieces yesterday by an explosion of a boiler at the Lehigh Valley Co.'s No. 5 colliery, near Girardville.

Krupp and Essen.

"The old lady," Herr Krupp's mother, managed the small business affairs while Alfred stepped into the shop, rolled up his sleeves, worked all day with his arms and then until midnight with his brain. They lived in a small cottage which is still standing in the factory and which he did not exchange for a better home until long after his marriage. I now quote Mr. Krupp's own words uttered on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the factory:

"From my fourteenth year I had the care of a family father during the day, added to hard work at the factory, and at night had to study how to overcome the difficulties in the way. During this period I lived on potatoes, bread and coffee and scant portions of meat and toiled until late in the night. For twenty-five years I struggled thus until conditions grew a little easier. My last remembrance of that period is the growing danger of total ruin and my endurance, suffering and hard labor to avert the calamity, and I say all this for the encouragement of young men who have nothing, are nothing and want to get something and be somebody."

In 1832 the factory gave employment to only ten men. At the time of Mr. Krupp's death over 40,000 men were employed in and about Essen, in the factory and the adjoining mines.—Outlook.

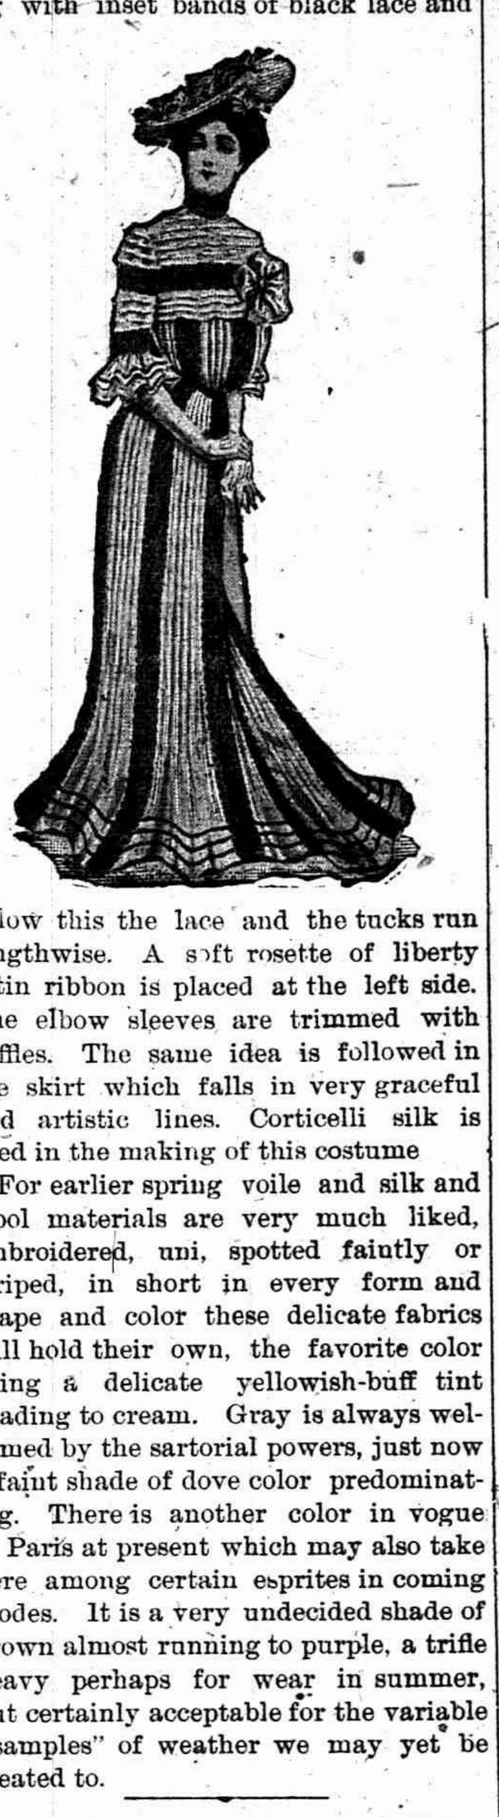
Stylish Spring Costumes

A CHARMING AFTERNOON TOILETTE.

The Popularity of Tucks.

A charming afternoon toilette is fashioned of cream voile of the softest quality and the preference for tucks is clearly evidenced. The waist has a deep yoke effect of horizontal tucks alternating with inset bands of black lace and below this the lace and the tucks run lengthwise. A soft rosette of liberty satin ribbon is placed at the left side. The elbow sleeves are trimmed with ruffles. The same idea is followed in the skirt which falls in very graceful and artistic lines. Corticelli silk is used in the making of this costume



For earlier spring voile and silk and wool materials are very much liked, embroidered, uni, spotted faintly or striped, in short in every form and shape and color these delicate fabrics still hold their own, the favorite color being a delicate yellowish-buff tint shading to cream. Gray is always welcomed by the sartorial powers, just now a faint shade of dove color predominating. There is another color in vogue in Paris at present which may also take here among certain esprites in coming modes. It is a very undecided shade of brown almost running to purple, a trifle heavy perhaps for wear in summer, but certainly acceptable for the variable "samples" of weather we may yet be treated to.

You Taste With Your Throat.

The idea that the sense of taste has any connection with the throat appears peculiar at first thought. We have been possessed with the notion that the sense of taste lies in the tongue and the palate. We all speak of a fine palate, and many persons express astonishment that they can enjoy a delicacy as well after having had a plate fitted to their mouths by a dentist as they could before they paid a visit to that clever gentleman.

The sense of taste is not confined to the tongue and the palate, but is more widely distributed. You taste also with the epiglottis, that little valve at the base of the tongue, and the larynx, to which the epiglottis acts as an assistant, also takes part in the process. Concerning the palate, it is noteworthy that we taste with the soft part, which is at the back of the mouth, but not with the hard or front palate. That explains the mystery of the dental plate. The tonsils do nothing for the sense of taste, nor does the uvula.

What the Indian Eats.

The typical Indian home of today consists of a mud chinked log shack, a tepee or two, usually a hay barn and sometimes a corral. As a general rule, they live in squalor, yet many Indians possess nice homes and enjoy well cooked meals from neatly set tables. But the ordinary Indian eats meats largely of questionable character. He delights in dog stew and other savory dishes. He has excellent teeth and an envied digestion.

Indian children are shy and close mouthed to strangers, but the squaws are often loquacious. Their doors are always open to visitors. The red man has an aversion for soldiers and frankly tells them that he does not fear them. Although he possesses an excellent constitution, disease finds in the Indian an easy victim.—Detroit Free Press.

The lazy man consoles himself with the shop worn adage about the race not always being to the swift.—Chicago News.

He Was Rather "Close."

An English clergyman of the eighteenth century, the Rev. Mr. Jones of Blewbury, with a nest egg of £200 and a stipend amounting to £50 per annum, left at death the sum of £10,000. He had been rector of his parish for forty years, and during all that time only one person had been known to sit at his festal table. No fire was ever lighted in his house; nor was a servant kept. In winter he would visit his parishioners to keep himself from perishing of cold rather than light a fire at the rectory.—Cassell's Journal.

THE TOWN IN RUINS

Goliad, Texas, Swept by Fearful Cyclone.

150 KILLED AND INJURED

Storm Followed a Path 250 Yards Wide Through the Historic Town, Destroying Over 100 Houses—Neighboring Towns Sent Aid.

Dallas, Tex., May 19.—A special from Houston says that a telephone message received from Goliad late last night reports that 150 or more persons were killed and injured by the tornado which swept over that village Sunday. No verification is obtainable.

Houston, Tex., May 19.—A special from Goliad, Tex., says: At 3:45 o'clock Sunday afternoon a tornado struck the historical town of Goliad and left death and desolation in its pathway, beyond the power of pen to portray.

A correspondent reached the scene at 7 o'clock on a special train from Victoria, Tex., which brought doctors, nurses and medicines, friends and relatives of Goliad people and the O'Connor Guards. The scene which met the eye on reaching the scene of destruction, which was in the western part of the city, was appalling. Between Church and Patrice streets, which run north and south for a distance of a mile, only one house was left standing.

Very little damage was done except within these boundaries over a width of 250 yards. The tornado was proceeded by a heavy hailstorm and a deep rumbling sound, but no one had any premonition of disaster, and there was no opportunity for escape, and the cyclone had passed in a few moments. The section which has most suffered was the residence portion.

The Methodist and Baptist churches and the Baptist parsonage, both new, and the negro Methodist church were destroyed. The Episcopal church was badly damaged and fully 100 houses were totally destroyed.

The people of Goliad, realizing at once the great calamity and the terrible loss of life and many injured, telephoned to their sisters of Cuero and Victoria for assistance, which was responded to immediately. General Superintendent Forbes sent a train to Victoria, bringing in on the return trip six doctors and an abundance of medicines and surgical appliances. Another train came later from Cuero with a number of physicians and dozens of nurses and many citizens.

Austin, Tex., May 19.—While all Texas seemed to be storm-swept Sunday, the territory immediately to the west of this city was especially badly damaged by the high winds. Walters Park, a small hamlet 14 miles northwest of this city, was badly damaged, three score or more houses being blown down and many trees uprooted. In this city a number of houses were unroofed and the state institution for the blind was considerably damaged, though none of the inmates was injured.

St. Joseph, Mo., May 19.—The Chicago & Great Western railway was a severe sufferer from a cloudburst Saturday night on both the Des Moines and the Chicago divisions. The storm did immense damage to crops, a strip a mile wide and 25 miles long being denuded of vegetation.

Duburque, Ia., May 19.—A cloudburst occurred here Saturday night. Two inches of rain fell in one hour, causing washouts on the Illinois Central between here and Waterloo.

Sparta, Wis., May 19.—A cloudburst occurred in the eastern part of this county Saturday night, doing much damage to farmers and railroad companies. Three long bridges on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad near Oakdale, were carried away. Many hogs and sheep were drowned and much damage done to crops, highways and bridges. Numerous small outbuildings were also carried away. Lightning caused considerable damage in Monroe, Juneau and Vernon counties.

Spring Valley, Minn., May 19.—An electric storm, accompanied by a cloudburst, passed over Etna and Forestville, two small villages nine miles southeast of this city, last night. Several large barns and other buildings were completely demolished. Herman Walbright, his wife and three children, driving in a buggy, were thrown into the torrent and the three children were drowned.

German Officers Coming.

Berlin, May 19.—Emperor William has authorized Col. von Wilseben and Major Wallan of the Grosslichterfelde Cadet institute, to accept the invitation to visit the military academy at West Point, which was extended some time ago. These officers will, therefore, leave Bremen for the United States May 24 on the North German Lloyd steamer Barbarossa.

ENORMOUS STRIKE

Anthracite Mine Workers Trying to Swing It.

TO INCLUDE ALL MINERS

Want a National Convention—Result Would Be a General Tieup of Business in the United States—449,000 Men Would Be Affected.

Hazelton, Pa., May 17.—The anthracite mine workers, in convention Friday, in order to win their strike, unanimously decided upon a plan that, if carried into successful operation, would practically tie up the industries of the country, paralyze business and inconvenience the people throughout the United States. It is their desire that a special national convention of the United Mine Workers' of America be called as soon as practicable for the purpose of endeavoring to have all the bituminous mine workers, both organized and unorganized, involved in the anthracite miners' struggle. This announcement was officially made at noon yesterday by President John Mitchell, in a statement giving the result of the deliberations of the delegates in convention.

If a special national convention is called and the miners succeed in their object, it would directly affect 449,000 men, who are employed in and about the coal mines of the country. Coal would soon become scarce and this would result in tying up of railroads and all sorts of industries that use large quantities of the fuel.

The striking miners are enthusiastic over the convention's action, and most of them can see only success in the proposition.

An absolutely trustworthy source is authority for the statement that the special convention will be called probably at Indianapolis in the course of several weeks. According to the rules of the United Mine Workers a petition signed by five mine workers' districts is necessary to call a special convention. The three anthracite districts are unanimous for such a meeting, and it is likely that the West Virginia district and the Michigan district will consent to the issuance of the call.

National Secretary-Treasurer W. B. Wilson of Indianapolis said today that within the next two or three weeks, regardless of the special convention, 30,000 men in Virginia and West Virginia, and from 15,000 to 20,000 men in the soft coal region of central Pennsylvania will be on strike. They will be called out, he said, for the purpose of forcing the mine owners to give them higher wages, and incidentally to help the anthracite workers.

Notwithstanding that 145,000 men have been idle for the last five days, no disturbances of any kind have been reported here. The region is extremely quiet. All the delegates left for their homes yesterday and Hazelton last night presented a deserted appearance. All of the local unions throughout the coal field held meetings in the afternoon and received reports from their convention delegates. Steps were taken by most of the "locals" to give relief to the members if needed. They expect a long strike.

Washington, May 17.—The National Civic Federation has under serious consideration the means whereby it may be helpful in bringing about a termination of the anthracite coal strike. A tender of the good offices of the federation, with a suggestion of arbitration of differences, among other things, has been reached and several days will be permitted to elapse before a detemination will be reached as to what course the federation should pursue.

The Antiquity of the Organ.

The organ is the most magnificent and comprehensive of all musical instruments. While the pipes of Pan, aside from that mythical personage, indicate a very ancient use of pipes as a means of producing musical sounds, the "water organ of the ancients" furnishes to the student of organ history the first tangible clew regarding the remote evolution of the instrument. In the second century the magripha, an organ of ten pipes with a crude keyboard, is said to have existed, but accounts of this instrument are involved in much obscurity. It is averred that an organ, the gift of Constantine, was in the possession of King Pepin of France in 757, but Aldhelm, a monk, makes mention of an organ with "gilt pipes" as far back as the year 700.

Greek Husband Housekeepers.

In Greece it is the custom for the man of the house to go out early in the morning and not only to order the day's food, but to send along with the boy who delivers it explicit orders how he wishes to have it cooked. In this connection it should be remarked that any man of Greece can cook any Greek dish. Grecian women seldom go to market and often do not know how to cook as well as their husbands.

These people eat very lightly in the morning, the meal consisting of fruit. At noon comes the first real meal, the breakfast. From noon until 4 o'clock they sleep. This is the midday siesta. To call upon a Greek at this time were quite as rude as to call upon an American at a corresponding hour in the morning. At 4 o'clock another light luncheon is eaten. The dinner, or hearty meal, is not eaten until late in the evening, sometimes as late as 9 or 10 o'clock.—Good Housekeeping.

The Gummed Flower.

You may buy upon the street flowers which to the eye are of a bloom as fine and a growth as fresh as any which could be procured at the most costly establishment. You buy them for a song and bring them home, when, lo! to your astonishment and dismay they fall to pieces at a breath like a cardboard house. They have been subjected to one of the "tricks of the trade." It is known as the "gumming process." A single drop of gum is inserted with a sharp pointed instrument into the center of each calyx, and by this means the conformity of the bloom is preserved until the flowers are sold. The composition of the gum is such as to dry up and set immediately, becoming invisible even to the closest scrutiny.—Everybody's Magazine.

BOAT WAS SWAMPED

A Man and Girl Drowned at Menominee

IN SIGHT OF MANY PEOPLE

Boat Was Drawn Into the Rapids—Girl Immediately Sank, but Man Fought for His Life for Half an Hour and Then Disappeared.

Menominee, Mich., May 19.—Edward Boatman, aged 28, of Marinette, and Caroline Garnier, aged 16, of Menominee, were drowned at about 11 o'clock Sunday morning in sight of a large number of people.

The couple were riding in a rowboat just below the third dam near the Park paper mills. They went too close to the falls and the boat swamped. The girl sank immediately and never came up. Boatman clung to his craft for half an hour, being whirled around in the current and taken under several times. At last his strength failed, he released his hold and sank. A hand was seen to come above the surface once, but after that no trace of the man was seen.

Boatman had tried vainly to get away from the falls with his craft before the catastrophe, but as soon as he had gained a short distance the current would pull him back again under the dam.

The incident occurred near the Riverside golf links, where many people were playing, all of whom saw the drowning. One man tried to heave a rope to the drowning man, but could not reach him.

Boatman was shipping clerk in the paper mill and leaves a widow and four children, the youngest but a month old. His wife is now sick in bed. Men have been dragging the river, but no traces of the bodies were found.

Crusade on Detroit Gamblers.

Detroit, Mich., May 19.—The police department has at last been set in motion against the policy gamblers in Detroit, and the word has been sent out to close up every shop that is known to exist. Capt. Spillane, at headquarters, has detailed a special force to close the policy shops, and these are not the only gambling institutions which have fallen under the ban since the crusade. The order issued from headquarters includes all handbooks and the officers in charge of the matter have been instructed to notify the backers of the books to close, and if the order is not obeyed to arrest them.

Detroit Man Paroled.

Lansing, Mich., May 19.—Gov. Bliss has paroled Ernest L. Chase, who was sent from Detroit to Jackson Jan. 12, 1897, for life. His sentence was commuted by Gov. Pingree to 10 years. The action of both governors was recommended by ex-Recorder Chapin and ex-Prosecutor Frazer. Dec. 14, 1896, after his two sons had left his flat at 72 Grand River avenue, Chase attacked his wife with a razor. Then, standing in front of a dresser, he severed his windpipe, but his wife, as well as that of Mrs. Chase, was saved at Harper hospital.

STEAMER SUNK

Fifty Passengers Just Escaped Being Drowned.

THE COMPASS WENT WRONG

And Boat Struck Bottom, Putting a Hole in Her—With All Speed She Immediately Made for the Nearest Landing Place.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., May 17.—The steamer Chippewa arrived here last night with 58 passengers from the Canadian steamer Athabasca, which is lying on the bottom near old Dawson dock, at Detour, north of Frying Pan island.

The accident occurred about seven miles from Detour, at Gravel Island Shoals, which are a considerable distance from the shore.

The steamer had a large cargo of steel rails aboard, and iths caused the compass to go wrong. The captain thought the boat was three miles from the shoal when it struck. Three buckets were knocked off her wheel and a hole punched in her bow.

All speed was made for Detour, and the steamer sunk about half an hour after reaching there. It was a mighty close call for the passengers and the steamer. The full extent of the damage is not ascertained. A wrecking outfit is now on the ground.

Fell 200 Feet to His Death.

Crystal Falls, Mich., May 17.—A drop of 200 feet to death was the fate of Wanta Hill, a miner employed at the Hope property. With several other men, Hill was engaged in repairing the skip road, the party working on a staging about 75 feet from the mouth of the shaft. Another man was on the surface sending down timber to those below, and while so employed a heavy piece slipped from his grasp and fell. It struck Hill and sent his body to the bottom.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

BLACK ROCK

By
RALPH CONNOR

Her voice, a rich soprano, even and true, rose and fell, now soft, now strong, but always filling the building, pouring around us floods of music. I had heard Patti's "Home, Sweet Home," and of all singing that alone affected me as did this.

At the end of the first verse the few women in the church and some of the men were weeping quietly, but when she began the words,

"When I remember all
The friends once linked together," sobs came on every side from these tender hearted fellows, and Shaw quite lost his grip. But she sang steadily on, the tone clearer and sweeter and fuller at every note, and when the sound of her voice died away she stood looking at the men as if in wonder that they should weep. No one moved. Mr. Craig played softly on and, wandering through many variations, arrived at last at—

"Jesus, lover of my soul."

As she sang the appealing words her face was lifted up, and she saw none of us, but she must have seen some one, for the cry in her voice could only come from one who could see and feel help close at hand. On and on went the glorious voice, searching my soul's depths, but when she came to the words,

"Thou, O Christ, art all I want,"

she stretched up her arms—she had quite forgotten us; her voice had borne her to other worlds—and sang with such a passion of abandon that my soul was ready to surrender anything, everything.

Again Mr. Craig wandered on through his changing chords till again he came to familiar ground, and the voice began in low, thrilling tones Bernard's great song of home, "Jerusalem, the Golden."

Every word, with all its weight of meaning, came winging to our souls till we found ourselves gazing afar into those stately halls of Zion, with their daylight serene and their jubilant throngs. When the singer came to the last verse, there was a pause. Again Mr. Craig softly played the interlude, but still there was no voice. I looked up. She was very white, and her eyes were glowing with their deep light. Mr. Craig looked quickly about, saw her, stopped and half rose, as if to go to her, when, in a voice that seemed to come from a faroff land, she went on:

"Oh, sweet and blessed country!"

The longing, the yearning, in the second "Oh" were indescribable. Again and again as she held that word and then dropped down with the cadence in the music my heart ached for I knew not what.

The audience were sitting as in a trance. The grimy faces of the miners, for they never get quite white, were furrowed with the tear courses. Shaw by this time had his face, too, lifted high, his eyes gazing far above the singer's head, and I knew by the rapture in his face that he was seeing, as she saw, the thronging, stately halls and the white robed conquerors. He had felt and was still feeling all the stress of the fight, and to him the vision of the conquerors in their glory was soul drawing and soul stirring. And Nixon, too—he had his vision, but what he saw was the face of the singer with the shining eyes, and, by the look of him, that was vision enough.

Immediately after her last note Mrs. Mavor stretched out her hands to her little girl, who was sitting on my knee, caught her up and, holding her close to her breast, walked quickly behind the curtain. Not a sound followed the singing. No one moved till she had disappeared, and then Mr. Craig came to the front and, motioning to me to follow Mrs. Mavor, began in a low, distinct voice:

"Gentlemen, it was not easy for Mrs. Mavor to sing for us, and you know she sang because she is a miner's wife and her heart is with the miners. But she sang, too, because her heart is his who came to earth this day so many years ago to save us all, and she would make you love him, too, for in loving him you are saved from all base loves, and you know what I mean.

"And before we say good night, men, I want to know if the time is not come when all of you who mean to be better than you are should join in putting from us this thing that has brought sorrow and shame to us and to those we love? You know what I mean. Some of you are strong. Will you stand by and see weaker men robbed of the money they have for those far away and robbed of the manhood that no money can buy or restore?

"Will the strong men help? Shall we join hands in this? What do you say? In this town we have often seen hell, and just a moment ago we were all looking into heaven, 'the sweet and blessed country.' Oh, men," and his voice rang in an agony through the building—"oh, men, which shall be ours? For heaven's dear sake, let us help one another! Who will?"

I was looking out through a slit in the curtain. The men, already wrought to intense feeling by the music, were listening with set faces and gleaming eyes, and as at the appeal "Who will?" Craig raised high his hand Shaw, Nixon and a hundred men sprang to their feet and held high their hands.

I have witnessed some thrilling scenes in my life, but never anything to equal that, the one man on the platform standing at full height, with his hand thrown up to heaven, and the hundred men below standing straight, with arms up at full length, silent and almost motionless.

For a moment Craig held them so, and again his voice rang out, louder, sterner than before:

"All who mean it say, 'By God's help, I will.'"

And back from a hundred throats came deep and strong the words, "By God's help, I will."

At this point Mrs. Mavor, whom I had quite forgotten, put her hand on my arm. "Go and tell him," she panted, "I want them to come on Thursday night, as they used to in the other days—go—quick!" And she almost pushed me out. I gave Craig her message. He held up his hand for silence.

"Mrs. Mavor wishes me to say that she will be glad to see you all, as in the old days, on Thursday evening, and I can think of no better place to give formal expression to our pledge of this night."

There was a shout of acceptance, and then, at some one's call, the long pent-up feelings of the crowd found vent in three mighty cheers for Mrs. Mavor.

"Now for our old hymn," called out Mr. Craig, "and Mrs. Mavor will lead us."

He sat down at the organ, played a few bars of "The Sweet By and By," and then Mrs. Mavor began. But not a soul joined till the refrain was reached, and then they sang as only men with their hearts on fire can sing. But after the last refrain Mr. Craig made a sign to Mrs. Mavor, and she sang alone, slowly and softly and with eyes looking far away:

"In the sweet by and by
We shall meet on that beautiful shore."

There was no benediction—there seemed no need—and the men went quietly out. But over and over again the voice kept singing in my ears and in my heart, "We shall meet on that beautiful shore." And after the sleigh loads of men had gone and left the street empty, as I stood with Craig in the radiant moonlight that made the great mountains about come near us, from Sandy's sleigh we heard in the distance Baptiste's French-English song, but the song that floated down with the sound of the bells from the miners' sleigh was:

"We shall meet on that beautiful shore."

"Poor old Shaw!" said Craig softly.

When the last sound had died away, I turned to him and said:

"You have won your fight."

"We have won our fight. I was beaten," he replied quickly, offering me his hand. Then, taking off his cap and looking up beyond the mountain tops and the silent stars, he added softly, "Our fight, but his victory."

And, thinking it all over, I could not say but perhaps he was right.

CHAPTER IV.

MRS. MAVOR'S STORY.

THE days that followed the Black Rock Christmas were anxious days and weary, but not for the brightest of my life would I change them now, for, as after the burning heat or rocking storm the dying day lies beautiful in the tender glow of the evening, so these days have lost their weariness and lie bathed in a misty glory. The years that bring us many ills and that pass so stormfully over us bear away with them the ugliness, the weariness, the pain, that are theirs, but the beauty, the sweetness, the rest, they leave untouched, for these are eternal. As the mountains, that near at hand stand jagged and scarred, in the far distance reposed in their soft robes of purple haze, so the rough present fades into the past, soft and sweet and beautiful.

I have set myself to recall the pain and anxiety of those days and nights when we waited in fear for the turn of the fever, but I can only think of the patience and gentleness and courage of her who stood beside me, bearing more than half my burden. And, while I can see the face of Leslie Graeme, ghastly or flushed, and hear his low moaning or the broken words of his delirium, I think chiefly of the bright face bending over him and of the cool, firm, swift moving hands that soothed and smoothed and rested, and the voice, like the soft song of a bird in the twilight, that never failed to bring peace.

Mrs. Mavor and I were much together during those days. I made my home in Mr. Craig's shack, but most of my time was spent beside my friend. We did not see much of Craig, for he was heart deep with the miners, laying plans for the making of the league the following Thursday, and, though he shared our anxiety and was ever ready to relieve us, his thought and his talk had mostly to do with the league.

Mrs. Mavor's evenings were given to the miners, but her afternoons mostly to Graeme and to me, and then it was I saw another side of her character. We would sit in her little dining room, where the pictures on the walls, the quaint old silver and bits of curiously cut glass all spoke of other and different days, and thence we would roam the world of literature and art. Keenly sensitive to all the good and beautiful in these, she had her favorites among the masters, for whom she was ready to do battle, and when her argument, instinct with fancy and vivid imagination, failed she swept away all opposing opinion with the swift rush of her enthusiasm, so that, though I felt she was beaten, I was left without words to reply. Shakespeare and Tennyson and Burns she loved, but not Shelley or Byron or even Wordsworth. Browning she knew not and therefore could not rank him with her noblest three, but when I read to her "A Death In the Desert" and came to the noble words at the end of the tale,

"For all was as I say, and now the man
Lies as he once lay, breast to breast with God,"

the light shone in her eyes, and she said: "Oh, that is good and great! I shall get much out of him. I had always feared he was impossible." And "Paracelsus," too, stirred her. But when I recited the thrilling fragment, "Prospice," on to that closing rapturous cry,

"Then a light, then thy breast—
Oh, thou soul of my soul, I shall clasp thee again,
And with God be the rest!"

the red color faded from her cheek, her breath came in a sob, and she rose quickly and passed out without a word. Ever after Browning was among her gods. But when we talked of music she, adoring Wagner, soared upon the wings of the mighty "Tannhauser," far above, into regions unknown, leaving me to walk soberly with Beethoven and Mendelssohn. Yet with all our free, frank talk there was all the while that in her gentle courtesy which kept me from venturing into any chamber of her life whose door she did not see freely open to me. So I vexed myself about her, and when Mr. Craig returned the next day from the Landing where he had been for some days, my first questions were:

"Who is Mrs. Mavor? And how, in the name of all that is wonderful and unlikely, does she come to be here? And why does she stay?"

He would not answer then. Whether it was that his mind was full of the coming struggle or whether he shrank from the tale I know not. But that night when we sat together beside his fire he told me the story while I smoked. He was worn with his long, hard drive and with the burden of his work but as he went on with his tale, looking into the fire as he told it, he forgot all his present weariness and lived again the scenes he painted for me. This was his story:

"I remember well my first sight of her as she sprang from the front seat of the stage to the ground, hardly touching her husband's hand. She looked a mere girl. Let's see, five years ago—she couldn't have been a day over twenty-three. She looked barely twenty. Her swift glance swept over the group of miners at the hotel door and then rested on the mountains standing in all their autumn glory.

"I was proud of our mountains that evening. Turning to her husband, she exclaimed:

"'Oh, Lewis, are they not grand and lovely too?'

"Every miner lost his heart then and there, but all waited for Abe, the driver, to give his verdict before venturing an opinion. Abe said nothing until he had taken a preliminary drink, and then, calling all hands to fill up, he lifted his glass high and said solemnly:

"'Boys, here's to her.'

"Like a flash every glass was emptied, and Abe called out:

"'Fill her up again, boys; my treat!'

"He was evidently quite worked up. Then he began, with solemn emphasis:

"'Boys, you hear me; she's a No. 1 triple X, the pure quill with a bead on it; she's a'—

"And for the first time in his Black Rock history Abe was stuck for a word. Some one suggested 'angel.'

"'Angel!' repeated Abe, with infinite contempt. 'Angel be blowed!' I paraphrase here. 'Angels ain't in the same month with her. I'd like to see any blanked angel swing my team around them curves without a shiver.'

"'Held the lines herself, Abe?' asked a miner.

"'That's what,' said Abe, and then he went off into a fusillade of scientific profanity expressive of his esteem for the girl who had swung his team round the curves, and the miners nodded to each other and winked their entire approval of Abe's performance, for this was his specialty.

"Very decent fellow, Abe, but his talk wouldn't print."

"Well," I urged, "who is she?"

"Oh, yes," he said, recalling himself. "She is an Edinburgh young lady; met Lewis Mavor, a young Scotch-English man, in London, wealthy, good family and all that, but fast and going to pieces at home. His people, who own large shares in these mines here, as a last resort send him out here to reform. Curiously innocent ideas those old country people have of the reforming properties of this atmosphere. They send their young bloods here to reform—here in this devil's camp ground where a man's lust is his only law and when, from sheer monotony, a man must betake himself to the only excitement of the place, that offered by the saloon. Good people in the east hold up holy hands of horror at these godless miners, but I tell you it's asking these boys a good deal to keep straight and clean in a place like this I take my excitement in fighting the devil and doing my work generally, and that gives me enough, but these poor chaps, hard worked, homeless with no break or change—God help them and me!" And his voice sank low.

"Well," I persisted, "did Mavor reform?"

Again he roused himself.

"Reform? Not exactly. In six months he had broken through all restraint, and, mind you, not the miners' fault. Not a miner helped him down. It was a sight to make angels weep when Mrs. Mavor would come to the saloon door for her husband. Every miner would vanish. They could not look upon her shame, and they would send Mavor forth in charge of Billy Breen, a queer little chap who had belonged to the Mavors in some way in the old country, and between them they would get him home. How she stood it puzzles me to this day, but she never made any sign, and her courage never failed. It was always a bright, brave, proud face she held up to the world, except in church. There it was different. I used to preach my sermons, I believe, mostly for her—but never so that she could suspect—as bravely and as cheerily as I could, and as she listened, and especially as she sang—how she used to sing in those days!—there was no touch of pride in her face, though the courage never died out, but appeal, appeal! I could have cursed aloud the cause of her misery or wept for the pity of it. Before her baby was born he seemed to pull himself together, for he was quite mad about her, and from the day the baby came—talk about miracles!—from that day he never drank a drop. She gave the baby over to him, and the baby simply absorbed him.

"He was a new man. He could not drink whisky and kiss his baby. And the miners—it was really absurd if it were not so pathetic. It was the first baby in Black Rock, and they used to crowd Mavor's shop and peep into the room at the back of it—I forgot to tell you that when he lost his position as manager he opened a hardware shop, for his people chucked him, and he was too proud to write home for money—just for a chance to be asked in to see the baby. I came upon Nixon standing at the back of the shop after he had seen the baby for the first time, sobbing hard, and to my question he replied:

"'It's just like my own.'

"You can't understand this, but to men who have lived so long in the mountains that they have forgotten what a baby looks like, who have had experience of humanity only in its roughest, foulest form, this little mite, sweet and clean, was like an angel fresh from heaven, the one link in all that black camp that bound them to what was purest and best in their past.

"And to see the mother and her baby handle the miners—oh, it was all beautiful beyond words! I shall never forget the shock I got one night when I found Old Ricketts nursing the baby. A drunken old beast he was, but there he was, sitting, sober enough, making extraordinary faces at the baby, who was grabbing at his nose and whiskers and cooing in blissful delight. Poor Old Ricketts looked as if he had been caught stealing and, muttering something about having to go, gazed wildly round for some place in which to lay the baby, when in came the mother saying in her own sweet, frank way: 'Oh, Mr. Ricketts'—she didn't find out till afterward his name was Shaw—'would you mind keeping her just a little longer? I shall be back in a few minutes.' And Old Ricketts guessed he could wait.

"But in six months mother and baby between them transformed Old Ricketts into Mr. Shaw, fire boss of the mines, and then, in the evenings, when she would be singing her baby to sleep, the little shop would be full of miners, listening in dead silence to the baby songs and the English songs and the Scotch songs she poured forth without stint, for she sang more for them than for her baby. No wonder they adored her. She was so bright, so gay, that she brought light with her when she went into the camp, into the pits, for she went down to see the men work, or into a sick miner's shack, and many a man, lonely and sick for home or wife or baby or mother, found in that back room cheer and comfort and courage, and to many a poor broken wretch that room became, as one miner put it, 'the anteroom to heaven.'"

Mr. Craig paused, and I waited. Then he went on slowly:

"For a year and a half that was the happiest home in all the world till one day"—

He put his face in his hands and shuddered.

"I don't think I can ever forget the awful horror of that bright fall afternoon when Old Ricketts came breathless to me and gasped, 'Come, for the dear Lord's sake!' and I rushed after him. At the mouth of the shaft lay three men dead. One was Lewis Mavor. He had gone down to superintend the running of a new drift. The two men, half drunk with Slavin's whisky, set off a shot prematurely, to their own and Mavor's destruction. They were badly burned, but his face was untouched. A miner was sponging off the bloody froth oozing from his lips. The others were standing about waiting for me to speak, but I could find no word, for my heart was sick, thinking, as they were, of the young mother and her baby waiting at home. So I stood, looking stupidly from one to the other, trying to find some reason, coward that I was, why another should bear the news rather than I, and while we stood there, looking at one another in fear, there broke upon us the sound of a voice mounting high above the birch tops, singing:

"'Will ye no' come back again?
Will ye no' come back again?
Better lo'ed ye canna be.
Will ye no' come back again?'

"A strange terror seized us. Instinctively the men closed up in front of the body and stood in silence. Nearer and nearer came the clear, sweet voice, ringing like a silver bell up the steep:

"'Sweet the lav'rock's note and lang,
Liltin' wildly up the glen,
But ay tae me he sings ae sang,
Will ye no' come back again?'

"Before the verse was finished Old Ricketts had dropped on his knees, sobbing out brokenly, 'O God, O God, have pity, have pity, have pity!' and every man took off his hat. And still the voice came nearer, singing so brightly the refrain:

"'Will ye no' come back again?'

"It became unbearable. Old Ricketts sprang suddenly to his feet and, gripping me by the arm, said piteously:

"'Oh, go to her! For heaven's sake, go to her!'

"'Are they not lovely? Lewis is so fond of them!'

"With the promise of much finer ones I turned her down a path toward the river, talking I know not what folly till her great eyes grew grave, then anxious, and my tongue stammered and became silent. Then, laying her hand upon my arm, she said, with gentle sweetness:

"'Tell me your trouble, Mr. Craig,' and I knew my agony had come, and I burst out:

"'Oh, if it were only mine!'

"She turned quite white, and, with her deep eyes—you've noticed her eyes—drawing the truth out of mine, she said:

"'Is it mine, Mr. Craig, and my baby's?'

"I waited, thinking with what words to begin. She put one hand to her heart and with the other caught a little poplar tree that shivered under her

Seven Principal Routes.

It is a well known fact that the C., M. & St. P. Ry. system offers a great many different routes between Chicago and St. Paul and Minneapolis. Its main line between those points is especially well known as the route over which runs the famous "Pioneer Limited" and the Government Fast Mail train.

There are six or seven other routes over a number of which are run through coaches and sleeping cars, which are almost as direct as the principal main line.

These various routes traverse the most interesting and attractive sections of Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota, including the celebrated "Lake Region" of Wisconsin, and cross the Wisconsin river at the famous "Dells," where is the most picturesque scenery in the Northwest.

The main line and several others include from 155 to 300 miles of romantic and picturesque scenery along the Mississippi river. On these various lines are located the most important towns and cities in the Northwest.

Both one way and special excursion tickets between Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis are honored via any one of these direct lines.

The teachers attending the National Educational Convention at Minneapolis will appreciate and take advantage of this fact as they can have a choice of routes going and returning.

ROUND ABOUT US.

Many a man is in jail for stealing that which he could have bought on credit and never paid for—as his newspaper for instance.

A Detroit paper contains this advertisement: "Notice. If ——, who is supposed to be in Chicago, will communicate with his friends at home he will hear of something to his advantage. His wife is dead."—Ex.

Lightning visited Rome Center the first Saturday in May. It ripped off shingles from the roof of Rob Curtis barn, entered the chimney of the schoolhouse, knocked an elbow out of joint in the stove pipe, acting just as though it were on a tear.

While Brooklyn beef eaters are hard hit by the high prices it is only fair to our local meat cutters at the G. M. Thompson market to state that Brooklyn residents are now paying from two to six cents per pound less for their meat than asked in outside places.—Brooklyn Exponent.

A healthy looking hobo worked the sore arm graft on a number of sympathetic Brooklynites on Thursday last. The blisters in a convenient place on his arm were exhibited as scrofula sores and many of his tender hearted listoners were thus "touched" for various contributions.—Brooklyn Exponent.

The barn of Wm. Fisher, of Franklin, was struck by lightning a few days since, and air holes were made in the roof, and several rafters were splintered. Billy was in the barn at the time, and thought the battle of Gettysburg had opened. However, the bolt slid out of sight without killing him or setting fire to the barn.

One of the finest equipped stock yards on the Wabash R. R. is located on the farm of Thomas Redman, west of the depot in this village. Mr. Redman believes in haying everything well done, and the weighing house, scales and yards have been put in and built just right and fitted with every convenience to accommodate the public.—Milan Leader.

A few nights ago Dr. Kapp went to the barn, as is his practice before retiring and found one of his horses in a very peculiar position and one that might have resulted in the loss of the horse. In some manner it had caught its hind foot in the rope halter, the foot only a few inches from its head. In its struggling the rope was drawn tightly under the heel of the shoe so that it had to be cut on bot sides of the foot and extracted by the use of the pincers.—Manchester Enterprise.

When a church pastor wants an announcement he goes to a local paper. When a lady wants a church suppar published she goes to a local paper for a write up. When a party issues a call or holds a meeting it calls on a local paper for publicity. When an obituary of some loved one is wanted in print the local paper is called on. Society in general turns to the local paper. Yet many people are so selfish that they hesitate and often refuse to subscribe for it or give in partial return for the gratuitous work it does for them and the public every year.—Ex.

At the Industrial Home a class of 18 out of 32 girls received diplomas from the cooking school. These girls received 100 per cent marking, for excellence in cooking, and this shows how perfect they must be. Not only can they cook, but their course includes originating meals, and the cooking embraces all courses from soups, to choice pastry. The diplomas were presented by Mrs. Bliss, in the presence of a few friends. Gilbert Hart gave a half dollar to the prize winner making the best loaf of bread, but had he been left to judge he would have felt it his duty to pay each girl the same, as all did so well that there was very little room to decide superiority for either.—Adrian Press.

Naming the Child.

Now, necessarily when the new girl baby arrived there was much discussion among the members of the family as to what her name should be.

"We will call her Geraldina," said the fond mother.

"Why not call her Esmeralda?" said the first grandmother. "I saw that name in a story once and always wanted to try it on a baby."

"Oh, murmured the second grandmother, "that would never do. Let us call her Fanchon."

"But don't you think Eltessa is a pretty name, and so odd, too?" put in one of the aunts.

"Excuse me, ladies," ventured the poor father, who sat near by, "but you seem to forget that we are trying to find a name for a human being and not for a five cent cigar."—Baltimore American.

How Cheap Baking Powder is Made.

The Health Department of New York has seized a quantity of so-called cheap baking powder, which it found in that city. Attention was attracted to it by the low price at which it was being sold in the department stores. Samples were taken and the chemist of the Health Department reported the stuff to be "an alum powder, which analysis showed to be composed chiefly of alum and pulverized rock.

The powder was declared to be dangerous to health, and several thousand pounds were carted to the offal dock and destroyed.

It is unsafe to experiment with these so-called "cheap" articles of food. They are sure to be made from alum, rock, or other injurious matter. In baking powders, the high class, cream of tartar brands are the most economical, because they go farther in use and are healthful beyond question.

A tempting course tea was served to Mesdames Anna Diemer, Margaret Stierwalt, John Hubbard, Catherine Crum and Mrs. Connor. Mrs. Covell received a number of very pretty presents the event being in honor of the lady's seventy-third birthday.—Fremont Daily Messenger.

Mrs. Covell arrived on the 15th from Fremont, after spending the winter with her grand-daughter, Mrs. Channing Beardsley. She will spend the summer with friends here.

CUYLER NORTH

One of Tecumseh Baseball Boys Won the

CAPTAINCY

Of the Kalamazoo College Baseball Team, where he Attends School.

A fine half tone of Cuyler S. North, captain of the Kalamazoo college baseball team, appeared in the Sunday edition of the Free Press He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. L. G. North, of this place, and was a member of the Tecumseh ball team. The following we clip from the Detroit Free Press:

Cuyler S. North, '04, of Tecumseh, won the captaincy of the ball team owing to his all around work on the team last season and his popularity with the men. He was chosen captain in place of John S Cotton, who was obliged to resign because of an injury which will keep him out of the game. Capt. North is superb as an infielder and a good hitter, and one of the best amateur players in the state. He received his experience on the diamond as pitcher for the Tecumseh high school team and his work with the Tecumseh city team, with which he has played three seasons. Aside from his proficiency on the diamond, Capt. North is also quarterback on the college eleven, and is considered one of the nerviest little players on the gridiron.

Mrs. D. Haggart

Elizabeth Van Norton, daughter of John Van Norton, was born in Caqua county, New York, Jan. 15, 1826. She was married to Levi T. Slater in 1849, by this union three children were born, Mrs. Wm. Cook, Mrs. Z. Snell and Frank Slater, all of whom are living. In Oct. 1884 she was united in marriage to David Haggart, of Clinton, at which place she resided until her husband's death in 1896, after which she moved to Tecumseh and has made this place her home until her death May 14, 1902.

She was converted and joined the Congregational church at Clinton some 17 years ago, and retained membership with that church until her death, she was also an earnest worker for the cause of the Woman's Christian Temparence Union. For the past ten years she has been a great sufferer. Her home, her children and her immediate neighbors were her world, for them she never tired of doing acts of kindness, Many are the hours she has diligently worked that some ailing friend might be made happy.

We shall miss her. Her accustomed chair will be vacant, the home that has been made bright for the past years will know her no more. She responded to the call of her Father, and left all her earthly cares and troubles, that she might go home and join those gone on before

In this dark hour we have one supreme comfort, during all her years of weakness, her smallest wish or desire has ever been granted, but.—

"She heard a voice that called to her.
These earthly cares to leave,
As if in answer to that call
She left us hear to grieve."

Her children have ever been kind and thoughful of their mother and to them the loss will be imparable, never again will that gentle hand be placed in theirs, never again will the voice of mother be heard in the home that has known her so well, but we know she is at rest. She died believing in the true faith. She is not lost to us forever, but simply gone before, where in the presence of her maker, all her cares and troubles will be banished.

The funeral was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Cook on Wyandotte street at 2 p. m. Saturday, conducted by Rev. Leslie Bower of the Baptist church. Her two favorite songs, "Nearer my God to Thee" and "Rock of Ages" were sung at the services. The many floral pieces that were offered and the presence of many friends and neighbors showed the high esteem in which the mother was held.

"Our mother is gone, we will see her no more,
We can't think her dead, but just gone before
We will meet her again in the sweet bye and bye,
In the home of the blest, where friends never die."

Mr. Bradley will make this a permanent investment here and will fix the property up so that the whole town will be proud of it. His son, Arthur Bradley, who is now a mail route agent from Jackson to Adrian will virtuely have the management and he, assisted by C. D. Hardy, of Adrian, will be able to give Tecumseh some good entertainments.

It is understood from Mr. Bradley that the floor will be made over and raised seats put in, new scenery will be added and with the aid of carpenters and decorators the auditorium will be put in first class shape. Excursions to St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., at very low rates over Lake Shore Ry., May 17, 18 and 19.

Telephone Burned Out.

Lightning played thunder with the electric light wire and telephone in Sam Shutt's residence about four o'clock Sunday afternoon. The transformer in the Presbyterian church was blown out and in some way the lightning followed the wire around to Sam Shutt's house and burned out the telephone and tore off a piece of paper twice as large as your hand. Besides this, it frightened the ladies about out of their wits but this morning they fixed the phone and now all are happy again.

Both Good Men

On June 1, George Van Tyne, who has been clerk at Spayde's clothing store so many years, will leave, going into business for himself. For a number of years George has had poor health and he will now pay his attention to raising chickens and at the same time endeavor to secure better health. Roy Codling, of Clinton, will take his place in the clothing store. He has been with one firm in that town for fourteen years and will make for Mr. Spayde a valuable man.

The Detroit Free Press says: All fruit growers should try the plan of trapping the codlin moth, by suspending water in the apple trees. We use old fruit jars and put in a quarter of a pint of water, in which a tablespoon of mollasses and a teaspoonful of vinegar have been stirred. The moths smell the mixture, fly in, get their wings wet and are caught. We have trapped as many as 40 of them in a night, in a single jar. Now is the time to begin trapping. Keep it up as long as the moths are trapped. It will save many bushels of apples from being infested with the detestable worms. Feed the moths you catch to the little chicks. It is fun to see their scramble for the dainties.

Mr. George Merritt, well known business man and proprietor of the cigar manufactory, says: "I can testify to honesty and worth of Doan's Kidney Pills. There is no humbug about them. I was annoyed for some time with a dull aching pain in my back at times quite severe. I heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a box at C. A. Wright's drug store and after taking them a short time I found they were helping me. Finally the pain in my back disappeared entirely. Doan's Kidney Pills are a splendid remedy for all kidney ailments."

PALMA'S CABINET.

Cuba's New President Announces His Aids in Government.

Havana, May 17.—Gov.-Gen. Wood is busily engaged in straightening out complications which might cause a hitch when the reins of government are transferred to the new administration. The Cuban republic expects the stage to be cleared when the curtain is rung down on the American occupation next Tuesday.

President-elect Palma is fairly standing a siege of office-seekers at the residence of Gen. Maximo Gomez, which he and his family are occupying prior to his inauguration. He sees all who call, listens to everything they have to say, and invariably advises harmony for the sake of the country. Senor Palma is winning the admiration of all classes by his lofty character and he is proving himself a truly remarkable man.

His cabinet, which was announced last evening, is as follows:

Diego Tamayo (nationalist), secretary of government, a new portfolio. Senor Tamayo will have charge of the rural guard, sanitation, the administration of the postoffices and signal service.

Carlos Zaldo, republican-autonomist, department of state and justice. He is a well-known business man. He was at one time a supporter of Juan Gualberto Gomez, "the Black Revolutionist."

Manuel Luciano Diaz (nationalist), department of the public works. Senor Diaz, who had charge of the works at Matanzas during the American occupation, is an engineer of ability.

Eduardo Yero (nationalist), department of instruction. Senor Yero was superintendent of schools during the American occupation of the island.

Garcia Montes (republican), a lawyer of standing, department of finance.

Mr. E. Lockwood of Tecumseh, Mich., says: "For a number of years past I have been troubled with nervousness in a severe form and as a result I was sleepless and bothered with dizzy spells. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and after using the pills I am pleased to say my nerves are steadied, I sleep better and the dizzy spells are gone. I consider the pills a splendid nerve medicine.

VOTE LIKELY NEXT WEEK.

In the Senate on the Pending Philippine Bill.

Washington, May 19.—The entire time of the senate for the present week will be devoted to the consideration of the Philippine government bill, and there is no reason for changing previous predictions that the debate upon that measure will be practically completed before the close of the week. The fact that there will be an adjournment of the senate covering next Saturday in order to permit that body to participate in the unveiling of the Rochambeau statue probably will have the effect of postponing the final vote until the following Monday or Tuesday. There is, however, no longer doubt in any quarter that the minority will permit a vote as soon as the debate on the bill shall be exhausted. Speeches in support of the bill are promised by Senator Burrows, Dolliver and Spooner, and in opposition to it by Senators Hoar, Bacon, Patterson and others.

After finishing the naval bill this week the house will take up the bill reported from the committee on foreign affairs relating to passports. One day will be devoted to claims, the regular day for that business last week having been postponed. Under a special order, a bill for the restriction of immigration will be taken up, and it is expected will cause quite a likely debate. There also is a prospect of taking up the Hill bill relating to subsidary coinage. This measure will be strongly antagonized by the minority and may precipitate a discussion of currency question.

DATTOS ARE FRIENDLY.

Gen. Chaffee Interviews Several While at Lake Lanao.

Manila, May 19.—Gen. Chaffee returned here Sunday from Lake Lanao, in the interior of the island of Mandanao. He said he saw several Moro dattos while there and had most satisfactory interviews with them. Nearly all the dattos, and especially the surviving sultans, claim to entertain friendly feelings toward the United States.

In view of a cablegram which Gen. Chaffee received from Gen. Davis, who is in command of the American forces on Mindanao, and in which it appears that Datto Ruty has apparently refused to return the animals he captured from the American army, Gen. Chaffee is not prepared to say that there will be no more fighting in Mindanao. Gen. Davis reports that Datto Ruty says he is ready to fight, but Gen. Chaffee believes that, although it may be necessary to bring this datto to terms, his resistance of the American forces must necessarily be slight.

Datto Duty's forts are situated on a high hill. They could be surrounded by a line of American skirmishers, who would prevent them from obtaining water and who could thus force a practically bloodless victory in a few days.

Ladies Form Anti-Beef Trust.

New York, May 19.—Five hundred east side Hebrew men and women met Sunday and formed "the ladies' anti-beef trust association." A committee of seven women was appointed and the members instructed to visit all the tenement houses on the east side to persuade the Hebrew women not to buy meat until the price was reduced to the point of a year ago, that is 10 and 12 cents per pound. They were not to create any disturbance, but when they saw Hebrew women coming out of a butcher shop with meat they were instructed to argue with them. If they were unwilling to throw the meat away but willing to join the organization, the committee women were to buy it from them and throw it into the street.

Seven Killed in Race Riot.

Atlanta, Ga., May 19.—Four white men and three negroes dead, five white men and one negro wounded, and an entire block of buildings burned is the result of a conflict which began here early Saturday between the police and blacks. Will Richardson, who is believed to have been half Indian and half negro, the owner of a store on McDaniel street, in the suburb of Pittsburg, and four other negroes brought on the trouble by resisting arrest and defying the officers of Fulton county and Atlanta.

THE PHALANX.

Its Formation In the Military Methods of Ancient Greece.

A phalanx in the military affairs of Greece was a square battalion or body of soldiers formed in ranks and files compact and deep with their shields joined and pikes crossing each other so as to render it almost impossible to break it. At first the phalanx consisted of 4,000 men, but this number was afterward doubled by Philip of Macedon, and the double phalanx is hence often called the Macedonian phalanx. Polybius describes it thus:

"It was a square of pikemen, consisting of 16 in flank and 500 in front. The soldiers stood so close together that the pikes of the fifth rank extended three feet beyond the front. The rest, whose pikes were not serviceable owing to their distance from the front, couched them upon the shoulders of those who stood before them and, so locking them together in file, pressed forward to support and push on the former rank, by which means the assault was rendered more violent and irresistible." The spears of those behind also stopped the missiles of the enemy. Each man's pike was twenty-three feet long. The word phalanx is also used for any combination of people distinguished for solidity and firmness. A grand phalanx consisted of 16,384 men.

Weak?

"I suffered terribly and was extremely weak for 12 years. The doctors said my blood was all turning to water. At last I tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and was soon feeling all right again."

No matter how long you have been ill, nor how poorly you may be today, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine you can take for purifying and enriching the blood.

TOOK STRYCHNINE BY MISTAKE.

Detroit Girl Meets Sudden Death in New York Hotel.

New York, May 19.—Miss Julia Williams, daughter of Mrs. Julia Williams of Detroit, Mich., said to be a relative of Senator Hanna, died Sunday at the Fifth Avenue hotel of an overdose of strychnine, taken in form of pills. She was 22 years of age.

The young woman and her mother had been spending the winter at Saranac Lake, N. Y., on account of the poor health of the daughter. Saturday morning they came to this city, the intention being to go to Atlantic City.

From what Coroner Jackson could gather after the death of Miss Williams, she took several strychnine pills, probably mistaking them for some iron pills she was also taking. The cause of death is set down as a purely accidental one.

Dr. Pease, the attending physician, said: "There is no mystery about it at all. It was simply an overdose of strychnine pills, and they were not taken with suicidal intention."

Coroner Jackson was informed that Miss Williams was engaged to be married to Pitts Duffield of this city, a son of Gen. H. M. Duffield of Detroit, and that Mr. Duffield was at the hotel when Miss Williams died, she having had him summoned.

The road is understood to have put the men at work on Sunday in order to dodge a possible injunction from the property owners who have been fighting the proposed crossing, in spite of the fact that the road has secured the permission of the state crossing board.

Paper Mill Got a Scorching.

Three Rivers, Mich., May 19.—At 5 o'clock Sunday morning fire broke out in the large plant of the Three Rivers Paper Co., located in the south part of the city. It started in the roof covering what is termed the wet department and calendar rolls. The fire laddies succeeded in saving the buildings, but not until the entire roof was burned off at the place where the fire started. An engine on the M. C. air line hauled several cars of coal into the mill just before the fire, and sparks from its stack are supposed to have started the blaze. The plant is fully insured.

Enemy Cut Down His Orchard.

Ithaca, Mich., May 19.—Some one entered the orchard of the McCall brothers, in the outskirts of the city, and chopped down the greater part of a large tract planted with young plum trees. The McCalls suspected a neighbor named Charles Gifford and caused his arrest. Gifford was arraigned, but waived examination and is out on bail.

Run Over and Killed.

Coral, Mich., May 19.—While Lowa Christiansen, a farmer living six miles east of this village, was going to dinner on a load of rails, his horses became frightened and ran away. Mr. Christiansen was thrown from the load and the wheels passed over his head and face, killing him instantly.

Suicide of Davison Man.

Flint, Mich., May 19.—Despondency, due to sickness, caused Jesse Smith, aged 30 years, and son of Jonathan Smith of Davison, to commit suicide Saturday. He used a quarter-inch rope, and life was extinct when his mother found his body hanging from a rafter in the barn.

Valuable Horses Burned Up.

Girl Killed by Automobile.

Toledo, May 19.—The first fatal automobile accident occurred here Sunday when James T. Brailey, the well-known independent telephone magnate, while speeding in his auto collided with May Schook, a 13-year-old girl, riding a wheel. The girl was almost instantly killed.

Only Amused Them.

James had been an autocrat in his home, and when he went to school he was greatly astounded to be told that he must do this thing and that he must not do that. After disobeying every rule of the school and being reproved he wanted to know the "whys" of it. "Because you disturb the other boys," he was told. "I don't think I disturb them," he replied thoughtfully. "I think I amuse them."—New York Press.

Booked For a Museum.

She was an ignorant but ambitious woman, relates the Chicago Tribune, and the great ambition of her life was gratified when her husband was elected a member of congress. Immediately after the result of the election was known the new congressman's wife drove in from her country home to the county seat to call in triumph on her dearest enemies in a social way. She called first on the wife of the local banker, who had sent her three daughters through Vassar, and after receiving the congratulations of the family she turned the conversation to her plans for the future of her own daughter, Jennie.

"I am going to give Jennie every educational advantage," she said. "As soon as the congressman and I get to Washington we are going to put Jennie in the Smithsonian institute."

Woman's Curiosity.

As good an instance of New York wit as can be found is told about the staff of the Roosevelt hospital. A dangerous operation was being performed upon a woman. Old Dr. A., a quaint German full of kindly wit and professional enthusiasm, had several younger doctors with him. One of them was administering the ether. He became so interested in the old doctor's work that he withdrew the cone from the patient's nostrils, and she half roused and rose to a sitting posture, looking with wild eyed amazement over the surroundings. It was a critical period, and Dr. A. did not want to be interrupted.

"Lay down dere, voman," he commanded gruffly. "You haf more curiosity as a medical student."

She lay down, and the operation went on.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parent did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops. Jessie Pinkey Hall, Springville, Ala. This remedy is for sale by J. J. Orr.

Effect of Gravitation.

If a man weighing twelve stone were to be transferred to the moon, the weight of his body, measured at least by the attraction which the moon would exercise upon it, would be reduced to about two stone. If his muscles and his frame remained the same, it would seem as if he would be able to jump over a wall twelve feet high on the small globe without any greater exertion than would be required to clear a wall two feet high on the earth.

An Anticipated Pleasure.

A congressman of Mississippi, after making a speech in opposition to the expensive funerals of congressmen, says he received a letter from a constituent saying: "When you die, John, we won't ask congress to pay the expense of your funeral. You've got enough friends down here, John, to give you a respectable burial, and we would take pleasure in doing it."

A Home Beyond the Grave.

Dan, a colored man, was employed as porter in a mercantile establishment in a town in Florida, and his duties required him to have the store swept by 7 o'clock in the morning. He had been late for many mornings, and on the sixteenth consecutive time his employer remonstrated with him thus:

"Dan, why can't you get here on time?"

"Well, Mr. L.," said Dan, "yer see, I live the other side of Mount Hermon cemetery and can't always get yere on time."

"Why in the world do you live so far from your work?" said his employer.

Without a moment's hesitation Dan [illegible]ded: "[illegible]e, it's dis yere way, Mr. L.—[illegible]s' wid yer—I wants a home [illegible]ave."

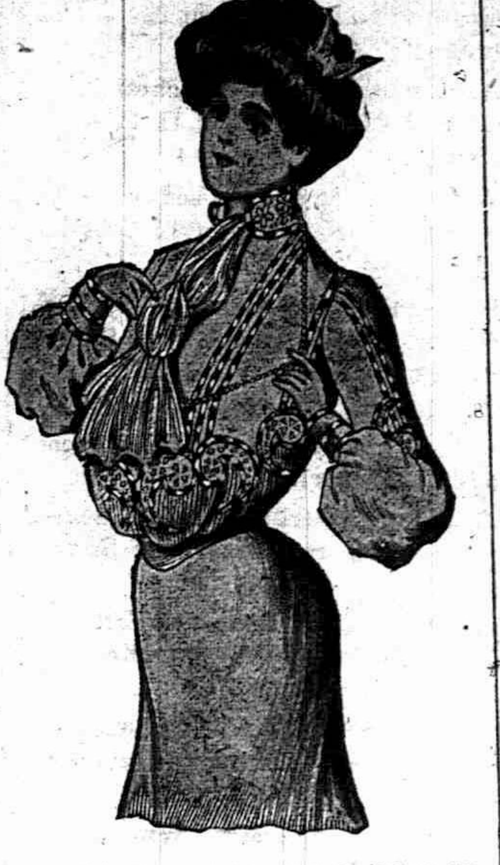
A DAINTY THEATER BODICE.

Of Liberty Silk over Taffeta.

With the signs of approaching warm weather our heavy and much trimmed satin and peau de sole waists are found too uncomfortable and we long for lighter garments to wear to the theater.



A very dainty waist is of pale blue liberty silk over taffeta of the same shade and is trimmed with ribbon-run beading. It has something of a bolero effect as the lower part consists of plaited chiffon which blouses slightly over the belt. An attractive chiffon jabot completes the garniture. The stitching is all done with Corticelli silk. When finished this makes a very attractive waist.

TO THEIR MEMORY

Memorial Shaft Unveiled by President Roosevelt.

IN ARLINGTON CEMETARY

To the Veterans Who Fell During the Spanish-American War—Erected By the National Society of Colonial Dames.

Washington, May 22.—President Roosevelt on Wednesday unveiled the memorial shaft erected at Arlington by the National Society of Colonial Dames, in memory of the veterans who fell in the recent struggle between Spain and the United States. Around the platform an immense crowd gathered, among whom were many men who saw service in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines.

The military department was represented by a battalion of engineers, a battalion of marines, light battery of the Fourth artillery, two squadrons of the Second cavalry and over 500 veterans of the Spanish-American war. The services began with the playing of the "Dead March from Saul," followed by a surpliced choir singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." Prayer was said by Bishop Satterlee and a Catrolic priest, and the entire audience joined in singing the national hymn. Lieut.-Gen. John M. Schofield, U. S. A., retired, then read the address of the president of the national society, Mrs. Justine V. Townsend, at the conclusion of which the shaft was unveiled amid the cheers of the thousands who had surrounded the stand.

Guns Fired a Salute.

As the shaft was unveiled the artillery fired the national salute, after which President Roosevelt delivered a short address.

He considered the day as an exceedingly appropriate one for the unveiling of the shaft, since it succeeded the one which freed Cuba. This remark he followed with a beautiful tribute to the good work carried on in Cuba by Gen. Leonard Wood.

The remainder of his remarks consisted in recalling the essential details which go to make up a soldier who is of value to his country, and how necessary it was for one to perform these little duties.

The necessity of applying these rules also in civil life concluded the remainder of his speech, and he closed by saying: "You cannot expect that much will be done in the supreme hour of peril by soldiers who have not fitted themselves to meet the need when need comes, and you cannot expect the highest type of citizenship to be shown in the periods when it is needed if that citizenship has not been trained by the faithful performance of ordinary duty. What we need most in this republic is not special genius, not unusual brilliancy, but the honest and upright adherence on the part of the mass of the citizens and of their representatives to the fundamental laws of private and public morality."

As soon as the president had concluded the band struck up the "Star Spangled Banner," the audience joining in. Benediction was said by Bishop Satterlee, and "Nearer My God to Thee" was rendered by the choir. Amid the most impressive silence taps was sounded and the services were over.

Refugees from Fort de France.

Washington, May 22.—Adjt.-Gen. Corbin has received the following cablegram from Capt. Gallagher, who went to Martinique on the Dixie:

"Fort de France, May 21.—Adjutant-General, Washington: Effects of eruption confined to North American portion of island. St. Pierre and neighboring villages totally destroyed. Thirty thousand a fair estimate of loss of life of zone of destruction; physical conditions normal, but people panic-stricken. This condition was increased by yesterday's eruption which was quite severe, but did not materially add to desolation. Supplies of all kinds sufficient for eight weeks. What has been done was just what emergency demanded, and nothing further can be suggested. Government and people most grateful. Dixie now discharging part of cargo; will proceed with what remains to St. Vincent."

Pointe a Pitre, Island of Gradaloupe, May 22.—The steamer Horten has arrived here with 200 refugees from Fort de France, Martinique, on board. It is reported here that the French steamer Salvador, having on board a thousand people, who were unable to remain at Fort de France, is coming here and that everybody who can do so is leaving Fort de France.

Batangas Conditions Improved.

Manila, May 22.—Capt. Crawford, chief of the constabulary of Batangas province, reports that the conditions there are better than ever before. There is less ladronism and the inhabitants seem to have developed fresh energy and interest in life, believing that an era of settled peace has begun. They are now constructing better houses and are living on a scale approximating American ideas of comfort, cleanliness and sanitation. Capt. Crawford attributes this improvement principally to experience in American ways, gained by the natives in the concentration camps. Enforced sanitation, good treatment of the indigent and helpless, and careful nursing of the sick, he says, gave the natives a different impression of the Americans and did much to eradicate race hatred. The American soldiers are now looked upon as protectors, rather than as enemies.

A GENERAL STRIKE

Is Wanted Badly by the Michigan Miners.

THEY MADE A REQUEST

To President Mitchell That National Convention Be Called—Miners Held Mass Meeting in Bay City Wednesday.

Bay City, Mich., May 22.—Michigan district, United Mine Workers of America, has decided to join with the three anthracite districts of Pennsylvania in a request to President Mitchell for a national convention of anthracite and bituminous miners to discuss a general strike of all miners in the country.

This action was taken at a meeting of the executive board of the Michigan district, held in Saginaw Monday, the request being sent by telegraph to President Mitchell.

The fact that such request was made was closely guarded. President Williams of the Michigan district refused to affirm or deny the report that such action had been taken, but other state officials and members of the executive board who were here attending a mass meeting of the miners, admitted that President Mitchell had received the sanction of the Michigan district.

President Williams did say, however, that the Michigan miners would gain a great deal by a general strike.

Call to Be Issued Soon.

Both he and Secretary Corven of the state organization said that they expected the call for a general convention would be issued very soon. At a mass meeting of miners held in this city Wednesday the men were informed what the delegates and leaders had endeavored to accomplish and what they stood out for in their recent conference with the operators. National Vice-President Lewis was at this meeting and made an explanation along the same line.

Robbers Made Him Confess.

Hudson, Mich., May 22.—George Wagner, a prominent farmer, 65 years old, residing three miles southwest, was held up and robbed at his home. The robbers tortured Mr. Wagner until he told where his money was hidden. They took all the money they could find in the house and left their victim in a badly bruised condition and about as near dead as alive.

Charged With Criminal Assault.

Marshall, Mich., May 22.—Wilber Page of Lee township was arrested Wednesday charged with criminal assault on Bessie Wagner, the 14-year-old daughter of Frank Wagner. He pleaded not guilty before Justice Merrill and his examination has been set for May 26. He furnished bail.

Poisoned By Rhubarb Leaves.—Joseph St. Aubin's family, residing near Carleton, had a close call. Some one told them that rhubarb leaves made fine greens to eat, so they thought they would try them. The stuff made them deathly sick, and had it not been for the timely arrival of a physician all would have died.

Foul Play Suspected.—The body of Louis H. Cronenwett, who disappeared Dec. 8, 1901, was discovered in the Detroit river by two boys Wednesday afternoon. The body was badly decayed and had without doubt been in the water all winter. Cronenwett was a well-known Detroit business Man. His brother identified the body, and is of the opinion that he met with foul play.

Life Was Crushed Out.

Cleveland, O., May 21.—The badly crushed body of a man, supposed to be that of Henry C. Meler of 71 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y., was found on the Lake Shore railway track at the Lorain street crossing. Papers found on the body gave the name and address stated.

Canton, O., May 22.—In the Starke county workhouse Wednesday, Guard George Jacobs was killed and Guard Homer Stone was dangerously shot by Charles Gigante, a young man recently sent up from Canton for driving a horse to death. He pulled a revolver out of the pocket of a new guard who was passing through the workshop.

AGAINST PACKERS

Temporary Injunction Issued in Chicago Court.

TWENTY AFFIDAVITS FILED

Defendants Are Given Until August 4 in Which to Reply—Little Opposition Offered by the Alleged Combine.

Chicago, May 21.—The temporary injunction asked for by the government against the members of the so-called packers' combine is now in force. It was issued last evening by Judge Peter S. Grosscup after the close of arguments in the United States circuit court room. The order gives the relief prayed for in the bill filed by District Attorney Bethea on May 10. It is so wide in its scope that if the packers or their agents continue with their present alleged uniform arrangements, they will be taken into court on contempt proceedings, and the burden of proof will be on them to show that they have not violated the order in any particular.

Little opposition was raised against the government's petition. Judge Grosscup thought some minor clauses had been made too prominent, and he himself drew a form of order that pleased both sides.

General Counsel Miller sat alone to represent the defendants, though there were many office employes of the packers among the spectators. For the government, District Attorney Bethea was the leader, and was aided by Solicitor General Richards and Special Counsel Day, of Washington, and Assistant District Attorneys Morrison, Pagin and Davis.

Unless the defendants decide to make a fight at an early date in an effort to have the order set aside, they will have until Aug. 4 to make reply to the complaint. Attorney Miller said that he cannot tell whether a demurrer, a plea or an answer will be filed, though the first named is the most likely to be the form of the packers' defense. The subpoenas served recently on the defendants commanded them to file their appearances separately before July 7.

The order as amended and entered by Judge Grosscup was in part as follows:

"The court having heard the arguments of counsel and being fully advised in the premises, doth order that a temporary writ of injunction issue restraining, until the final hearing or further order of this court, the said defendants (the court here naming all the defendants), and each of them, their respective agents and attorneys and all other persons acting or claiming or assuming to act under their authority, or that of any of them, from entering into, taking part in or performing any contract, combination or conspiracy, the purpose or effect of which will be, as to trade and commerce, in fresh meats, a restraint of trade or commerce among the several states, territories and the District of Columbia, either by directing or requiring their respective agents from refraining to bid against each other in the purchase of live stock; or, collusively and by agreement, refraining from bidding against each other at such sales, or by arbitrarily raising or lowering prices, or fixing uniform prices at which said meats shall be sold, either directly or through their respective agents, or by curtailing the quantity of such meats shipped to such markets and agents, or by imposing penalties for deviations from prices; or establishing and maintaining uniform rules for the giving of credit to dealers in such matters, or by imposing uniform charges for cartage and delivery of such meats to dealers and consumers, or by any other method or device, the purpose and effect of which is to restrain trade and commerce, as aforesaid."

The affidavits were 20 in number, the most important submitted being that of Daniel W. Meredith of Jersey City, N. J. Since 1893, he declared, six general managers for the big companies have been accustomed to meet at least once a week in the city of New York to consider the prices which they should place for the ensuing week on the meat products which should be sold in that territory; and for the purpose of considering the quantity of meats which each concern had on hand, and "when the necessities of the trade would require they would agree to curtail their shipments of meat from Chicago, their design and purpose being to limit the quantity of meats in sight at New York and adjacent points and raise the prices." The affidavit covered, at considerable length, the manner in which the alleged meetings were conducted.

A number of others gave affidavits of a like nature.

Czar and Loubet Meet.

Cronstadt, Russia, May 21.—The French squadron, escorting the armored cruiser Montcalm, having Loubet on board, was sighted at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Welcoming mottoes were to be seen everywhere. Great crowds assembled on the quays and they mingled their cheers with the salutes from the ships and forts, as the Montcalm entered the harbor. The imperial yacht Alexandra, with the czar on board, arrived almost simultaneously with the French squadron. The Grand Duke Alexis boarded the Montcalm, and, after President Loubet had briefly reviewed the Russian fleet he escorted the president on board the Alexandra, where the greetings exchanged between the czar and M. Loubet were most cordial.

WOMEN $60,000 SHY

Muskegon Man Willed It to Build Them a Home

BUT MISSPELLED "INDIGENT"

He Wrote It "Indignant," Thus Probably Making the Instrument Void—Man's Relatives Will Endeavor to Break the Will.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 21.—E. L. McDonnell of Muskegon, who died in this city on the date he was to have married Miss Virginia Platt of Cincinnati, in his will left $60,000 to establish a home for indigent old women at Fairmount, Ind.

An examination of the will shows that, instead of "indigent" old women he wrote "indignant" old women, and this error in spelling may invalidate the instrument.

According to the will as originally drafted, he left $5,000 to Flora M. Newton of Syracuse, N. Y., to whom he was formerly engaged. He scratched her name out and substituted that of Miss Platt when the change came over his affections, and only one of the witnesses to the will was apprised of the change, which was equivalent to making a new will. The instrument will be attacked by Miss Newton and Mr. Donnell's relatives.

Looks Like Foul Play.

Muskegon Mich., May 21.—The body of an unidentified man was found floating in Muskegon lake near the North Muskegon ferry dock yesterday. The remains had evidently been in the water for several days, and the only article found in the clothes was a German bible with the inscription on the fly leaf, "Joseph Meyer, Aus Bleren, Germany." The man's age was about 60 years, and in one hand was gripped a crooked handled cane. It is thought death may have resulted from foul means, as there is a deep gash over one eye and the right temple is caved in, as if from a violent blow.

grasp and said, with white lips, but even more gently:

"'Tell me.'

"I wondered at my voice being so steady as I said:

"'Mrs. Mavor, God will help you and your baby. There has been an accident, and it is all over.'

"She was a miner's wife, and there was no need for more. I could see the pattern of the sunlight falling through the trees upon the grass. I could hear the murmur of the river and the cry of the catbird in the bushes, but we seemed to be in a strange and unreal world. Suddenly she stretched out her hands to me and with a little moan said:

"'Take me to him.'

"'Sit down for a moment or two.' I entreated.

"'No, no; I am quite ready.' See,' she added quietly; 'I am quite strong.'

"I set off by a short cut leading to her home, hoping the men would be there ahead of us; but, passing me, she walked swiftly through the trees, and I followed in fear. As we came near the main path I heard the sound of feet, and I tried to stop her, but she, too, had heard and knew.

"'Oh, let me go!' she said piteously. 'You need not fear.'

"And I had not the heart to stop her. In a little opening among the pines we met the bearers. When the men saw her, they laid their burden gently down upon the carpet of yellow pine needles, and then, for they had the hearts of true men in them, they went away into the bushes and left her alone with the dead. She went swiftly to his side, making no cry; but, kneeling beside him, she stroked his face and hands and touched his curls with her fingers, murmuring all the time soft words of love.

"'Oh, my darling, my bonny, bonny darling, speak to me! Will you not speak to me just one little word? Oh, my love, my love, my heart's love! Listen, my darling!'

"And she put her lips to his ear, whispering, and then the awful stillness. Suddenly she lifted her head and scanned his face, and then, glancing round with a wild surprise in her eyes, she cried:

"'He will not speak to me! Oh, he will not speak to me!'

"I signed to the men, and as they came forward I went to her and took her hands.

"'Oh,' she said, with a wail in her voice, 'he will not speak to me!'

"The men were sobbing aloud. She looked at them with wide open eyes of wonder.

"'Why are they weeping? Will he never speak to me again? Tell me,' she insisted gently.

"The words were running through my head,

"There's a land that is fairer than day, and I said them over to her, holding her hands firmly in mine. She gazed at me as if in a dream, and the light slowly faded from her eyes as she said, tearing her hands from mine and waving them toward the mountains and the woods:

"'But never more here! Never more here!'

"I believe in heaven and the other life, but I confess that for a moment it all seemed shadowy beside the reality of this warm, bright world, full of life and love. She was very ill for two nights, and when the coffin was closed a new baby lay in the father's arms.

"She slowly came back to life, but there were no more songs. The miners still come about her shop and talk to her baby and bring her their sorrows and troubles; but, though she is always gentle, almost tender, with them, no man ever says 'Sing.' And that is why I am glad she sang last week. It will be good for her and good for them."

"Why does she stay?" I asked.

"Mavor's people wanted her to go to them," he replied.

"They have money—she told me about it—but her heart is in the grave up there under the pines, and, besides, she hopes to do something for the miners, and she will not leave them."

I am afraid I snorted a little impatiently as I said: "Nonsense! Why, with her face and manner and voice she could be anything she liked in Edinburgh or in London."

"And why Edinburgh or London?" he asked coolly.

"Why?" I repeated a little hotly. "You think this is better?"

"Nazareth was good enough for the Lord of Glory," he answered, with a smile none too bright, but it drew my heart to him, and my heat was gone.

"How long will she stay?" I asked.

"Till her work is done," he replied.

"And when will that be?" I asked impatiently.

"When God chooses," he answered gravely. "And don't you ever think but that it is worth while. One value of work is not that crowds stare at it. Read history, man!"

He rose abruptly and began to walk about.

"And don't miss the whole meaning of the life that lies at the foundation of your religion. Yes," he added to himself. "the work is worth doing, worth even her doing."

I could not think so then, but the light of the after years proved him wiser than I. A man to see far must climb to some height, and I was too much upon the plain in those days to catch even a glimpse of distant sunlit uplands of triumphant achievement that lie beyond the valley of self sacrifice.

CHAPTER V.

THE MAKING OF THE LEAGUE.

THURSDAY morning found Craig anxious, even gloomy, but with fight in every line of his face. I tried to cheer him in my clumsy way by chaffing him about his league, but he did not blaze up, as he often did. It was a thing too near his heart for that. He only shrank a little from my stupid chaff and said:

"Don't, old chap. This is a good deal to me. I've tried for two years to get this, and if it falls through now I shall find it hard to bear."

Then I repented my light words and said: "Why, the thing will go sure enough. After that scene in the church they won't go back."

"Poor fellows!" he said, as if to himself. "Whisky is about the only excitement they have, and they find it pretty tough to give it up, and a lot of them are against the total abstinence idea. It seems rot to them."

"It is pretty steep," I said. "Can't you do without it?"

"No; I fear not. There is nothing else for it. Some of them talk of compromise. They want to quit the saloon and drink quietly in their shacks. The moderate drinker may have his place in other countries, though I can't see it. I haven't thought that out, but here the only safe man is the man who quits it dead and fights it straight. Anything else is sheerest humbug and nonsense."

I had not gone in much for total abstinence up to this time, chiefly because its advocates seemed for the most part to be somewhat ill balanced, but as I listened to Craig I began to feel that perhaps there was a total abstinence side to the temperance question, and as to Black Rock, I could see how it must be one thing or the other.

We found Mrs. Mavor brave and bright. She shared Mr. Craig's anxiety, but not his gloom. Her courage was of that serene kind that refuses to believe defeat possible and lifts the spirit into the triumph of final victory. Through the past week she had been carefully disposing her forces and winning recruits, and yet she never seemed to urge or persuade the men. But as evening after evening the miners dropped into the cozy room down stairs with her talk and her songs she charmed them till they were wholly hers. She took for granted their loyalty, trusted them utterly and so made it difficult for them to be other than true men.

That night Mrs. Mavor's large storeroom, which had been fitted up with seats, was crowded with miners when Mr. Craig and I entered.

After a glance over the crowd Craig said: "There's the manager. That means war." And I saw a tall man, very fair, whose chin fell away to the vanishing point and whose hair was parted in the middle, talking to Mrs. Mavor. She was dressed in some rich, soft stuff that became her well. She was looking beautiful as ever, but there was something quite new in her manner. Her air of good fellowship was gone, and she was the high bred lady, whose gentle dignity and sweet grace, while very winning, made familiarity impossible.

The manager was doing his best and appeared to be well pleased with himself.

"She'll get him if any one can. I failed," said Craig.

I stood looking at the men, and a fine lot of fellows they were. Free, easy, bold in their bearing, they gave no sign of rudeness, and from their frequent glances toward Mrs. Mavor I could see they were always conscious of her presence. No men are so truly gentle as are the westerners in the presence of a good woman. They were evidently of all classes and ranks originally, but now and in this country of real measurements they ranked simply according to the "man" in them.

"See that handsome young chap of dissipated appearance?" said Craig. "That's Vernon Winton, an Oxford graduate, blue blood, awfully plucky, but quite gone. When he gets repentant, instead of shooting himself he comes to Mrs. Mavor. Fact."

"From Oxford university to Black Rock mining camp is something of a step," I replied.

"That queer looking little chap in the corner is Billy Breen. How in the world has he got here?" went on Mr. Craig.

Queer looking he was—a little man, with a small head set on heavy, square shoulders; long arms, and huge hands that sprawled all over his body; altogether a most ungainly specimen of humanity.

By this time Mrs. Mavor had finished with the manager and was in the center of a group of miners. Her grand air was all gone, and she was their comrade, their friend, one of themselves. Nor did she assume the role of entertainer, but rather did she, with half shy air, cast herself upon their chivalry, and they were too truly gentlemen to fail her. It is hard to make western men, and especially old timers, talk. But this gift was hers, and it stirred my admiration to see her draw on a grizzled veteran to tell how, twenty years ago, he had crossed the Great Divide and had seen and done what no longer fell to men to see or do in these new days. And so she won the old timer. But it was beautiful to see the innocent guile with which she caught Billy Breen and drew him to her corner near the organ. What she was saying I knew not, but poor Billy was protesting, waving his big hand.

The meeting came to order, with Shaw in the chair and the handsome young Oxford man secretary. Shaw stated the object of the meeting in a few halting words, but when he came to speak of the pleasure he and all felt in being together in that room his words flowed in a stream, warm and full. Then there was a pause, and Mr. Craig was called, but he knew better than to speak at that point. Finally Nixon rose hesitatingly, but as he caught a bright smile from Mrs. Mavor he straightened himself as if for a fight.

"I ain't no good at makin' speeches" he began, "but it ain't speeches we want. We've got somethin' to do, and what we want to know is how to do it. And, to be right plain, we want to know how to drive this cursed whisky out of Black Rock. You all know what it's doin' for us, at least for some of us, and it's time to stop it now, or for some of us it'll mighty soon be too late, and the only way to stop its work is to quit drinkin' it and help others to quit. I hear some talk of a league, and what I say is if it's a league out and out against whisky, a total abstinence right to the ground, then I'm with it. That's my talk. I move we make that kind of a league."

Nixon sat down amid cheers and a chorus of remarks: "Good man!" "That's the talk!" "Stay with it!" But he waited for the smile and the glance that came to him from the beautiful face in the corner, and with that he seemed content.

Again there was silence. Then the secretary rose, with a slight flush upon his handsome, delicate face, and seconded the motion. If they would pardon a personal reference, he would give them his reasons. He had come to this country to make his fortune. Now he was anxious to make enough to enable him to go home with some degree of honor. His home held everything that was dear to him. Between him and that home, between him and all that was good and beautiful and honorable, stood whisky. "I'm ashamed to confess," and the flush deepened on his cheek and his lips grew thinner, "that I feel the need of some such league." His handsome face, his perfect style of address, learned possibly in the Union, but, more than all, his show of nerve, for these men knew how to value that, made a strong impression on his audience, but there were no following cheers.

Mr. Craig appeared hopeful, but on Mrs. Mavor's face there was a look of wistful, tender pity, for she knew how much the words had cost the lad.

Then up rose a sturdy, hard featured man, with a bur in his voice that proclaimed his birth. His name was George Crawford, I afterward learned, but every one called him Geordie. He was a character in his way, fond of his glass; but, though he was never known to refuse a drink, he was never known to be drunk. He took his drink, for the most part, with bread and cheese in his own shack or with a friend or two in a sober, respectable way, but never could be induced to join the wild carousals in Slavin's saloon. He made the highest wages, but was far too true a Scot to spend his money recklessly. Every one waited eagerly to hear Geordie's mind. He spoke solemnly, as befitted a Scotsman expressing a deliberate opinion, and carefully, as if choosing his best English, for when Geordie became excited no one in Black Rock could understand him.

"Maister Chairmon," said Geordie, "I'm aye for temperance in a' things." There was a shout of laughter, at which Geordie gazed round in pained surprise. "I'll no' deny," he went on in an explanatory tone, "that I tak ma mornin' an' maybe a nip at noon an' a wee drap aifter wark in the evenin' an' whiles a sip o' toddy wi' a freen the cauld nichts, but I'm no' a guzzler, an' I dinna gang in wi' the loons flingin' aboot guid money."

"And that's thrue for ye, me bye," interrupted a rich Irish brogue, to the delight of the crowd and the amazement of Geordie, who went calmly on:

"An' I canna bide yon saloon whaur they sell sic awfu'-like stuff—it's mair like lye nor guid whisky—an' whaur ye're never sure o' yer richt change. It's an awfu'-like place. Man," and Geordie began to warm up, "ye can juist smell the sulphur when ye gang in. But I dinna care about the temperance soceeities, wi' their pledges an' havers, an' I canna see what hairm can come till a man by takin' a bottle o' guid Glenlivet hame wi' him. I canna-bide the teetotal buddies."

Geordie's speech was followed by loud applause, partly appreciative of Geordie himself, but largely sympathetic with his position.

Two or three men followed in the same strain, advocating a league for mutual improvement and social purposes, but without the teetotal pledge. They were against the saloon, but did not see why they should not take a drink now and then.

Finally the manager rose to support his "friend, Mistah—ah—Cwafoad," ridiculing the idea of a total abstinence pledge as fanatical and indeed "absuad." He was opposed to the saloon and would like to see a club formed, with a comfortable clubroom, books, magazines, pictures, games, anything, "dontcherknow, to make the time pass pleasantly," but it was "absuad to ask men to abstain fwom a pwopah use of —aw—nouwishing dwinks" because some men made beasts of themselves. He concluded by offering $50 toward the support of such a club.

The current of feeling was setting strongly against the total abstinence idea, and Craig's face was hard, and his eyes gleamed like coals. Then he did a bit of generalship. He proposed that since they had the two plans clearly before them they should take a few minutes' intermission in which to make up their minds, and he was sure they would be glad to have Mrs. Mavor sing. In the interval the men talked in groups, eagerly, even fiercely, hampered seriously in the forceful expression of their opinions by the presence of Mrs. Mavor, who glided from group to group, dropping a word here and a smile there. She reminded me of a general riding along the ranks, bracing his men for the coming battle. She paused beside Geordie, spoke earnestly for a few moments, while Geordie gazed solemnly at her, and then she came back to Billy in the corner near me. What she was saying I could not hear, but poor Billy was protesting, spreading his hands out aimlessly before him, but gazing at her the while in dumb admiration. Then she came to me.

"Poor Billy! He was good to my husband." she said softly, "and he has a good heart."

"He's not much to look at," I could not help saying.

"The oyster hides its pearl," she answered, a little reproachfully.

"The shell is apparent enough," I replied, for the mischief was in me.

"Ah, yes," she replied softly, "but it is the pearl we love."

I moved over beside Billy, whose eyes were following Mrs. Mavor as she went to speak to Mr. Craig.

"Well," I said, "you all seem to have a high opinion of her."

"An 'igh hopinion!" he replied in deep scorn. "An 'igh hopinion, you calls it!"

"What would you call it?" I asked, wishing to draw him out."

"Oi don't call it nothink," he replied, spreading out his rough hands.

"She seems very nice," I said indifferently.

He drew his eyes away from Mrs. Mavor and gave attention to me for the first time.

"Nice!" he repeated, with fine contempt, and then he added impressively, "Them as don't know shouldn't say nothink."

"You are right," I answered earnestly, "and I am quite of your opinion."

He gave me a quick glance out of his little, deepset, dark blue eyes and opened his heart to me. He told me in his quaint speech how again and again she had taken him in and nursed him and encouraged him and sent him out with a new heart for his battle until, for very shame's sake at his own miserable weakness, he had kept out of her way for many months, going steadily down.

"Now, Oi hain't got no grip, but when she says to me tonight, says she, 'Oh, Billy'—she calls me Billy to myself" (this with a touch of pride)—"'oh, Billy,' says she, 'we must 'ave a total habstinence league tonight, and Oi want you to 'elp!' and she keep's a-lookin' at me with those heyes o' hern till, if you believe me, sir," lowering his voice to an emphatic whisper, "though Oi knowed Oi couldn't 'elp none, afore Oi knowed Oi promised 'er Oi would. It's 'er heyes. When them heyes says 'do,' hup you steps and 'does.'"

I remember my first look into her eyes, and I could quite understand Billy's submission. Just as she began to sing I went over to Geordie and took my seat beside him. She began with an English slumber song, "Sleep, Baby, Sleep," one of Barry Cornwall's, I think, and then sang a love song with the refrain. "Love once again," but no thrills came to me, and I began to wonder if her spell over me was broken. Geordie, who had been listening somewhat indifferently, encouraged me, however, by saying: "She's just pittin' aff time wi' the feckless sangs. Man, there's nae grup till them." But when, after a few minutes' pause, she began "My Ain Fireside" Geordie gave a sigh of satisfaction, "Aye, that's somethin' like," and when she finished the first verse he gave me a dig in the ribs with his elbow that took my breath away, saying in a whisper, "Man, hear till yon. wull ye?" And again I found the spell upon me. It was not the voice, after all, but the great soul behind, that thrilled and compelled. She was seeing, feeling, living, what she sang, and her voice showed us her heart. The cozy fireside, with its bonny, blithe blink, where no care could abide, but only peace and love, was vividly present to her, and as she sang we saw it too. When she came to the last verse:

"When I draw in my stool
On my cozy hearthstane,
My heart loups sae licht
I scarce ken't for my ain,"

there was a feeling of tears in the flowing song, and we knew the words had brought her a picture of the fireside that would always seem empty. I felt the tears in my eyes, and, wondering at myself, I cast a stealthy glance at the men about me, and I saw that they, too, were looking through their hearts' windows upon firesides and ingle nooks that gleamed from far.

And then she sang "The Auld Hoose," and Geordie, giving me another poke, said, "That's my ain sang," and when I asked him what he meant he whispered fiercely, "Wheesht, mon!" and I did, for his face looked dangerous.

In a pause between the verses I heard Geordie saying to himself, "Aye, I maun gie it up, I doot."

"What?" I ventured.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod Liver Oil is the means of life, and enjoyment of life to thousands: men women and children.

When appetite fails, it restores it. When food is a burden, it lifts the burden.

When you lose flesh, it brings the plumpness of health.

When work is hard and duty is heavy, it makes life bright.

It is the thin edge of the wedge; the thick end is food. But what is the use of food, when you hate it, and can't digest it?

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the food that makes you forget your stomach.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

It is in the nature of the human mind that constant dwelling upon material grandeurs induces a belief in the primacy of wealth, and in the righteousness of means by which wealth is gained. It was very recently that a statesman exclaimed, in hot eloquence, and in response to one who urged fair play to Cuba: "You are on dangerous ground, sir; in your talk about mere honor, you are likely to forget our business reputation."—Henry Loomis Nelson in the June Century.

Olivet Wins Again.

For two years in succession Olivet College has won first place in the State Oratorical contest. This is a record held by no other college in Michigan. Olivet is also the only college in the state which has not failed to win a place in these annual contests for the last four years.

The interest in oratory was never greater in Olivet than at present, and the gold medal in the state contest for two successive years has given an added impetus to the work. Mr. George R. Wilson, this year's winner, is a young man but twenty years of age. He is a member of the junior class and is prominent in both athletic and society circles. He is a young orator of rare promise and is an excellent type of strong christian manhood of Olivet college.

Painfully Injured.

Yesterday morning while working in the Detroit Southern boiler works C. H. Curran was painfully injured. Three pieces of steel flew into his right eye badly cutting the ball and may prove fatal to his sight.

He left yesterday on the 10:40 train accompanied by his brother James for Adrian and allowed Dr. Morden to examine it. The steel pieces could be plainly seen in the back of the eye ball by aid of an instrument but the magnet failed to draw them out.

He left for Ann Arbor yesterday afternoon and will have the steel removed by the use of giant magnets.

LYSTER DEWEY

Writes a very Interesting Letter to his Aunt

MRS. ROBERT STRETCH

About Life in the Bahamas.

Steamship City of New York,
Nassau, N. P. Bahamas to New York
Sunday, May 18, 1902.

DEAR MRS. STRETCH:—

When I am off for a long journey, I usually find time for a letter to you. I left Washington a week ago last Thursday morning and New York that afternoon for Nassau in the Bahama Islands. It was my first experience on salt water and though in many respects novel, it was not entirely agreeable. I had comparatively little appetite for dinner that night as we were going out past Sandy Hook, where we heard some of Uncle Sam's large new guns booming away over at the proving grounds.

I felt rather tired at night, as it had been a long and wearisome day. at least I felt that I would be more comfortable snugly stowed away in my berth than swaying about on deck in the cool fresh breeze that was blowing. There were only a few passsengers aboard as there isn't much travel toward the tropics at this season. The next day out, Friday, I felt much better and was present at all meals as indeed I was at all the meals on the way down, but I did not at any time have a very fierce appetite, and on Saturday when there was sufficient breeze to make the ship roll just a little, I found it convenient to spend most of the time lying down and reading or sleeping.

Early Monday morning when I awoke I found the ship at anchor outside of Nassau harbor. Only smaller boats can cross the bar and go alongside the docks. The water was exceedingly clear and within the harbor was very beautiful in various shades of green and blue, though none of that wonderful deep liquid blue that we had found from the Gulf Stream down to the islands.

After coffee on board we were transferred from the steamship to the dock on a smaller boat. Nassau presents a very quaint and beautiful appearance from the harbor with its old stone forts, its streets running up the hill, lined with stone walls and houses of curious architecture, but most of all with its luxuriant tropical vegetation, the coconaut palms towering above the tops of the houses. It would be much more beautiful were it not for a big yellow wooden hotel built by Mr. Flagler, the Florida millionaire, squat down on the beach, where it almost jumps at one in its ugliness and where it hides all but the tower of the cathedral and many other pretty features of the place.

Most of the wharf along the sea front of the town is masonary, and I found also most of the buildings were made of large blocks of limestone quarried in the hill back of the town. The streets are also of limestone and although they are rather white and dazzling in the midday sun, they are very nice and clean.

I went to the Bahamas to learn something of the sisal (fiber) industry in the the islands and expected to come back by way of Miami, Florida. I soon learned that the principal sisal industry was centered on the island of New Providence, on which Nassau is situated and also that it would be practically impossible to return by way of Miami, as there was no means of communication between Nassau and Miami at this season.

I spent most of my time driving about from Nassau to the different sisal plantations and as the island is only about twenty miles long and seven miles wide, I visited all of them during the three and one-half days that I was there. The drives were very delightful over the hard well kept limestone roads, along the beaches, where the clear green water broke in surf over the coral rock or washed up on the sandy shore, and through the groves of cocoanut palms that gave a cool and pleasant shade even where the sun's rays were uncomfortably hot out in the open. There was always a cool and pleasant breeze blowing for we could never get very far from the sea.

I was almost sorry to leave so soon and should have stayed much longer, but there was a change in the schedule for the boat's sailing, as many of the Nassau people wished to reach New York in time for next Wednesday's steamships, which will take them over to England for the coronation of Edward VII. We have quite a pleasant company of passengers on board, including the Chief Justice of the Bahamas and one of the church of England clergymen, who conducted services on board this morning, which made us feel very much like a Sunday at sea. God reigns everywhere.

We have been favored with pleasant weather on our way home as we were going out, but on Friday night and during a part of yesterday there was a long ocean swell which gave a disagreeable motion to the boat and some of us did not appear at breakfast and luncheon. To-day it is beautifully smooth and clear and if all goes well we hope to see land again and to pass quarantine tomorrow morning. We have left behind us the beautiful blue water of the Gulf stream and the deep sea and are now sailing through water that I suppose may be properly regarded as true sea-green in color.

I left mother, Etta, Grace, Marguerite and Mary Genevieve all well when I came away and I hope to find them well when I reach home tomorrow night. With best wishes,

Yours Sincerely,
LYSTER H. DEWEY.

BASE BALL

Never in the history of Tecumseh was there so enthusiastic a base ball crowd gathered together as was at the council building Tuesday evening and the men there all decided that if money and hard work would accomplish any thing Tecumseh would have the best base ball team this year she ever had.

Manager Smith has signed for two good men already and is in correspondence with a number more. Cuyler North will be captain of the nine. The will team be gathered together as soon as possible and managed and captained to play good ball. The ball park is in first class shape this year, in fact everything is ready for fine sport and Tecumseh has such a reputation that we may expect to secure the best teams here.

Mr. George Merritt, well known business man and proprietor of the cigar manufactory, says: "I can testify to honesty and worth of Doan's Kidney Pills. There is no humbug about them. I was annoyed for some time with a dull aching pain in my back at times quite severe. I heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a box at C. A. Wright's drug store and after taking them a short time I found they were helping me. Finally the pain in my back disappeared entirely. Doan's Kidney Pills are a splendid remedy for all kidney ailments."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP

Fitzsimmons Will Try to Wrest It from Jeffries at San Francisco.

San Francisco, May 22.—James J. Jeffries, champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, and Robert Fitzsimmons met Wednesday afternoon and came to an agreement to fight. The articles of agreement will, to all practical purposes, be identical with the articles signed in New York some months ago. After the two men had announced their satisfaction with the articles, it was mutually agreed that the documents would be signed on Friday afternoon. The bid for the fight made by a San Francisco club, offering 70 per cent of the gross receipts, was the best. It was agreed that the contest should be under the auspices of that club. The date of the contest will be decided upon later, but it is generally believed July 4 will be the day determined upon.

Ed Greany, a local man, will be asked to referee the contest. Jeffries will train at Harbin Springs and Fitzsimmons at Skagg's Springs.

King Attended Bull Fight.

Madrid, May 22.—The royal bull fight, which is the most typically Spanish feature of the festivities in connection with the coming of age of King Alfonso occurred Wednesday afternoon in the presence of the king, the queen mother, the royal family, the Spanish nobles and the special envoys. Many ladies were also present. The vast amphitheater where the fight was held was crowded with 14,000 spectators.

Engineers Will Continue to Work.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 22.—The three anthracite executive committees of the United Mine Workers of America, at their joint meeting Wednesday, decided to permit the engineers, firemen and pumpmen to remain at work, provided the coal companies grant them an eight-hour day at the present wages. If these demands are not granted by June 2 the men shall then suspend work.

COULD NOT SLEEP.

No rest at night. Nervous, worried, tired all the time, The medicine that never fails.

Mr. E. Lockwood of Tecumseh, Mich., says: "For a number of years past I have been troubled with nervousness in a severe form and as a result I was sleepless and bothered with dizzy spells. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and after using the pills I am pleased to say my nerves are steadied, I sleep better and the dizzy spells are gone. I consider the pills a splendid nerve medicine.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are sold at 50c a box at dealers or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. See that portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D. are on every package.

SOLD TO A SYNDICATE.

Ann Arbor Railroad—President Burt Confirms It.

Saginaw, Mich., May 22.—President W. R. Burt of the Ann Arbor railroad arrived home from Toledo last evening. He said that the Ann Arbor has been sold to a syndicate closely allied with the Gould interest. The Wabash is not the purchaser.

New York, May 22.—President Ramsay of the Wabash railroad, says that the Ann Arbor road had not been sold to the Wabash system, but to a syndicate in close touch with that system. He said the effect of the change would be an expansion of the business and that a large share of the traffic would be diverted from the Grand Trunk railway, and would go to Buffalo.

Grand Ledge, Mich., May 22.—Solomon Potter, aged 35 years, who lived three miles from town, was found dead in his home Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. It is claimed he was in trouble with the woman whose farm he worked over a dispute as to how the eggs should be divided.

Joke Proved Fatal.

Junction City, Kan., May 22.—Mrs. W. G. Snoke, wife of Corporal Snoke of the Ninth artillery band, stationed at Fort Riley, Kan., died at her home here yesterday of burns received as the result of a joke perpetrated by her husband. Mrs. Snoke had hidden in an out-building and, in a spirit of fun, locked her husband out. Snoke poured some gasoline on the stone steps and lit it, intending to frighten her. The flames were drawn in under the door and enveloped Mrs. Snoke, who died several hours later in great agony.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parent did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops. Jessie Pinkey Hall, Springville, Ala. This remedy is for sale by J. J. Orr.

THOROUGHLY CHINESE.

Canton, the capital of the province of Kwangtung, has a population of about 2,600,000 and is one of the oldest cities in the world, and until the port of Hongkong was opened it was the export city of the empire. Its old walls and fortifications, with their old guns, are all now obsolete and entirely neglected, remaining only as monuments of departed ages. They have never been of service except as warning of danger to an invading foe and no doubt had the desired effect until the last half century.

Canton is said to be absolutely and thoroughly Chinese, and there is no other city in the empire that is more so. There it exists today, with its narrow streets, its old temples, its wealth, its extreme poverty and its peculiarly constructed buildings, and when one considers the habits and customs of its people and their achievements in the arts so characteristic of that country, its ancient history so resplendent centuries ago, unless that history is a fable, and sees there now so much that is filthy and repugnant to common decency and civilization the present state of the country needs but to be seen to be condemned.

No stranger is respected or safe from insult within its limits unless he has official or military bearing or is in care of a trusty guide—one of their own countrymen, armed with plenary license and power.

Weak?

"I suffered terribly and was extremely weak for 12 years. The doctors said my blood was all turning to water. At last I tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and was soon feeling all right again."
Mrs. J. W. Fiala, Hadlyme, Ct.

No matter how long you have been ill, nor how poorly you may be today, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine you can take for purifying and enriching the blood.

Don't doubt it, put your whole trust in it, throw away everything else.

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Ask your doctor what he thinks of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He knows all about this grand old family medicine. Follow his advice and we will be satisfied.

4,000 Marching to Port-au-Prince.

Port-au-Prince, Haiti, May 22.—The army of the north, numbering about 4,000 men, commanded by Gen. Firmin, the most formidable candidate for the presidency of Haiti, have arrived at Arcahaie, two days' march from here. The provisional government has summoned all citizens to defend the capital, and as a result the entire population of Port-au-Prince is now under arms.

What Hit Him.

Some years ago, while a gentleman was walking from St. James' park to Pall Mall on a bright afternoon in summer, he suddenly received a blow on the shoulder which caused him to stumble, and at the same time he heard a loud, crackling noise. On recovering he looked around for his assailant, but there was nobody visible except a policeman, who was many yards away.

When the gentleman reached home, his shoulder was examined, but no injury could be found to account for the pain in it. Soon afterward the servant, who had taken away his master's outdoor coat to brush it, brought back the garment and pointed out that the nap on the shoulder was pressed flat as if a hot wire had been drawn across it. Everything, in fact, pointed to the probability that the wearer had been struck by a meteor.

The incident might well be used as a blackboard lesson for children—aye, and for some grownup children, too—who imagine that "shooting stars" only shoot in the dark.—Chambers' Journal.

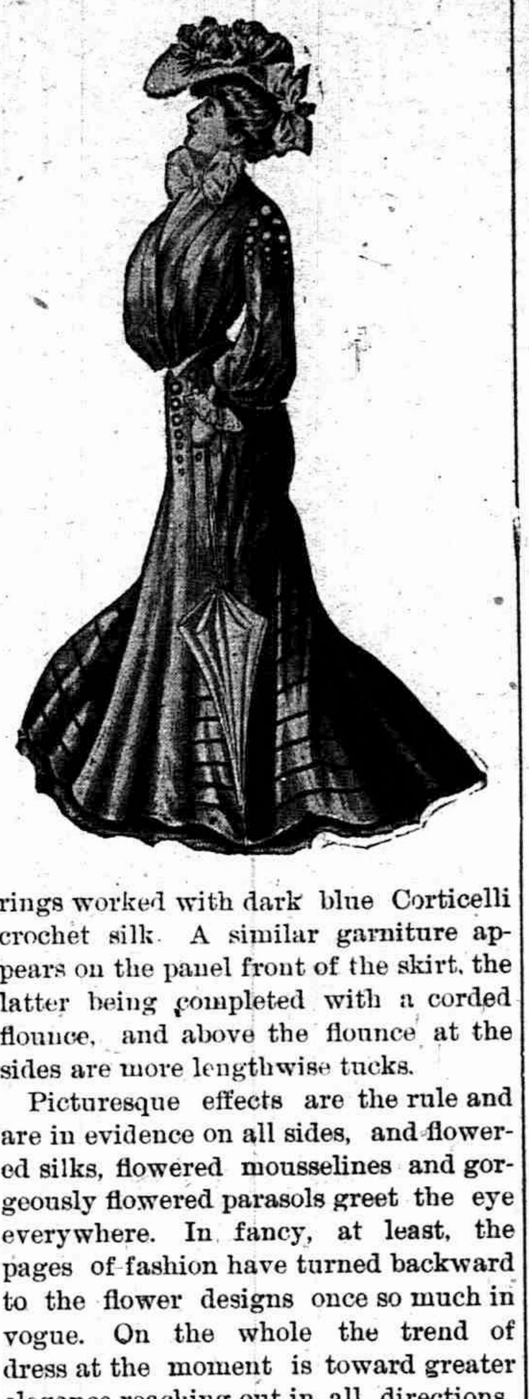
A very handsome street costume made of blue cloth is shown below. The blouse waist is tucked, with slightly overlapping front and opens over a chemisette of white chiffon The blouse sleeve is also tucked and between the tucks is a trimming of applique taffeta of graduated size framed with crochet rings worked with dark blue Corticelli crochet silk. A similar garniture appears on the panel front of the skirt, the latter being completed with a corded flounce, and above the flounce at the sides are more lengthwise tucks.



Picturesque effects are the rule and are in evidence on all sides, and flowered silks, flowered mousselines and gorgeously flowered parasols greet the eye everywhere. In fancy, at least, the pages of fashion have turned backward to the flower designs once so much in vogue. On the whole the trend of dress at the moment is toward greater elegance reaching out in all directions. The dainty mousselines in small patterns with wide and narrow borders of large flowers are in great demand.

TWO MICHIGAN MEN

Appointed by Gov. Taft to Fill Philippine Vacancies.

Washington, May 22.—Before the departure of Gov. Taft he made several appointments to vacancies in the judiciary of the Philippine islands. These appointments have been accepted by the following as judges of the courts of first instance, who will be assigned on their arrival in Manila to their several judicial districts, with salaries varying from $3,000 to $4,500 per annum:

Herbert J. Davis, Chicago; Capt. J. S. Powell, Newnan, Ga.; Wm. H. Pope, Santa Fe, N. M.; Adolph Wislizenius, St. Louis, and Charles Smith, Jackson, Mich., have accepted positions as prosecuting attorney and assistant attorney general. J. W. Bonner, Nashville, Tenn., has been tendered a position as judge of the court of first instance. James W. Beardsley, Detroit, Mich., has been appointed city engineer of Manila and consulting engineer of the Philippine commission.

CONSOLIDATION OF SCHOOLS.

Supreme Court Decides in Its Favor in the Howell Case.

Owosso, Mich., May 22.—The fact that his children were forced to walk a half mile further to school than before a change in schools was made, has cost Thomas J. Howell of Fairfield township several hundred dollars, and the county a few thousand. The consolidation of two small district schools moved both buildings to the center of the township three years ago, taking one school from Howell's neighborhood.

He brought suit against the school inspectors to compel them to undo the consolidation. The circuit court sustained the inspectors and the supreme court has just confirmed that opinion.

DID WRONG THING

Is Reviewing Authority's Opinion of Waller's Act.

SHOULDN'T EXECUTED NATIVES

Authority Approves the Findings That He Is Not Guilty of Murder—Due Allowance Is Also Made for His Illness.

Manila, May 26.—The official findings of the court-martial which tried Major L. W. T. Waller and Lieut. John H. A. Day of the marine corps for executing natives of the island of Samar without trial, have been made public. The reviewing authority of the court has expressed its disapproval of the court's findings in both cases. Referring to the case of Major Waller, the reviewing authority says: "The sending of the natives in question to their death partook more of unlawful retaliation than a justifiable act of war. In justice to the American military service, the findings of acquittal demand that they shall not meet with unqualified approval. The marines in Samar underwent great suffering before their rescue and their officers, from their sick beds, voiced the revengeful anger of the men who telephoned to Major Waller advising that the stevedores be killed. Major Waller received this message while he was sick, prostrate from a fever, suffering acute pain of body due to exposure and his exertions in behalf of his men and mental anguish concerning their fate, which had long been in doubt. Major Waller was at the time in telephonic communication with Gen. Smith, who commanded the American forces in Samar, but he deliberately chose not to consult Gen. Smith regarding his contemplated action, and, rather than forego the execution of his unrestrained will, he assumed the power the laws of war and the customs of the service confer upon commanding officers only in time of war.

"Giving heed to the mental attitude of Major Waller, as much of the findings of the court as are to the effect that Major Waller is not guilty of murder, are approved. But the reviewing authority is at a loss to understand why the court did not find against Major Waller in the minor offense. With the exception noted, the acquittal, as it appears in the record of the proceedings, is disapproved."

SIX KILLED IN STORM.

Town of Union, S. C., Struck by Fearful Tornado.

Union, S. C., May 26.—Six people were killed and several injured by a tornado which swept over this section of the state at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The main storm came from the north. It seems there was one from the southwest, and both met in this vicinity. One wing of the storm passed along Main street and blew in several store fronts, doing much damage to stocks.

Knitting Mill hill, south of the town, caught the full force of the tornado, which blew down a school house and two residences. The occupants were in one of the houses, but it went to pieces and they took refuge in another nearby, but this house was also crushed to splinters.

Jonesville reports that the storm was fearful at that place and that a member of the family of Miss Lawson, who was killed here, was one of the victims.

Pacollett also reports one killed and several injured.

Nearly a Double Tragedy.

Chicago, May 26.—Because his wife had sought the protection of her relatives, Nels Johnson, a north side politician, Sunday shot and fatally wounded Mrs. C. J. Gullacksen, his sister-in-law, and then committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. The shooting was the outcome of the separation of Johnson and his wife after a married life of 19 years. Seven years ago Johnson became interested in politics and since then he has refused to work. Last week his home was sold by the sheriff and Mrs. Johnson went to her sister's house to live. Johnson blamed Mrs. Gullacksen for the separation, and, while intoxicated and in a fit of revenge, tried to kill her.

Forty Bodies Recovered.

Victoria, B. C., May 26.—Col. Pryor received two dispatches from Fernie. In one, A. Dick, inspector of mines, says: "All bodies in No. 3 mine and high lying positions of No. 2 (49) recovered. Air turned into west division near where other bodies are." Mr. Armstrong, the government agent, says: "Forty bodies recovered; about 30 still missing; 24 escaped alive. No fire in mine. Jury impanelled last night and adjourned for a week. Everything possible being done."

Chinese Rebellion Subdued.

Pekin, May 26.—The rebellion in China province has been practically subdued, but the inhabitants of the province are complaining loudly of the forces under Yuan Shai Kai, the governor of [illegible], and allege that his soldiers, in inflicting punishments, do not distinguish between the guilty and the innocent.

Uribe Has Escaped.

Colon, Colombia, May 26.—The Colombian government received news that the insurgent generals, Uribe Uribe and Focion Soto, had arrived at Port of Spain, Trinidad, thus escaping the pursuit of the government forces commanded by Gen. Pompilio Gutierrez.

Over 1,000 Cases of Cholera.

Manila, May 26.—The cholera record to date is as follows: Manila, 1,146 cases and 613 deaths; the provinces, 8,922 caces and 2,774 deaths.

FATAL YACHT RIDE

Muskegon Craft Capsized and One Man Drowned.

TWO OTHERS WERE SAVED

Helmsman Brought Craft About Too Quickly and She Shipped Heavy Sea—Hundreds of People Witnessed the Accident.

Muskegon, Mich., May 26.—James Walsh, head waiter on the Barry line steamer Charles H. Hackley, was drowned shortly after 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon while yachting with Dr. D. M. McCall and a companion from the steamer.

The three men, when near the Interlaken park, attempted to bring the yacht about. In jibing too short the boat shipped a heavy sea, and, without warning sank, bow first. The occupants clung to the rigging, which was sticking from the water, the depth being about 35 feet.

The accident was seen by hundreds of spectators, who were on the docks lining the shore, and relief was immediately sent to the men. Before Leip could arrive Walsh was seen to let go his hold and sank. Sheriff Payne and a crew from the Hackley are engaged in dragging for the body, but it has not yet been found. Walsh was a single man, 23 years old, and hailed from Chicago.

GOLD IN MICHIGAN.

Geologist Lane Makes Explanation About Its Findings.

Lansing, Mich., May 26.—"If I were to hunt for gold in Michigan," said State Geologist Lane, "I should try the black sand along the lake shores. If that were washed in a pan as western gold diggers wash the earth, a small amount of gold might be found."

The above remark was called out by a newspaper item to the effect that residents of Eckford township, Calhoun county, were greatly excited over an alleged gold find in that township.

"It is not improbable," concluded Dr. Lane, "that they have found a small quantity of gold. Some quartz or gold-bearing rock might easily have drifted down from Canada in past ages and now come to the surface and cause great excitement. Why, they found a genuine diamond at Buchanan once, and no doubt a few more might be found in the state if one knew where to look for them."

Charity Conferences.

Detroit, Mich., May 26.—Beginning today and running through Wednesday, will be held in Detroit the National Conference of Jewish Charities, the second biennial meeting. The closing words will hardly be spoken when the National Conference of Charities and Corrections will open a week's session of deliberation and discussion along the same line, and an opportunity will be given to those who attend the first conference to attend the second.

To Form Big Opera Company.

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 26.—Aubrey Mittenthal of Mittenthal Bros., theatrical managers of this city, sailed from New York on the steamer Allen for Florence, Italy, for the purpose of closing contracts with a number of the leading European singers and organizing an Italian grand opera company, which will be brought to this country next fall and toured in the big cities. It is expected to equal Grau's organization.

More Rural Free Delivery.

Washington, May 26.—Additional free delivery to commence July 1: Otisville, Genesee county, two carriers, population served 1,606, number of houses on routes, 357; Royal Oak, Oakland county, two carriers, population served 1,629, number of houses on routes 362. J. S. Carr has been appointed a rural free delivery mail carrier at Kalamazoo.

Body at Last Found.

Houghton, Mich., May 26.—The body of Mollaren, a farmer from Highway, was found in Portage Lake Saturday. Mollaren visited relatives at Huron town last fall and left at night to walk home. Since then all efforts to trace him have failed until the discovery of the body. Death was thought to be accidental.

June 14 Is Flag Day.

Lansing, Mich., May 26.—Commander Van Kleeck of the Michigan G. A. R., has issued a special order to the posts of the state recommending the general observance of June 14 as flag day.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Skat in Detroit.—Some 800 faithful followers of skat, representing the North American Skat league, are assembled in Detroit this week for their annual tournament.

Speedy on the Wabash.—A Wabash special Sunday night from Montpelier, O., to Detroit, a distance of 97 miles, made the trip in the remarkably short time of 88 minutes.

Saw His Leg Cut Off.—Emil Cedar of Menominee is certainly a man of great nerve. He had his right foot and toes on his left foot amputated, but would take no opiates. He calmly watched the physicians cutting the members off.

Wholesale Vaccinating.—The city of Marinette ordered all persons vaccinated free. The city secured six doctors, who will go from house to house and vaccinate nearly all residents of the town. There are 22 cases of smallpox in Marinette, and it has been spreading the last few days. Most of it was brought down by men from the drives.

Bodies Turned to Stone.

Human bodies buried in limestone countries are often turned to solid stone by the limewater which penetrates the graves. In other soils there are elements which sometimes so embalm the buried dead as to preserve form and features unchanged. Many such cases are on record. Robert Burns' body was disinterred in 1815 to be removed to a new tomb. To the surprise of all his friends the features were found to be as perfect as at burial. When the body of John Hampden, the famous English patriot and leader, was disinterred by Lord Nugent 200 years after burial, the form and features were as unchanged as if the corpse had been recently laid

END OF BOER WAR

Is Practically a Settled Question in London.

DELAY IS ONLY TECHNICAL

Authentic Dispatches at Berlin State the Articles of Surrender Are Ready to be Signed—Pretoria Dispatch Reports Outlook Cheerful.

London, May 24.—The Associated Press has every reason to believe that peace in South Africa is practically secured. How soon it will be announced depends apparently more upon the convenience of Boer leaders than the inclination of the British government. The private and official dispatches received last night in London from South Africa all point to the same conclusion. The delay is technical, and to end the long war seems to be the desire of both British and Boer leaders. The latter, however, are unable to convince all their followers of the wisdom of acquiescing to the terms of peace.

Information as to what transpired at Friday's meeting of the cabinet is closely guarded, but it is not likely that the cabinet transactions were of vital import. The surmise of one well-informed person places the sum total of the deliberations of the cabinet ministers at a decision regarding points of the peace agreement of entirely minor importance.

Another surmise it that the cabinet has merely sent a rather mock ultimatum to South Africa, which can be used by the Boer leaders in explanation to their forces. Both these surmises probably contain an element of truth, but neither can in any way affect the widespread belief in the best informed quarters that the end of the war has come. In fact, those persons who are best acquainted with the actual details of the present negotiations only qualify this optimistic expression of opinion by guarded reservations concerning the extent of the personal control of the Boer leaders over their commands.

The delegates at Vereeniging, according to information in possession of the war offices, are fairly evenly divided. Consequently extreme precautions are exercised both in London and Pretoria to prevent any premature action or report which might adversely influence the burghers.

Articles Ready to be Signed.

Berlin, May 24.—The foreign office here has been advised from Pretoria that peace in South Africa is practically concluded. The articles of surrender are ready to be signed with the exception that the approval of the British cabinet of the wording of the secondary provisions is awaited. The suspension of hostilities may be announced at any hour. This intelligence it is said, reached Baron von Richthofen, the foreign secretary, through a private cipher telegram from the German consul at Pretoria.

Cheerful Outlook at Pretoria.

Pretoria, May 24.—The feeling here, which has been decidedly pessimistic for several days, is now more cheerful, though no real news of the conferences between Lord Kitchener and Lord Milner and the Boer delegates has been allowed to leak out.

Car Ran Away—Two Killed.

Easton, Pa., May 24.—Two men were killed and many men and women injured in a trolley wreck a few miles beyond Easton at midnight Thursday. An Eastern & Nazareth car left this city shortly before midnight carrying 89 passengers. On a steep hill in Palmer township the brakes refused to work and the car ran away, descending the incline at a terrific rate of speed. At the foot of the hill there is a sharp curve. Here the car jumped the track and, tearing loose from the trucks, fell on its side in the country road.

"Young Corbett" Still Holds Belt.

Denver, May 24.—Wm. H. Rothwell, better known to the sporting world as "Young Corbett," gained the decision over "Kid" Broad of Cleveland, O., at the end of a fast and furious fight last night. Broad put up a very good fight, and in the ninth round had Corbett groggy, but the Denver lad came back strong and finished the round fresh. At no time was there any time lost, both men being willing to lead and force the fighting whenever necessary. The fight last night was the third time this pair has met.

Iowa got a Drenching.

St. Paul, May 24.—The entire northeastern portion of Iowa is half submerged by the cloudburst of Wednesday, and heavy financial losses have resulted. Two lives are reported lost at Decorah, one an infant and the other an old man. All running streams were out of their banks in 30 minutes Streets became impassable and walking was impossible owing to the gale which accompanied the storms. The damage at Decorah is estimated at $600,000.

One on Chicago.

Washington, May 24.—Bishop Thoburn continued his testimony before the Philippine committee of the senate yesterday. He said that England had advanced civilization in the far east, that Hong Kong was better governed than Chicago, and human life was safer there than in Chicago. He said the United States had more rights in the Philippines than it had over the American Indians, because the islands were acquired by treaty.

Killed Him in Self-Defense.

Pittsburg, May 24.—Joseph Pearson a horse jockey, was shot and instantly killed by his wife Louise at the latter's home in Esplen borough. He was in the act of braining her with a hatchet when the woman, warned of his intentions, fired point blank at his head. Pearson fell a corpse at the feet of his wife.

Tolstoi is Worse.

St. Petersburg, May 26.—A telegram from Yalta, Crimea, announces that Count Tolstoi's condition has suddenly become worse.

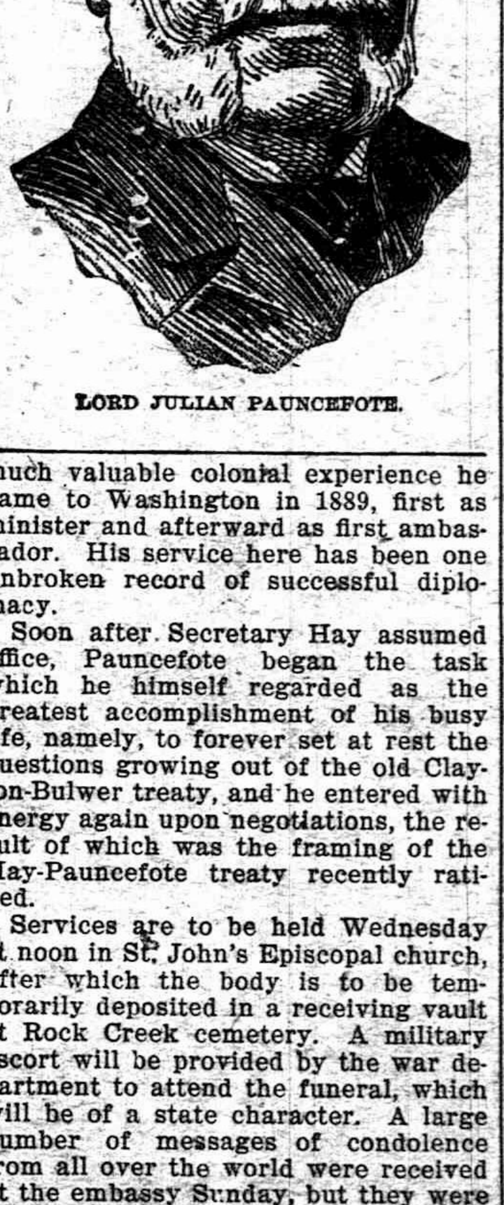
ENGLAND'S AMBASSADOR DEAD.

Lord Pauncefote Passes Away After Long Illness.

Washington, May 26.—Lord Pauncefote, British ambassador to the United States, died at the embassy Saturday morning at 5:35 o'clock, after an illness of several weeks.

The Right Honorable Lord Pauncefote of Preston, G. C. B., C. C. M. G., first ambassador to the United States and dean of the diplomatic corps in Washington, was born in Munich, Bavaria, 74 years ago, and was the issue of one of the most ancient of British families, whose history is founded in the Doomsday book.

Educated as a lawyer, his governmental service began in Hong Kong as attorney-general in 1865, and after much valuable colonial experience he came to Washington in 1889, first as minister and afterward as first ambassador. His service here has been one unbroken record of successful diplomacy.



LORD JULIAN PAUNCEFOTE.

Soon after Secretary Hay assumed office, Pauncefote began the task which he himself regarded as the greatest accomplishment of his busy life, namely, to forever set at rest the questions growing out of the old Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and he entered with energy again upon negotiations, the result of which was the framing of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty recently ratified.

Services are to be held Wednesday at noon in St. John's Episcopal church, after which the body is to be temporarily deposited in a receiving vault at Rock Creek cemetery. A military escort will be provided by the war department to attend the funeral, which will be of a state character. A large number of messages of condolence from all over the world were received at the embassy Sunday, but they were not made public.

DENMARK RECEIVES LOUBET.

French President Made a Stop-Over There Sunday.

Copenhagen, May 26.—President Loubet, who, after his visit to the czar of Russia, left Cronstadt May 23 for France on the French cruiser Montcalm, landed here Sunday. President Loubet was transferred to the torpedo boat destroyer Cassini, which accompanied the Montcalm. King Christian, the Danish crown prince, and the members of the royal family embarked on a launch and were taken to the Cassini, where the king was greeted by the president of France. The king and the president then came ashore in the royal launch and were driven, amid the cheers of the people, to the Amalienborg castle, where luncheon was served to the royal family and the French visitors. Complimentary toasts were exchanged between the king and president. Later King Christian and M. Loubet together drove about Copenhagen and then returned. The visitors, accompanied by the king and the Danish princes, were then conveyed to the Cassini, where the farewells were said.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

BLACK ROCK

By RALPH
CONNOR

"Naethin' ava." And then he added impatiently, "Mon, but ye're an inqueesitive buddie," after which I subsided into silence.

Immediately upon the meeting being called to order Mr. Craig made his speech, and it was a fine bit of work. Beginning with a clear statement of the object in view, he set in contrast the two kinds of leagues proposed—one a league of men who would take whisky in moderation, the other a league of men who were pledged to drink none themselves and to prevent in every honorable way others from drinking. There was no long argument, but he spoke at white heat, and as he appealed to the men to think, each not of himself alone, but of the others as well, the yearning born of his long months of desire and toil vibrated in his voice and reached to the heart. Many men looked uncomfortable and uncertain, and even the manager looked none too cheerful.

At this critical moment the crowd got a shock. Billy Breen shuffled out to the front and, in a voice shaking with nervousness and emotion, began to speak, his large, coarse hands wandering tremulously about:

"Oi hain't no bloomin' temperance horator, and mayhap Oi hain't no right to speak 'ere; but Oi got somethin' to saigh, and Oi'm a-goin' to saigh it.

"Parson, 'e says, 'Is it wisky or no wisky in this 'ere club?' If ye hask me, wich ye don't, then no wisky, says Oi, and if ye hask why, look at me! Once Oi could mine more coal than hany man in the camp; now Oi hain't fit to be a sorter. Once Oi 'ad some pride and hambition; now Oi 'angs round a-waitin' for some one to saigh, ''Ere, Billy, 'ave summat.' Once Oi made good paigh and sent it 'ome regular to my poor old mother. She's in the wukus now, she is. Oi hain't sent 'er hany for a year and a 'alf. Once Billy was a good fellow and 'ad plenty o' friends; now Slavin 'isself kicks un hout, 'e does. Why? Why?" His voice rose to a shriek. "Because when Billy 'ad money in 'is pocket hevery man in this bloomin' camp as meets un at hevery corner says, ''Ello, Billy, wat'll ye 'ave?' And there's wisky at Slavin's, and there's wisky in the shacks, and hevery 'oliday and hevery Sunday there's wisky, and w'en ye feel bad it's wisky, and w'en ye feel good it's wisky, and heverywhere and halways it's wisky, wisky, wisky! And now ye're goin' to stop it, and 'ow? The manager, 'e says picters and magazines. 'E takes 'is wine and 'is beer like a gentleman, 'e does, and 'e don't 'ave no use for Billy Breen. Billy, 'e's a beast, and the manager, 'e kicks un hout. But supposin' Billy wants to stop bein' a beast and starts a-tryin' to be a man again, and w'en 'e gets good an' dry along comes some un and says, ''Ello, Billy, 'ave a smile?' it hain't picters nor magazines 'ud stop un then. Picters and magazines! Gawd 'elp the man as hain't nothink but picters and magazines to 'elp un w'en 'e's got a devil hinside and a devil houtside a-shovin' and a-drawin' of un down to 'ell. And that's w'ere Oi'm a-goin' straight, and yer bloomin' league, wisky or no wisky, can't 'elp me. But," and he lifted his trembling hands above his head, "if ye stop the wisky a-flowin' round this camp ye'll stop some of these lads that's a-followin' me 'ard. Yes, you, and you, and you!" And his voice rose to a wild scream as he shook a trembling finger at one and another.

"Mon, it's fair grewsome tae hear him," said Geordie. "He's no' canny." And, reaching out for Billy as he went stumbling past, he pulled him down to a seat beside him, sayin: "Sit doon, lad; sit doon. We'll mak a mon o' ye yet." Then he rose and, using many r's, said, "Maister Chairmon, a' doot we'll juist hae to gie it up."

"Give it up?" called out Nixon. "Give up the league?"

"Na, na, lad, but juist the wee drap whusky. It's nae that guid onyway, and it's a terrible price. Mon, gin ye gang tae Henderson's in Buchanan street, in Gleska, ye ken, ye'll get mair for three an' saxpence than ye wull at Slavin's for $5, an' it'll no' pit ye mad like yon stuff, but it gangs doon smooth an' saft-like. But," regretfully, "ye'll no' can get it here, an' I'm thinkin' I'll juist sign yon teetotal thing." And up he strode to the table and put his name down in the book Craig had ready. Then to Billy he said: "Come awa, lad! Pit yer name doon, an' we'll stan' by ye."

Poor Billy looked around helplessly, his nerve all gone, and sat still. There was a swift rustle of garments, and Mrs. Mavor was beside him and, in a voice that only Billy and I could hear, said:

"You'll sign with me, Billy?"

Billy gazed at her with a hopeless look in his eyes and shook his little head. She leaned slightly toward him, smiling brightly, and, touching his arm gently, said:

"Come, Billy: there's no fear," and in a lower voice, "God will help you."

As Billy went up, following Mrs. Mavor close, a hush fell on the men until he had put his name to the pledge. Then they came up, man by man, and signed. But Craig sat with his head down till I touched his shoulder. He took my hand and held it fast, saying over and over, under his breath:

"Thank God! Thank God!"

And so the league was made.

CHAPTER VI.

BLACK ROCK RELIGION.

When I grow weary with the conventions of religion and sick in my soul from feeding upon husks that the churches too often offer me in the shape of elaborate service and eloquent discourses, so that in my sickness I doubt and doubt, then I go back to the communion in Black Rock and the days preceding it, and the fever and the weariness leave me, and I grow humble and strong. The simplicity and rugged grandeur of the faith, the humble gratitude of the rough men I see about the table and the calm radiance of one saintly face rest and recall me.

Not its most enthusiastic apologist would call Black Rock a religious community, but it possessed in a marked degree that eminent Christian virtue of tolerance. All creeds, all shades of religious opinion, were allowed, and it was generally conceded that one was as good as another. It is fair to say, however, that Black Rock's catholicity was negative rather than positive. The only religion objectionable was that insisted upon as a necessity. It never occurred to any one to consider religion other than as a respectable if not ornamental addition to life in older lands.

During the weeks following the making of the league, however, this negative attitude toward things religious gave place to one of keen investigation and criticism. The indifference passed away and with it in a large measure the tolerance. Mr. Craig was responsible for the former of these changes, but hardly in fairness could he be held responsible for the latter. If any one more than another was to be blamed for the rise of intolerance in the village, that man was Geordie Crawford. He had his "lines" from the Established Kirk of Scotland, and when Mr. Craig announced his intention of having the sacrament of the Lord's supper observed Geordie produced his lines and handed them in. As no other man in the village was equipped with like spiritual credentials, Geordie constituted himself a kind of kirk session, charged with the double duty of guarding the entrance to the Lord's table and of keeping an eye upon the theological opinions of the community and more particularly upon such members of it as gave evidence of possessing any opinions definite enough for statement.

It came to be Mr. Craig's habit to drop into the leagueroom and toward the close of the evening to have a short Scripture lesson from the gospels. Geordie's opportunity came after the meeting was over and Mr. Craig had gone away. The men would hang about and talk the lesson over, expressing opinions favorable, or unfavorable, as appeared to them good. Then it was that all sorts of views, religious and otherwise, were aired and examined. The originality of the ideas, the absolute disregard of the authority of church or creed, the frankness with which opinions were stated and the forcefulness of the language in which they were expressed combined to make the discussions altogether marvelous. The passage between Abe Baker, the stage driver, and Geordie was particularly rich. It followed upon a very telling lesson on the parable of the Pharisee and the publican.

The chief actors in that wonderful story were transferred to the Black Rock stage and were presented in miner's costume. Abe was particularly well pleased with the scoring of the "blanked old rooster who crowed so blanked high" and somewhat incensed at the quiet remark interjected by Geordie that "it was nae credit till a mon tae be a sinner," and when Geordie went on to urge the importance of right conduct and respectability Abe was led to pour forth vials of contemptuous wrath upon the Pharisees and hypocrites who thought themselves better than other people. But Geordie was quite unruffled and lamented the ignorance of men who, brought up in the "Epeescopawlyun or Methody" church, could hardly be expected to detect the Antinomian or Arminian heresies.

"Aunty Nomyun or Uncle Nomyun," replied Abe, boiling hot, "my mother was a Methodist, and I'll back any blanked Methodist against any blankety blank long faced, lantern jawed, skinflint Presbyterian!" And this he was eager to maintain to any man's satisfaction if he would step aside.

Geordie was quite unmoved, but hastened to assure Abe that he meant no disrespect to his mother, who, he had "nae doot, was a clever enough buddie, tae judge by her son." Abe was speedily appeased and offered to set up the drinks all round, but Geordie, with evident reluctance, had to decline, saying, "Na, na, lad; I'm a league man, ye ken." And I was sure that Geordie at that moment felt that membership in the league had its drawbacks.

Nor was Geordie too sure of Craig's orthodoxy, while, as to Mrs. Mavor, whose slave he was, he was in the habit of lamenting her doctrinal condition:

"She's a fine wumman, nae doot; but, puir cratur, she's fair carried awa' wi' the errors o' the Epeescopawlyuns."

It fell to Geordie, therefore, as a sacred duty, in view of the laxity of those who seemed to be the pillars of the church, to be all the more watchful and unyielding, but he was delightfully inconsistent when confronted with particulars. In conversation with him one night after one of the meetings, when he had been specially hard upon the ignorant and godless, I innocently changed the subject to Billy Breen, whom Geordie had taken to his shack since the night of the league. He was very proud of Billy's success in the fight against whisky, the credit of which he divided evenly between Mrs. Mavor and himself.

"He's fair daft aboot her," he explained to me, "an' I'll no deny but she's a great help—aye, a verra conseederable asseestance—but, mon, she doesna ken the whusky an' the inside o' a mon that's wantin' it. Aye, puir buddie, she diz her pairt, an' when ye're a bit restless an' thrawn aifter yer day's wark it's like a walk in a bonny glen on a simmer eve, with the birds liltin' about, tae sit in yon roomie an' hear her sing. But when the night is on an' ye canna sleep, but wauken wi' an' awfu' thurst an' wi' dreams o' cozy firesides an' the bonny sparklin' glosses, as it is wi' puir Billy—aye, it's then ye need a mon wi' a guid grip beside ye."

"What do you do then, Geordie?" I asked.

"Oo, aye, I juist gang for a bit walk wi' the lad an' then pits the kettle on an' makes a cup o' tea or coffee, an' aff he gangs tae sleep like a bairn."

"Poor Billy!" I said pityingly. "There is no hope for him in the future, I fear."

"Hoot awa, mon!" said Geordie quickly. "Ye wadna keep oot a puir crater frae creepin' in that's daein' his best?"

"But, Geordie," I remonstrated, "he doesn't know anything of the doctrines. I don't believe he could give us 'the chief end of man.'"

"An' wha's tae blame for that?" said Geordie, with fine indignation. "An' maybe you remember the prood Pharisee an' the puir wumman that cam' creepin' in ahint the Maister."

The mingled tenderness and indignation in Geordie's face were beautiful to see, so I meekly answered:

"Well, I hope Mr. Craig won't be too strict with the boys."

Geordie shot a suspicious glance at me, but I kept my face like a summer morn, and he replied cautiously:

"Aye, he's no' that streect, but he maun exerceese discreemination."

Geordie was none the less determined, however, that Billy should "come forrit," but as to the manager, who was a member of the English church, and some others who had been confirmed years ago and had forgotten much and denied more, he was extremely doubtful and expressed himself in very decided words to the minister:

But Mr. Craig looked at him for a moment and said, "'Him that cometh unto me I will in nowise cast out.'" and Geordie was silent, though he continued doubtful.

With all these somewhat fantastic features, however, there was no mistaking the earnest spirit of the men. The meetings grew larger every night, and the interest became more intense. The singing became different. The men no longer simply shouted, but as Mr. Craig would call attention to the sentiment of the hymn the voices would attune themselves to the words. Instead of encouraging anything like emotional excitement Mr. Craig seemed to fear it.

"These chaps are easily stirred up," he would say, "and I am anxious that they should know exactly what they are doing. It is far too serious a business to trifle with."

Although Graeme did not go down stairs to the meetings, he could not but feel the throb of the emotion beating in the heart of the community. I used to detail for his benefit and sometimes for his amusement the incidents of each night, but I never felt quite easy in dwelling upon the humorous features in Mrs. Mavor's presence, although Craig did not appear to mind. His manner with Graeme was perfect. Openly anxious to win him to his side, he did not improve the occasion and vex him with exhortation. He would not take him at a disadvantage, though, as I afterward found, this was not his sole reason for his method. Mrs. Mavor, too, showed herself in a wise and tender light. She might have been his sister, so frank was she and so openly affectionate, laughing at his fretfulness and soothing his weariness.

Never were better comrades than we four, and the bright days speeding so swiftly on drew us nearer to one another. But the bright days came to an end, for Graeme, when once he was able to go about, became anxious to get back to the camp. And so the last day came, a day I remember well. It was a bright, crisp winter day.

The air was shimmering in the frosty light. The mountains, with their shining heads piercing through the light clouds into that wonderful blue of the western sky and their feet pushed into the pine masses, gazed down upon Black Rock with calm, kindly looks on their old gray faces. How one grows to love them, steadfast old friends! Far up among the pines we could see the smoke of the engine at the works, and so still and so clear was the mountain air that we could hear the puff of the steam and from far down the river the murmur of the rapids. The majestic silence, the tender beauty, the peace, the loneliness, too, came stealing in upon us as we three, leaving Mrs. Mavor behind us, marched arm in arm down the street. We had not gone far on our way when Graeme, turning round, stood a moment looking back, then waved his hand in farewell. Mrs. Mavor was at her window, smiling and waving in return. They had grown to be great friends, these two, and seemed to have arrived at some understanding. Certainly Graeme's manner to her was not that he bore to other women. His half quizzical, somewhat superior, air of mocking devotion gave place to a simple, earnest, almost tender, respect, very new to him, but very winning.

As he stood there waving his farewell I glanced at his face and saw for a moment what I had not seen for years, a faint flush on Graeme's cheek and a light of simple, earnest faith in his eyes. It reminded me of my first look of him when he had come up for his matriculation to the varsity. He stood on the campus looking up at the noble old pile, and there was the same bright, trustful, earnest look on his boyish face.

I know not what spirit possessed me—it may have been the pain of the memory working in me—but I said coarsely enough:

"It's no use, Graeme, my boy. I would fall in love with her myself, but there would be no chance even for me."

The flush slowly darkened as he turned and said deliberately:

"It's not like you, Connor, to be an ass of that peculiar kind. Love! Not exactly! She won't fall in love unless"— And he stopped abruptly, with his eyes upon Craig.

But Craig met him with unshrinking gaze, quietly remarking, "Her heart is under the pines." And we moved on, each thinking his own thoughts and guessing at the thoughts of the others.

We were on our way to Craig's shack, and as we passed the saloon Slavin stepped from the door with a salutation. Graeme paused.

"Hello, Slavin! I got rather the worst of it, didn't I?"

Slavin came near and said earnestly:

"It was a dirty trick altogether. You'll not think it was mine, Mr. Graeme."

"No, no, Slavin. You stood up like a man," said Graeme cheerfully.

"And you beat me fair, and, bedad, it was a neat one that laid me out, and there's no grudge in my heart till you."

"All right, Slavin. We'll perhaps understand each other better after this."

"And that's true for you, sir, and I'll see that your boys don't get any more than they ask for," replied Slavin, backing away.

"And I hope that won't be much," put in Mr. Craig, but Slavin only grinned.

When we came back to Craig's shack, Graeme was glad to rest in the big chair.

Craig made him a cup of tea, while I smoked, admiring much the deft neatness of the minister's housekeeping and the gentle, almost motherly, way he had with Graeme.

In our talk we drifted into the future, and Craig let us see what were his ambitions. The railway was soon to come. The resources were as yet unexplored, but enough was known to assure a great future for British Columbia. As he talked his enthusiasm grew and carried us away. With the eye of a general he surveyed the country, fixed the strategic points which the church must seize upon. Eight good men would hold the country from Fort Steele to the coast and from Kootenai to Caribou.

"The church must be in with the railway. She must have a hand in the shaping of the country. If society crystallizes without her influence, the country is lost, and British Columbia will be another trapdoor to the bottomless pit."

"What do you propose?" I asked.

"Organizing a little congregation here in Black Rock."

"How many will you get?"

"Don't know."

"Pretty hopeless business," I said.

"Hopeless! Hopeless!" he cried. "There were only twelve of us at first to follow him, and rather a poor lot they were. But he braced them up, and they conquered the world."

"But surely things are different," said Graeme.

"Things? Yes, yes, but he is the same."

His face had an exalted look, and his eyes were gazing into faraway places.

"A dozen men in Black Rock, with some real grip of him, would make things go. We'll get them, too," he went on in growing excitement. "I believe in my soul we'll get them."

"Look here, Craig. If you organize, I'd like to join," said Graeme impulsively. "I don't believe much in your creed or your church, but I'll be blowed if I don't believe in you."

Craig looked at him with wistful eyes and shook his head.

"It won't do, old chap, you know, I can't hold you. You've got to have a grip of some one better than I am, and then, besides, I hardly like asking you now." He hesitated. "Well, to be out and out, this step must be taken not for my sake or for any man's sake, and I fancy that perhaps you feel like pleasing me just now a little."

"That I do, old fellow," said Graeme, putting out his hand. "I'll be hanged if I won't do anything you say."

"That's why I won't say," replied Craig. Then reverently he added: "The organization is not mine. It is my Master's."

"When are you going to begin?" asked Graeme.

"We shall have our communion service in two weeks, and that will be our roll call."

"How many will answer?" I asked doubtfully.

"I know of three," he said quietly.

"Three! There are 200 miners and 150 lumbermen. Three!" And Graeme looked at him in amazement. "You think it worth while to organize three?"

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

"If you want to down the beef trust said a man who is engaged in the fruit trade, 'don't eat meat. Eat bananas instead. I am not joking; I'm serious. The banana as a staple article of food has been too long neglected by the people of our zone. I traveled across Nicaragua once, and I practically lived on bananas, prepared in the various ways for which the natives are famous. It may surprise you to know that the banana is the king-pin of the vegetable world, so far as nutrition is concerned. It is twenty-five times as nutritious as wheat of the same weight, has forty-five times the nutriment of potatoes and thirty times that of rice, the three staple vegetable products of the world. These figures are the result of scientific investigation. It is time that we turned our attention to the banana. We might profitably take a few lessons in preparing the fruit for the table from our southern neighbors."—Philadelphia Record.

LITERARY NOTES

Louis Pasteur is the subject of a fine biographical sketch by Ida M. Tarbell in the June McClure's. The work of this great man can be understood only in relation to his life; and no better brief account than this has been given to English readers of the great scientist who counted his work good only as it might aid in the alleviation of human suffering and redound to the glory of France.

* * *

Patriotic societies will be interested in Mrs. John King Van Rensselaer's tale, half fact, half fiction, called "The First Love of Aaron Burr" which appears in the June Lippincott. It relates the romantic adventures of Margaret Moncrieffe, whose love love for Burr was awakened in the house of old General Putman, where the British spy and the American gallant happened to be quartered together in New York.

The June Atlantic offers an unusually long and varied line of especially seasonable contents. The series of outdoor papers which began in the May number with John Corbin's The Modern Chivalry, is continued with a brilliant paper on Golf by Wm. Garrott Brown; it will be followed in July by an item on Sailing, by W. J. Henderson of the New York Times. Llinos Eglinton gives a charming description of The Nightingale's song, rendering the vocal melody also into musical notation.

Bargain—A ludicrous transaction, in which each party thinks he has cheated the other.

ROUND ABOUT US.

The new cheese factory here is now receiving about 2,000 pounds of milk daily. Pretty good for a "starter," as this quantity will greatly increase as the farmers find out how much more profitable it is to have their milk converted into cheese than it is to make butter.—Petersburg Sun.

Ed. Frensdorf, who is described by the Morenci Observer as a "gallant bachelor, leading young Democrat and successful wool operator," contributed a very timely and forceful article to last week's issue of that paper. He advocates the passage of a "pure goods law," which would have the same effect on the manufacturer of shoddy goods that the pure food law has on the adulterator of food stuffs.

A rather quick change of mind occurred in one of the justice's courts this week—though not so quick as to seem strange to one who knows some of the fair sex. A young couple resplendent in wedding clothes got themselves a license Tuesday afternoon and hied themselves over to the justice's office to get tied. When they stood up and it came to the sink or swim part of the ceremony the would be bride refused to sink and declared point blank that she wouldn't be guilty of marrying the blushing swain before her. He couldn't say anything and she wouldn't say much so they got into their carriage and rode out of town with not a word said.—Monroe Commercial.

A young couple from Fairfield went to Adrian last week and procured a marriage license, requesting great secrecy from the clerk. A wag happened to be in an adjoining room, and by dint of inquires ascertained their names, then proceeded to a tin shop near by, procured a sheet of the metal and painted thereon: "We're going to be maried or bust." This was tied to the buggy and the party drove back six miles and appeared before the parson with their license. The ceremony was performed and as they stepped into the buggy the elder called attention to the tin announcement. The young man carefully removed the tin and will have it framed and placed over the door in place of the usual 'God Bless our Home."—Hudson Gazette.

We are an ardent believer in signs and omens. It is an ill omen to stumble when crossing a track in front of an express train. Falling against an active buzz saw is the worst possible luck; it frequently precedes an accident of some sort. To walk out of a fourth story window in one's sleep is an almost unfailing sign of approaching death. No man with an atom of superstition in his make-up should go to sleep at the junction of two railroad lines. Stopping a descending pile driver with the hands is a sign of mutilation. Arsenic, taken in large quantities, is believed to have a marked effect upon the taker's future life. To meet a bull in the middle of a lot, while wearing red, signifies you will soon rise in world. It is unlucky to sleep out of doors in such a position that the full moon will shine in your face when the temperature is below zero. Wearing a crash suit during a blizzard, unless accompanied by a rabbit's foot, is apt to cause a malignant spell on the lungs.—Patroit.

Thomas Rabbit, a wealthy farmer bachelor living at Dexter, was found hanging by the neck in his barn last week, having been dead some time. He had been in poor health, and not having any wife or children to sympathize with or comfort him, realized that he had lived in vain probably, and having nothing better in prospect, hung himself. This is a terrible warning to old bachelors.—Adrian Press.

RECEPTION

Seniors Prove Themselves ROYAL ENTERTAINERS

A Merry Time Indulged In by all.

A merry crowd of juniors and seniors gathered at the home of Adelbert Mills Friday evening, which place the seniors had chosen to hold the reception for their fellow-students, the juniors.

The colors of both classes were artistically placed about the several rooms, the violet and lemon occupying as much prominence as the black and gold. Each guest upon entering the reception room, submitted to having the name of some noted man placed upon his back, which name he was supposed to guess.

Luncheon was served about 11:30 o'clock, covers being laid for about 45, throughout the several courses the junior colors, violet and lemon, together with the seniors, black and red were blended together, the branches of green overhead, the colors of the two classes in harmony with the different tinted gowns, made a very pretty sight. At each table the seniors had placed neat little souvinirs, which all present were not slow in accepting.

Everyone present seemed bent upon having a good time, even the elements seemed to take upon themselves their particular mode of making merry, much to the displeasure of those present, who at every new antic, would seem visibly agitated. Nevertheless, these troubles were soon forgotten and the merry making continued with renewed force. It was not until a late hour that the guests began taking their departure.

The reception as a whole was a delightful affair, thoroughly enjoyed by all and brought to a successful close by the class of '02, in fact the seniors will ever occupy a place in the memories of the juniors, who next year will hold the same place of honor that their fellow classmates are now holding. The catering was done by Mrs. Campbell.

A bolt of unchained lightning played a queer prank in the woods of Leander Fix of Frenchtown. It landed in a tall tree, splitting it lengthwise. The better half remained standing, but the other was smashed into kindling wood, except a piece about 25 feet long which was hurled against another tree and wound itself round the trunk like a Dundee necktie.—Monroe Democrat.

Burt Hammond last Thursday delivered to E. A. Hauser, six 2-year old steers that gave an average weight of 1435 pounds and the price received was $6 per cwt. For the kind and quality, the price was a little low according to the times and other prices, but they were previously contracted for. The output is one Burt may well be proud of, few such sales of fine stock are made. Monday he shipped from Milan his flock of sheep and went with them to Buffalo where he will spend a few days taking in the city.—Saline Observer.

Why cannot two slender persons become great friends—Because they will always be slight acquaintances.

THEY ALL SAY SO.

Not only in Tecumseh, but in Every City and Town in the Union.

If the reader took the time and trouble to ask his fellow residents of Tecumseh, the simple question given below, he would obtain the one answer. If he would read the statements now being published in Tecumseh, which refer to this answer, it would surprise him to note that they number so many. As many more could be, and may be, published, but in the meantime ask the first person you meet what cures backache? The answer will be Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is a citizen who endorses our claim:

C. Patterson, the well known sexton residing in the southeastern section of Tecumseh, says: "For over a year I had a soreness and pain in the small of the back at times quite severe, more especially if I did a hard day's work or took cold, for it always settled in my kidneys. The kidney secretions were also discolored and irregular and I had all the symptoms of aggravated kidney complaint. I heard several people praising Doan's Kidney Pills so concluding to try them I got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store and commenced the treatment. I found it just suited my case for it helped me right from the start. It stopped the pain in my back and regulated and cleared up the kidney secretions. I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone having any difficulty with their kidneys."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

When a reporter attends a trotting match he tries to write a racy account of it.

"It was almost a miracle. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me of a terrible breaking out all over the body. I am very grateful." Miss Julia Filbridge, West Cornwell, Conn.

Venetian Hospitality.

Whatever might have been said against the Venetians, they were a hospitable people—this, too, in small as well as in great matters. When, for example, in 1476, an embassador from the khan of Tartary visited the city and it was known that the khan and his suit carried but one shirt apiece in their bags, the senate formally voted 20 ducats that they might be provided with additional shirts, which were accordingly made "alla tartarescha" and presented. We can imagine how the good councilors and citizens would enjoy this kindly little jest.

Pinned Faith to Plymouth Rock.

The dominance of New England sentiment in matters of ancestry and early history was illustrated at a certain meeting of women in New York the other day when the first English settlement was spoken of as having been made in Jamestown, Va.

"Why, I always thought it was in Plymouth rock!" exclaimed a daughter of New England. "And so did I." "And I," echoed others, at least half of the women present, all of them supposed to be well educated persons, being of that opinion.

Not True to Nature.

A favorite joke in cheap theatricals is a gay old man who is running around after the young and pretty girls. It's not true to nature. Young and pretty girls soon tire of an old man. They do not pay him any attention and say things that hurt his feelings. Old men are rarely gay, but they are usually bilious.—Atchison Globe.

STARTLING REPORT

Mrs. E. Anderson of Tecumseh, Mich. says: "I was so nervous that I could not sleep at night and was quite dizzy. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and now since using the pills I can say my nerves are steadied, I rest better and the dizziness is relieved. I think the pills a splendid nerve medicine."

THROWN INTO THE STREET.

St. Joseph Newspaper Office Raided by a Mob.

St. Joseph, Mich., May 26.—The office of the Town Topics was raided by a crowd of men while Editor W. A. McGovern was out of town, and the entire outfit thrown into the street. Employes of the office resented the invasion, and a fierce street fight followed. The landlord would not allow the material to be returned to the building, and no other store could be rented. The newspaper plant will be stored in a shed. McGovern will sue all parties connected with the raid.

The trouble began some weeks ago, when McGovern had a citizen, who was later found guilty, arrested for illegal voting. The business men resented the action, and a petition was circulated and freely signed pledging the subscribers to remove their advertisement from the Topics.

McGovern commenced suit against the circulators of the petition for $5,000 damages, and began an attack against his enemies through his sheet.

Railroad Mishap at Niles.

Niles, Mich., May 26.—The breaking of the air hose in the middle of a westbound freight Sunday morning will cost the Michigan Central Railway Co. over $2,000. The train was pulling out of the local yards when the hose broke, bringing the forward end of the train to a sudden stop. Five loaded cars in the rear were piled one upon another and twisted and splintered into a shapeless mass. One car contained five boilers, shipped from Detroit to Stillwater, Minn. These are badly twisted.

Maniac Scared Them.

Niles, Mich., May 26.—A man with an awful face frightened women and children in West Niles Saturday evening. After quite a chase he was captured and placed in jail. Sunday the officers learned that his name is Sheroski, and that he is an escaped lunatic from South Bend, Ind. Sheroski covered his face with tar to disguise himself.

Boy, Kicked by a Horse, Dies.

Northville, Mich., May 26.—A 12-year-old Plymouth boy named Martin Rank, who was frightfully kicked by a horse, is dead. He was found in a stable under the horse's feet, with the back of his head crushed in and both legs broken. He lived several hours.

Marriage Business Slow.

St. Joseph, Mich., May 26.—The excursionists Sunday were limited to 300 from Chicago and 300 from points in Michigan. County Clerk Church reports eight marriage licenses issued to Chicago parties, with a total of 35 for last week.

Mysterious Shooting in Chicago.

Chicago, May 26.—Daniel Hill, a wealthy real estate owner of Morris, Ill., and partner in the firm of the Geo. H. Phillips & Co., on the Chicago board of trade, was shot and seriously wounded early Sunday as he lay in bed at his residence at 797 Monroe street. Considerable mystery surrounds the shooting. According to Mrs. Hill, she and her husband were asleep, when Mr. Hill was awakened by the forcing of a lock on the bedroom door. He reached for his revolver, but before he could use it three men rushed into the room and fired at him. The police responded in a few minutes, but in the meantime the supposed burglars had made their escape.

Some Famous Dunces.

Literary history is crowded with instances of torpid and uninteresting boyhood. Gibbon was pronounced "dreadfully dull," and the utmost that was predicted of Hume in his youth was that "he might possibly become a steady merchant." Adam Clarke, afterward so deeply skilled in oriental languages and antiquities, was pronounced by his father to be "a grievous dunce," and of Boileau, who became a model for Pope, it was said that he was a youth of little understanding. Dryden was "a great numskull," who went through a course of education at Westminster, but the "stimulating properties of Dr. Busby's classical ferrule were thrown away upon the drone who was to be known as 'Glorious John.'"—London Standard.

THOMAS DUNSTAN IS DEAD.

Former Lieutenant-Governor of Michigan Passes Away in Chicago.

Chicago, May 24.—Former Lieut.-Gov. Thomas F. Dunstan of Michigan died last night at the Auditorium. Death was caused by a complication of diseases for which he has been compelled, in recent years, to undergo several operations. Mr. Dunstan came to Chicago two months ago and has been under special treatment. He has been failing rapidly for some days. His wife and four children, one son from West Point, and his oldest daughter from Vassar college were summoned and were present at his death.

Mr. Dunstan served several terms in the Michigan legislature and was prominent in business circles, having large interests in mines near Calumet, Mich. He was elected lieutenant-governor at the same time Hazen S. Pingree was made governor. As president of the Michigan School of Mines, Mr. Dunstan gained distinction in the work of technical education. He was president of the Victoria Copper Co., and owned considerable stock in the Quincy, Adventure and Rhode Island mines.

Chinese Will Farm It.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 24.—The Chinese have suddenly discovered that Grand Rapids is a good town for them. Two Chinese restaurants have been opened here, one in connection with a well-known saloon. Yesterday negotiations were completed whereby Chan Hoy, the leading local Chink, and others associated with him, leased a 60-acre farm south of the city and will engage in market gardening on an extensive scale. Nine Chinese farmers will be brought from San Francisco to work the farm and the advance guard is already on hand preparing the ground.

He Collected Too Much.

Three Rivers, Mich., May 24.—Ammon Hahn, deputy sheriff and city marshal, was served with a warrant Friday afternoon on 12 different counts, charged with the illegal collection of fees from parties connected with a cocking main. It is claimed that Hahn was entitled to but 70 cents for each person complained of, but $1.70 was demanded and paid for the deputy's services. It is claimed that this is not the first time excess of fees was taken by Hahn.

Identity Still a Mystery.

Pontiac, Mich., May 24.—Mary Benton, as the mysterious woman who recently left the little baby on the counter of E. C. Poppleton's store is called in Birmingham, has been discharged, upon petition signed by 289 citizens. Her identity is still a mystery and will probably continue to be so. Much sympathy is expressed here for the girl, but the authorities are extremely sorry there is no way to punish her betrayer.

New Rural Routes.

Washington, May 24.—Rural free delivery service has been ordered established in Michigan, July 1, as follows: Montrose, Genesee county, two routes; length 46 miles, area 47 miles, population 1579; postoffice at Navan to be discontinued. Sturgis, St. Joseph county, two routes; length 47 miles, area 66 square miles, population 922. Zeeland, Ottawa county, one route; length 23 miles, population 859, area 29 square miles.

Favor a Furniture Combine.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 24.—A meeting of Grand Rapids furniture manufacturers was held last night behind closed doors for the purpose of considering the question of joining in the pooling combination organized in Chicago. No information was given out, but it is claimed that most of the local manufacturers are favorable to the plan this season, whereas in former years a majority of them have held aloof from all combine schemes.

Fish Commissioner Davis Resigns.

Lansing, Mich., May 24.—Horace W. Davis of Grand Rapids has resigned as a member of the state fish commission, which position he has occupied for many years. Charles D. Joslyn of Detroit has been appointed his successor. The commission will appoint Davis superintendent of the new bass hatchery to be established in Oakland county.

Mysterious Shooting at Reading.

Reading, Mich., May 24.—Charles Hughes of this place was brought to the doctor in an intoxicated condition with a 38-caliber bullet in his skull. Hughes claims he knows nothing of how or by whom the deed was done, but the general opinion is that it was a case of attempted suicide. His condition is critical.

D. & M. Goes Over to Wabash.

Detroit, Mich., May 24.—The Detroit & Mackinac railroad has recently passed into the control of Henry K. McHarg, who is a director of the Wabash railroad and president of several southern railroads. It is believed that this transfer means that the Detroit & Mackinac will become a part of the reorganized Wabash system.

Woman Killed by Storm.

Lapeer, Mich., May 24.—A terrific storm passed over the northern portion of Lapeer county Thursday afternoon, and Mrs. Kennedy, who carries the mail between Drake and North Branch, was instantly killed. The storm overturned her buggy, crushing out her life.

Owosso Elks Add 100.

Owosso, Mich., May 24.—Owosso lodge, B. P. O. Elks, initiated a class of 100 candidates here last night, many of them coming from surrounding towns. The armory was used for the work and a banquet followed.

Two Boys Drowned.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 24.—W. Ke McCarthy, aged 16 years, of Stevens City, Va., and Charles Skewes, aged 15 years, of McKeesport, were drowned yesterday in the Yohiogheny river near McKeesport. The boys were out skiff riding and were seen to rock the boat from side to side until it turned completely over, precipitating the occupants into the river.

Beards in Old Russia.

The Russians had an old law by which any one who drew hair from another's beard should be fined four times as much as for cutting off a finger, and the importance and value of the appendage are further illustrated by the fact that, although the loss of a leg was estimated at 12 shillings, the loss of the beard was estimated at 20.—London Globe.

Pained Him to Leave.

Soubrette—The heavy tragedian says he gets a rousing reception everywhere. He says it pained him to leave the last town.

Comedian—You bet it pained him! I understand they rode him out on a keen edged rail.—Philadelphia Record.

A Startling Telegram.

Ten girls in a composition class were told to write a telegram such as would be suitable to send home in case of a railway accident while traveling. One of the girls wrote:

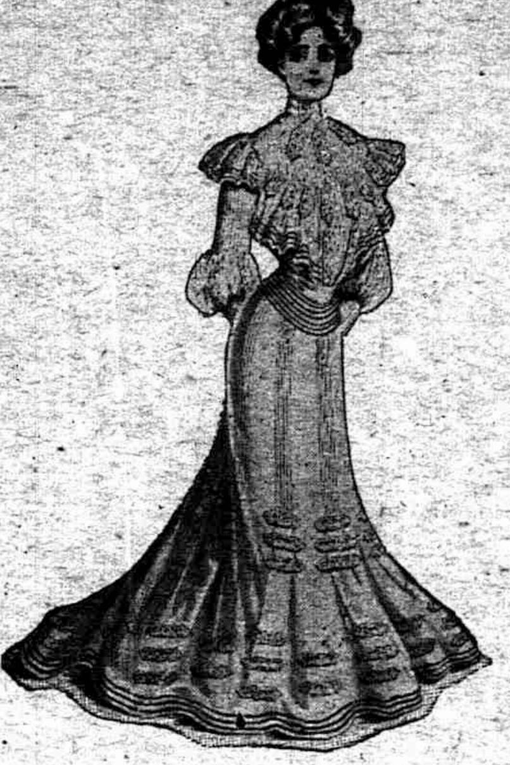
Dear Papa—Mamma is killed. I am in the refreshment room.

Stylish Spring Costumes

HANDSOME RECEPTION GOWN.

The New Long-Shoulder Effect.

The waist of this handsome reception gown of buff veiling is made with the fashionable drooping or long-shoulder effect and has a tucked yoke, framed with a scalloped berthe handsomely embroider with Corticelli silk. The sleeves are tucked, springing out into large puffs strapped with embroidered bands. The skirt is tucked in clusters and shows strap garniture in addition to narrow velvet ribbon which also appears on the round yoke.



Each week seems to reveal some new feature in the cotton dress fabrics, one of which is grass cloth in white, with a stripe of close weave. Then there are new fine lawns with open work stripe, lawns with narrow lace insertions woven stripe fashion into the material. Most beautiful are the embroidered batistes which come in handsome all-over designs as well as in robes, either white or beige color.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: "Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parent did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops. Jessie Pinkey Hall, Springville, Ala. This remedy is for sale by J. J. Orr.

A Wrestle With German.

An estimable woman of Milwaukee is an earnest member of a local German class, but her method of pronouncing some of the words, at least in one specific instance, aroused the mirth of her companions. At a recent meeting of the class one of the questions in the day's exercise was, "Are you not glad that you are able to learn German?" This query was in the foreign language, and the answer was, "Ja, gewiss," meaning, "Yes, certainly." It so happened that this particular woman was called up to read the question and answer. She got through the question all right, but convulsed the class by reading the answer this way, "Ya; gee whiz!"

GRIT IN THE BEARINGS

How Rheumatism Affects the Human Mechanism.

Grit in the bearings—every engineer knows how important it is to guard against this trouble—to get rid of it, if it comes; so too every one who has to do with machinery of any kind.

The human body is a more marvelous piece of mechanism than any made by hand. Nature does a deal to keep the body in good repair—in good running order. But people make mistakes—some through carelessness, some through ignorance. Nature sometimes needs help.

Uric acid causes Rheumatism—deposited in the muscles and joints, it acts like grit in the bearings—hinders their action, makes pain and trouble. Every sufferer knows how much.

Athlophoros dissolves the Uric acid—aids the body to get rid of it—helps to the restoration of health and strength. It does this with certainty—proven by the experience of many years.

Exchange comfort for pain. If your druggist doesn't keep it send $1 for a bottle to The Athlophoros Co., New Haven, Conn. It will show you how to rid your bearings of the grit.

HONEY AS A FOOD.

It Is of Great Value as a Medicine and Highly Nutritious.

Starch and sugar when eaten undergo a digestive change before they are assimilated. In honey this change has been made to a considerable extent by the bees. It is easy of assimilation and concentrated and furnishes the same element of nutrition as sugar and starch—imparts warmth and energy. As a medicine honey has great value and many uses. It is excellent in most lung and throat affections and is often used with great benefit in place of cod liver oil. Occasionally there is a person with whom it does not agree, but most people can learn to use it with beneficial results. Children, who have more natural appetites, generally prefer it to butter. Honey is laxative and sedative, and in diseases of the bladder and kidneys it is an excellent remedy. It has much the same effect as wine or stimulants, without the injurious effects, and is unequaled in mead and harvest drinks. As an external application it is irritating when clear and soothing when diluted. In many places it is much appreciated as a remedy for croup and colds. In preserving fruit the formic acid it contains makes a better preservative than sugar sirup, and it is also used in cooking and confectionery.

In early times, it is said, Palestine flowed with milk and honey, but we have far more of both today than the people of any age ever had. Honey does not injure the teeth as candies do.—Health.

Patti Made His Reputation.

Adelina Patti was not always such a "gold mine" to managers as some may suppose, says Leslie's Weekly. When she visited New York in 1880, her manager, Signor Lugo, overreached himself by starting out on a ten dollar admission basis, and the venture was a financial failure, notwithstanding Patti's great artistic success. She sang to a fourteen hundred dollar house on the first night and on the second to $400. She got discouraged, as it was her own venture, and gave it up.

The late Henry E. Abbey, who was bold in his speculations, then engaged her and her company at $5,000 per concert. He began at Wallack's old theater at Thirteenth street, giving scenes of opera, and the concerts there averaged over $7,000 a performance, but he lost in the out of town concerts $20,000.

A little later, being asked by De Vivo to take Patti to San Francisco, Abbey replied: "My dear De Vivo, I have got enough of Patti. I lost $20,000, but I made a reputation."

Those Who Fought and Ran Away.

During the Spanish-American war, at the recruiting station in St. Louis, the following, as related in the Galveston News, took place between a recruiting officer and an applicant who was of Irish nationality:

R. O.—How old are you?

I. R.—Don't know, but Oi must be auld enough.

R. O.—Have you ever been in the army?

I. R.—Yis, sor.

R. O.—Have you ever been in any battles?

I. R.—Oi have.

R. O.—What ones?

I. R.—Oi've been in all ov them.

R. O.—Were you in the battle of Bull Run?

I. R.—Oi was.

R. O.—Did you run?

I. R.—You bet Oi did, and them poor divils that didn't run are there yet.

If you board, look on the bright side. Nothing is better for the system than prunes.—Atchison Globe.

Miss Ida M. Snyder,
Treasurer of the Brooklyn East End Art Club.

"If women would pay more attention to their health we would have more happy wives, mothers and daughters, and if they would observe results they would find that the doctors' prescriptions do not perform the many cures they are given credit for.

"In consulting with my druggist he advised McElree's Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught, and so I took it and have every reason to thank him for a new life opened up to me with restored health, and it only took three months to cure me."

Wine of Cardui is a regulator of the menstrual functions and is a most astonishing tonic for women. It cures scanty, suppressed, too frequent, irregular and painful menstruation, falling of the womb, whites and flooding. It is helpful when approaching womanhood, during pregnancy, after childbirth and in change of life. It frequently brings a dear baby to homes that have been barren for years. All druggists have $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

HIS FIRST MESSAGE

Palma Expresses Deep Gratitude to the United States

FOR CUBA'S INDEPENDENCE

Recommends Encouragement of Agriculture, Cattle Raising; Wants Primary Schools—Hopes Other Countries Will Recognize Cuba.

Havana, May 28.—President Palma's message will be delivered to the Cuban senate today.

The message opens by giving thanks to the Almighty for His assistance in carrying out the work of Cuban independence and asks Divine aid in the establishment of a firm and stable government.

"Never did a people fight with more perseverance," says the message, "and sacrifice more for liberty than have the Cubans. No people, therefore, are more entitled to see their just efforts crowned with success. Together with our own heroism is the attitude of the great people who were impelled by their own love of liberty to put themselves on our side in our tenacious fight for the independence of the country.

Grateful to United States.

"Their motive was one of generous sentiment, pure and disinterested in origin. Impelled by this sentiment, the powerful republic of the north recognizes, through its illustrious president, the republic of Cuba. The promise formally made has been carried out. In this moment when we feel our right as an independent nation it is impossible to suppress our gratitude to the United States. To recognize this debt of gratitude to the great nation is an act which exalts us and which makes us worthy of the consideration and respect of the other nations of the world."

President Palma recommends the encouragement of the agricultural industries of the island, the raising of cattle, the establishment of agricultural stations to improve the culture of sugar cane and tobacco and the introduction of varied agricultural industries.

"If security of life and property in Cuba is to be firmly guaranteed, then the rural guard must be reorganized and increased."

President Palma declares it is the purpose of the government to devote its attention to education, and especially the primary schools.

"It is very satisfactory to us," says the president, "that the republic of Cuba has been officially recognized by the United States, Great Britain, France, Mexico, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Santo Domingo, Ecuador and Paraguay, and we hope that other countries will also recognize our republic. We must cultivate cordial relations with all nations and make treaties of amnesty and commerce favorable to Cuba. We must also take especial care that the relations between Cuba and the United States be most friendly in order that there be no difficulty in arranging the political and commercial questions which effect both countries."

Turkish Battalion Annihilated.

London, May 27.—A dispatch to the Daily Express from Cairo, Egypt, says a report has reached there that a whole battalion of Turkish troops has been annihilated by rebels near the seaport of Nicha in the Turkish vilayet of Yemen, in the southwestern part of Arabia. The governor of Nocha is said to have been carried away by the rebels as a hostage. The rebels are being joined by numbers of Turkish troops, who are deserting.

Hanged for Triple Murder.

Philadelphia, May 28.—Wm. Harmon Lane, colored, was hanged Tuesday. On the morning of April 1 he shot and killed Ella Jarden, by whom he was employed as a servant, and her two daughters, Madeline, aged 12, and Eloise, aged 7 years. Lane had stolen money from his employer and, fearing the consequences of his thefts, committed the triple murder.

St. Pierre Is Deserted.

Castries, St. Lucia, May 27.—St. Pierre, Martinique, is no longer of interest except to the scientists. Mont Pelee is still active, but all within its range are dead or have fled. Fort de France is quieter after the large exodus of its inhabitants to neighboring colonies. The Martinique sufferers have sufficient food for the present.

Sixty Anarchists Arrested.

Paris, May 26.—Disturbances occurred at the Pere La Chaise cemetery Sunday as a result of the annual placing of wreaths upon the tombs of the communists. Wreaths bearing seditious inscriptions and red flags were seized and 60 anarchists were arrested. The persons arrested will probably be liberated at once.

Virginia Miners Will Strike.

Huntington, W. Va., May 26.—Saturday the united mine conferees ordered that a general strike among all the miners in Virginia and West Virginia begin June 7 and last until the demands of a 10 to 22 per cent increase in wages, adopted in convention here March 18, was accepted by the operators.

Near a Double Tragedy.

Chicago, May 26.—Because his wife had sought the protection of her relatives, Nels Johnson, a north side politician, Sunday shot and fatally wounded Mrs. C. J. Gullacksen, his sister-in-law, and then committed suicide by shooting himself in the head.

Holds up a Congressman.

"At the end of the campaign," writes Champ Clark, Missouri's brilliant congressman, from overwork, nervous tension, loss of sleep and constant speaking I had about utterly collapsed. It seemed that all the organs in my body were out of order, but three bottles of Electric Bitters made me all right. It's the best all-round medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter." Over worked run down men and weak, sickly women gain splendid health and vitality from Electric Bitters. Try them. Only 50c Guaranteed by C. A. Wright

PELEE EXPLODED

Again on Wednesday Morning About Nine O'clock.

KENNAN'S SAFETY FEARED

But He Was Found Secluded on Plantation—U. S. Geologist Hill Tells of His Perilous Trip to the Volcano and Admits Being Frightened.

Fort de France, May 29.—A tremendous explosion of very black smoke from Mont Pelee at a quarter before 9 o'clock Wednesday morning accentuated the fear entertained for the safety of George Kennan, the American author, who, with a land party, has been examining the northern part of the island. The governor of Martinique, M. Lhurre, was at once seen with the object of arranging for a rescue party to proceed by land in connection with the voyage along the coast of the United States cruiser Cincinnati, should such steps appear necessary.

At about 11 o'clock Ferdinand Clerc, a wealthy landed proprietor of Martinique, arrived and announced that Mr. Kennan and his party were safe on a plantation at the north end of the island. Prof. Robert T. Hill, United States government geologist and head of the expedition sent to Martinique by the National Geographical society, who left Fort de France Monday on horseback for the volcano, returned yesterday morning. He was completely worn out by his trip.

Prof. Hill recites an interesting story of his examination of the district through which he passed. He left Fort de France at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Prof. Hill heard the explosion of yesterday morning while on his way into Fort de France, and he says a cloud of black smoke, at a great height, was drifting slowly to the southeast.

Describes His Trip.

Speaking personally of his expedition to Mont Pelee, Prof. Hill said:

"My attempt to examine the crater of Mont Pelee has been futile. I succeeded, however, in getting very close to Morne Rouge. At 7 o'clock Monday night I witnessed, from a point near the ruins of St. Pierre, a frightful explosion from Mont Pelee and noted the accompanying phenomena. While these eruptions continue no sane man should attempt to ascend to the crater of the volcano. Following the salvos of detonations from the mountain gigantic mushroom-shaped columns of smoke and cinders ascended into the clear, starlit sky and then spread, in a vast black sheet, to the south and directly over my head. Through this sheet, which extended a distance of 10 miles from the crater, vivid and awful lightning-like bolts flashed with alarming frequency. They followed distinct paths of ignition, but were different in that the bolts were horizontal and not perpendicular. This is indisputable evidence of the explosive oxidation of the gases after they left the crater. This is the most important observation and explains, in part, the awful catastrophe. This phenomenon is entirely new in volcanic history.

"I took many photographs, but do not hesitate to acknowledge that I was terrified. But I was not the only person so frightened. Two newspaper correspondents who were close to Morne Rouge some hours before me became scared, ran three miles down the mountain and hastened into Fort de France.

"The people on the north end of the island are terrified and are fleeing with their cattle and effects. I spent Tuesday night in a house at Deux Choux, with a crowd of 200 frightened refugees.

"Nearly all the phenomena of these volcanic outbreaks are new to science, and many of them have not yet been explained. The volcano is still intensely active, and I cannot make any predictions as to what it will do."

United Presbyterian Convention.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 29.—The 44th general assembly of the United Presbyterian church was formally opened last night in the Eighth U. P. church with the final sermon of the retiring moderator, Rev. Dr. J. A. Thompson, president of Harklo college, Missouri. The local church committee had made ample and pleasant arrangements for the meeting, and the delegate body found every convenience in the hall where their deliberations for the next ten days or two weeks will take place. Almost the entire number of accredited delegates, 250, were present from nearly every state in the union, as well as from the Dominion of Canada, Mexico, Egypt and India. The assembly will have a vast amount of business to transact, but no schismatic questions will come before the body.

Boers Still Fighting.

Middelburg, Transvaal, May 29.—Major Collett, with a detachment of the mounted troops of this district, encountered a force of Boers on the Repon road May 27. The engagement which followed lasted for a long time, the enemy finally drawing off, leaving behind them on the field Commandant Malon, who was mortally wounded. An armored train engaged the same party of Boers the evening of May 27, but no details of the latter engagement are at hand.

Albany's Sailors Desert.

Castellamare, Bay of Naples, May 29.—The United States battleship Illinois, flying the flag of Rear Admiral Arent S. Crowninshield, commander-in-chief of the European station, and the United States cruisers Chicago and Albany arrived here Wednesday afternoon from Naples. While the Albany was at Naples five members of her crew deserted, and the American consul there has offered a reward for their apprehension.

Feminine Financiering.

He—You owe me ten kisses! Pay up!

She—Explain, sir!

He—I won them! You know very well I wagered a dozen gloves against ten kisses and won! I—

She—Oh, but kisses, you know—

He (firmly)—Kisses should be paid just as religiously as any other debt.

She (thoughtfully)—Just the same as a note?

"Yes."

"Or a check?"

"Yes."

"Or—or a draft?"

"Certainly!"

"Then, you poor fellow, I'll give you a draft on mamma!"—Stray Stories.

CRAFTY OFFICERS

Captured a Fugitive Negro at Albion Tuesday.

WAS WANTED FOR BURGLARY

He Was Summoned by Relatives to His Sister's Funeral—Begged to See Dead Woman and Cried Like a Baby.

Albion, Mich., May 28.—For some time past Bert King, a local negro, has been wanted for a burglary committed in Jackson. The local officials have been on a lookout for him, but have been unable to locate him in this region.

Sunday afternoon King's sister died. The other members of the family sent out a blind telegram immediately to a party in Detroit, who was supposed to know of King's whereabouts, summoning him to the funeral. A reply arrived in due time and the local officers, who had been watching the telegraph offices with eagle eye, waited for the train to come in and nabbed their man.

Cried Like a Baby.

When King saw the game he was up against he broke down and cried like a baby, begging to be allowed to attend the funeral, or at least to look on his dead sister's face, but the officers were obdurate.

"You couldn't do her any good now, anyway," said Officer Dwelle of Jackson, who had come to get the prisoner, and, pursuant to this decision, King was taken to Jackson just two hours before the funeral.

Thresher Works Nearly Burned Up.

Battle Creek, Mich., May 28.—The Nichols & Shepard Threshing Machine works, at 10 o'clock last evening, was nearly destroyed by fire, due to improperly banked coke in the blacksmith and iron departments. The loss is estimated at $100,000. Heroic work by the city and company's fire departments was all that saved the entire plant. A house occupied by Fred Grey and family was partially destroyed. Falling shafts of machinery nearly hit several firemen. The loss is covered by insurance.

Ypsilanti, Mich., May 28.—"Squire" William Bishop of Augusta township, one of the most prominent farmers of the vicinity, committed suicide by shooting. He complained of feeling unweel shortly after breakfast Monday and went to bed, and in the afternoon, when his wife returned from a short visit with a friend, she found him dying from a self-inflicted bullet wound in the head. The "squire" was a very eccentric character, whose hobby was law suits.

500 Ballots—No Result.

Adrian, Mich., May 29.—The republican congressional convention of the second Michigan district promises to be a record-breaker. When the convention adjourned last night, after almost continuous session since 11 a. m. just 500 ballots had been taken, and every one of them was exactly like every other one. Each county stood all day and evening by its own county, and the outcome is still as problematical as it was before the first roll call.

Killed in a Runaway.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., May 29.—Brad J. Chilley, a wealthy glue manufacturer of Buffalo, N. Y., who has been stopping at the Park house for the past four months, was almost instantly killed near Smith's club house Tuesday evening. He and a Chicago friend started out for a drive and upon turning into Smith's, Chilley lost control of the horses and a lurch of the buggy threw him out. Chilley struck on his head and died a few minutes later.

DISASTROUS FIRE

Two Big Manistique Companies' Buildings Burn.

LOSS TOTALS ABOUT $100,000

Flames Started in Shingle Mill of White Marble Lime Co. and Spread to Burrell Chemical Co.'s Plant—Some Insurance.

Manistique, Mich., May 29.—The most serious conflagration of Manistique's history occurred Wednesday afternoon in the destruction of the shingle mill of the White Marble Lime Co. and the greater portion of the Burrell Chemical Co.'s plant. Sparks from the refuse burner of the mill caused the blaze and the gale quickly carried the flames to the chemical plant near by.

Losses Total $100,000.

The mill is a total loss and was insured for $15,000. The still room and acetate building of the chemical plant are in ruins. The Burrell company carried insurance aggregating $53,000. The loss is estimated at about $100,000.

Several Soo line cars in the yards were destroyed, so quickly did the flames spread. The mill was owned by local parties, and Berry Bros. of Detroit are the principal stockholders of the chemical company.

Both plants will probably be rebuilt. Several hundred men have been thrown out of employment.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

BLACK ROCK

By RALPH
CONNOR

"Well," replied Craig, smiling for the first time, "the organization won't be elaborate, but it will be effective, and, besides, loyalty demands obedience."

We sat long that afternoon talking, shrinking from the breaking up, for we knew that we were about to turn down a chapter in our lives which we should delight to linger over in after days, and in my life there is but one brighter. At last we said goodby and drove away, and, though many farewells have come in between that day and this, none is so vividly present to me as that between us three men. Craig's manner with me was solemn enough.

"'He that loveth his life'—goodby. Don't fool with this," was what he said to me, but when he turned to Graeme his whole face lighted up. He took him by the shoulders and gave him a little shake, looking into his eyes and saying over and over in a low, sweet tone:

"You'll come, old chap, you'll come; you'll come. Tell me you'll come."

And Graeme could say nothing in reply, but only looked at him. Then they silently shook hands, and we drove off, but long after we had got over the mountain and into the winding forest road on the way to the lumber camp the voice kept vibrating in my heart, "You'll come, you'll come," and there was a hot pain in my throat.

We said little during the drive to the camp. Graeme was thinking hard and made no answer when I spoke to him two or three times till we came to the deep shadows of the pine forest, when, with a little shiver, he said:

"It is all a tangle, a hopeless tangle."

"Meaning what?" I asked.

"This business of religion. What quaint varieties—Nelson's, Geordie's, Billy Breen's—if he has any—then Mrs. Mavor's—she is a saint, of course—and that fellow Craig's! What a trump he is! And without his religion he'd be pretty much like the rest of us. It is too much for me."

His mystery was not mine. Black Rock varieties of religion were certainly startling, but there was undoubtedly the streak of reality through them all, and that discovery I felt to be a distinct gain.

CHAPTER VII.

THE FIRST BLACK ROCK COMMUNION.

THE gleam of the great fire through the windows of the great camp gave a kindly welcome as we drove into the clearing in which the shanties stood. Graeme was greatly touched at his enthusiastic welcome by the men. At the supper table he made a little speech of thanks for their faithfulness during his absence, specially commending the care and efficiency of Mr. Nelson, who had had charge of the camp. The men cheered wildly, Baptiste's shrill voice leading all. Nelson, being called upon, expressed in a few words his pleasure at seeing the boss back and thanked the men for their support while he had been in charge.

The men were for making a night of it; but, fearing the effect upon Graeme, I spoke to Nelson, who passed the word, and in a short time the camp was quiet. As we sauntered from the grub camp to the office, where was our bed, we paused to take in the beauty of the night. The moon rode high over the peaks of the mountains, flooding the narrow valley with mellow light. Under her magic the rugged peaks softened their harsh lines and seemed to lean lovingly toward us. The dark pine masses stood silent, as in breathless adoration. The dazzling snow lay like a garment over all the open spaces in soft, waving folds and crowded every stump with a quaintly shaped nightcap. Above the camps the smoke curled up from the campfires, standing like pillars of cloud that kept watch while men slept, and high over all the deep blue night sky, with its star jewels, sprang like the roof of a great cathedral from range to range, covering us in its kindly shelter. How homelike and safe seemed the valley, with its mountain sides, its sentinel trees and arching roof of jeweled sky! Even the night seemed kindly, and friendly the stars, and the lone cry of the wolf from the deep forest seemed like the voice of a comrade.

"How beautiful! Too beautiful!" said Graeme, stretching out his arms. "A night like this takes the heart out of me."

I stood silent, drinking in at every sense the night, with its wealth of loveliness.

"What is it I want?" he went on. "Why does the night make my heart ache? There are things to see and things to hear just beyond me. I cannot get to them."

The gay, careless look was gone from his face. His dark eyes were wistful with yearning.

"I often wonder if life has nothing better for me," he continued with his heartache voice.

I said no word, but put my arm within his. A light appeared in the stable. Glad of a diversion, I said:

"What is the light? Let us go and see."

"Sandy, taking a last look at his team, like enough."

We walked slowly toward the stable, speaking no word. As we neared the door we heard the sound of a voice in the monotone of one reading. I stepped forward and looked through a chink between the logs. Graeme was about to open the door, but I held up my hand and beckoned him to me. In a vacant stall, where was a pile of straw, a number of men were grouped. Sandy, leaning against the tying post, upon which the stable lantern hung, was reading; Nelson was kneeling in front of him and gazing into the gloom beyond; Baptiste lay upon his stomach, his chin in his hands and his upturned eyes fastened upon Sandy's face; Lachlan Campbell sat with his hands clasped about his knees, and two other men sat near him. Sandy was reading the undying story of the prodigal, Nelson now and then stopping him to make a remark. It was a scene I have never been able to forget. Today I pause in my tale and see it as clearly as when I looked through the chink upon it years ago—the long, low stable, with log walls and upright hitching poles; the dim outlines of the horses in the gloom of the background and the little group of rough, almost savage looking, men, with faces wondering and reverent, lighted by the misty light of the stable lantern.

After the reading Sandy handed the book to Nelson, who put it in his pocket, saying:

"That's for us, boys, ain't it?"

"Aye," said Lachlan. "It is often that has been read in my hearing, but I am afraid it will not be for me whatever." And he swayed himself slightly as he spoke, and his voice was full of pain.

"The minister said I might come," said old Nelson earnestly and hopefully.

"Aye, but you are not Lachlan Campbell, and you have not had his privileges. My father was a godly elder in the Free Church of Scotland, and never a night or morning but we took the books."

"Yes, but he said 'any man,'" persisted Nelson, putting his hand on Lachlan's knee, but Lachlan shook his head.

"Dat young feller," said Baptiste—"wha's hees nem, heh?"

"He has no name. It is just a parable," explained Sandy.

"He's got no nem? He's just a paromble? Das no young feller?" asked Baptiste anxiously. "Das mean notting?"

Then Nelson took him in hand and explained to him the meaning, while Baptiste listened even more eagerly, ejaculating softly: "Ah, voila! Bon! By gar!" When Nelson had finished, he broke out: "Dat young feller—his name Baptiste, heh? And de old Fadder—he's le bon Dieu? Bon! Das good story for me. How you go back? You go to de pries'?"

"The book doesn't say priest or any one else," said Nelson. "You go back in yourself, you see?"

"Non; das so, sure nuff. Ah!" As if a light broke in upon him. "You go in your own self. You make one leetle prayer. You say, 'Le bon Fadder, oh, I want come back, I so tire, so hongree, so sorree!' He say, 'Come right 'long.' Ah, das fuss rate! Nelson, you make one leetle prayer for Sandy and me."

Nelson lifted up his face and said: "Father, we're all gone far away; we have spent all; we are poor; we are tired of it all; we want to feel different, to be different; we want to come back. Jesus came to save us from our sins, and he said if we came he wouldn't cast us out, no matter how bad we were, if we only came to him. O Jesus Christ," and his old iron face began to work, and two big tears slowly came from under his eyelids, "we are a poor lot, and I'm the worst of the lot, and we are trying to find the way. Show us how to get back. Amen."

"Bon!" said Baptiste. "Das fetch him sure!"

Graeme pulled me away, and without a word we went into the office and drew up to the little stove. Graeme was greatly annoyed.

"Did you ever see anything like that?" he asked—"old Nelson, the hardest, savagest, toughest old sinner in the camp, on his knees before a lot of men!"

"Before God," I could not help saying, for the thing seemed very real to me. The old man evidently felt himself talking to some one.

"Yes, I suppose you're right," said Graeme doubtfully, "but there's a lot of stuff I can't swallow."

"When you take medicine, you don't swallow the bottle," I replied, for his trouble was not mine.

"If I were sure of the medicine, I wouldn't mind the bottle, and yet it acts well enough," he went on. "I don't mind Lachlan. He's a highland mystic and has visions. And Sandy's almost as bad, and Baptiste is an impulsive little chap. Those don't count much. But old man Nelson is a cool blooded, level headed old fellow; has seen a lot of life too. And then there's Craig. He has a better head than I have and is as hot blooded, and yet he is living and slaving away in that hole and really enjoys it. There must be something in it."

"Oh, look here, Graeme!" I burst out impatiently. "What's the use of your talking like that? Of course there's something in it. There's everything in it. The trouble with me is I can't face the music. It calls for a life where a fellow must go in for straight, steady work, self denial and that sort of thing, and I'm too bohemian for that, and too lazy. But that fellow Craig makes one feel horribly uncomfortable."

Graeme put his head on one side and examined me curiously.

"I believe you're right about yourself. You always were a luxurious beggar. But that's not where it catches me."

We sat and smoked and talked of other things for an hour and then turned in. As I was dropping off I was roused by Graeme's voice:

"Are you going to the preparatory service on Friday night?"

"Don't know," I replied rather sleepily.

"I say, do you remember the preparatory service at home?" There was something in his voice that set me wide awake.

"Yes. Rather terrific, wasn't it? But I always felt better after it," I replied.

"To me"—he was sitting up in bed now—"to me it was like a call to arms, or, rather, like a call for a forlorn hope—none but volunteers wanted. Do you remember the thrill in the old governor's voice as he dared any but the right stuff to come on?"

"We'll go in on Friday night," I said.

And so we did. Sandy took a load of men with his team, and Graeme and I drove in the light sleigh.

The meeting was in the church, and over a hundred men were present. There was some singing of familiar hymns at first, and then Mr. Craig read the same story as we had heard in the stable, that most perfect of all parables, the prodigal son. Baptiste nudged Sandy in delight and whispered something, but Sandy held his face so absolutely expressionless that Graeme was moved to say:

"Look at Sandy! Did you ever see such a graven image? Something has hit him hard."

The men were held fast by the story. The voice of the reader, low, earnest and thrilling with the tender pathos of the tale, carried the words to our hearts, while a glance, a gesture, a movement of the body, gave us the vision of it all as he was seeing it.

Then, in simplest of words, he told us what the story meant, holding us the while with eyes and voice and gesture.

He compelled us to scorn the gay, heartless selfishness of the young fool setting forth so jauntily from the broken home; he moved our pity and our sympathy for the young profligate, who, broken and deserted, had still pluck enough to determine to work his way back, and who, in utter desperation, at last gave it up, and then he showed us the homecoming—the ragged, heartsick tramp, with hesitating steps, stumbling along the dusty road, and then the rush of the old father, his garments fluttering and his voice heard in broken cries. I see and hear it all now whenever the words are read.

He announced the hymn, "Just as I Am," read the first verse, and then went on: "There you are, men, every man of you, somewhere on the road. Some of you are too lazy"—here Graeme nudged me—"and some of you haven't got enough yet of the far country to come back. May there be a chance for you when you want to come! Men, you all want to go back home, and when you go you'll want to put on your soft clothes, and you won't go till you can go in good style. But where did the prodigal get his good clothes?"

Quick came the answer in Baptiste's shrill voice:

"From de old fadder!"

No one was surprised, and the minister went on:

"Yes, and that's where we must get the good, clean heart—the good, clean, brave heart—from our Father. Don't wait; but, just are you are, come. Sing."

They sang, not loud, as they would "Stand Up" or even "The Sweet By and By," but in voices subdued, holding down the power in them.

After the singing Craig stood a moment gazing down at the men and then said quietly:

"Any man want to come? You all might come. We all must come."

Then, sweeping his arm over the audience and turning half round as if to move off, he cried in a voice that thrilled to the heart's core:

"Oh, come on! Let's go back!"

The effect was overpowering. It seemed to me that the whole company half rose to their feet. Of the prayer that immediately followed I only caught the opening sentence, "Father, we are coming back," for my attention was suddenly absorbed by Abe, the stage driver, who was sitting next me. I could hear him swearing approval and admiration, saying to himself:

"Ain't he a clinker? I'll be gee whizzly gol' dusted if he ain't a malleable iron, double back action, self adjusting corn cracker."

And the prayer continued, to be punctuated with like admiring and even more sulphurous expletives. It was an incongruous medley. The earnest, reverent prayer and the earnest, admiring profanity rendered chaotic one's ideas of religious propriety. The feelings in both were akin, the method of expression somewhat widely diverse.

After prayer Craig's tone changed utterly. In a quiet, matter of fact, businesslike way he stated his plan of organization and called for all who wished to join to remain after the benediction. Some fifty men were left, among them Nelson, Sandy, Lachlan Campbell, Baptiste, Shaw, Nixon, Geordie and Billy Breen, who tried to get out, but was held fast by Geordie.

Graeme was passing out, but I signed him to remain, saying that I wished "to see the thing out." Abe sat still beside me, swearing disgustedly at the fellows "who were goin' back on the preacher." Craig appeared amazed at the number of men remaining and seemed to fear that something was wrong. He put before them the terms of discipleship, as the Maker put them to the eager scribe, and he did not make them easy. He pictured the kind of work to be done and the kind of men needed for the doing of it. Abe grew uneasy as the minister went on to describe the completeness of the surrender, the intensity of the loyalty demanded.

"That knocks me out, I reckon," he muttered in a disappointed tone. "I ain't up to that grade." And as Craig described the heroism called for, the magnificence of the fight, the worth of it and the outcome of it all Abe ground out. "I'll be blanked if I wouldn't like to take a hand, but I guess I'm not in it."

Craig finished by saying:

"I want to put this quite fairly. It is not any league of mine. You're not joining my company. It is no easy business, and it is for your whole life. What do you say? Do I put it fairly? What do you say, Nelson?"

Nelson rose slowly and with difficulty began:

"I may be all wrong, but you made it easier for me, Mr. Craig. You said he would see me through, or I should never have risked it. Perhaps I am wrong." And the old man looked troubled.

Craig sprang up.

"No, no! Thank God, no! He will see every man through who will trust his life to him—every man, no matter how tough he is, no matter how broken."

Then Nelson straightened himself up and said:

"Well, sir, I believe a lot of the men would go in for this if they were dead sure they would get through."

"Get through!" said Craig. "Never a fear of it! It is a hard fight, a long fight, a glorious fight," throwing up his head, "but every man who squarely trusts him and takes him as Lord and Master comes out victor!"

"Bon!" said Baptiste. "Das me. You tink he's take me in dat fight, M'sieu Craig, heh?"

His eyes were blazing.

"You mean it?" asked Craig almost sternly.

"Yes, by gar!" said the little Frenchman eagerly.

"Hear what he says, then." And Craig, turning over the leaves of his Testament, read solemnly the words, "Swear not at all."

"Non! For sure! Den I stop him," replied Baptiste earnestly, and Craig wrote his name down.

Poor Abe looked amazed and distressed, rose slowly and, saying, "That jars my whisky jug," passed out.

There was a slight movement near the organ, and, glancing up, I saw Mrs. Mavor put her face hastily in her hands. The men's faces were anxious and troubled, and Nelson said in a voice that broke:

"Tell them what you told me, sir."

But Craig was troubled, too, and replied, "You tell them, Nelson!" And Nelson told the men the story of how he began just five weeks ago. The old man's voice steadied as he went on, and he grew eager as he told how he had been helped and how the world was all different and his heart seemed new. He spoke of his Friend as if he were some one that could be seen out at camp, that he knew well and met every day.

But as he tried to say how deeply he regretted that he had not known all this years before, the old, hard face began to quiver, and the steady voice wavered. Then he pulled himself together and said:

"I begin to feel sure he'll pull me through—me, the hardest man in the mountains! So don't you fear, boys. He's all right."

Then the men gave in their names one by one. When it came to Geordie's turn, he gave his name:

"George Crawford, frae the parish o' Kilsyth, Scotland, an' ye'll juist pit doon the lad's name, Maister Craig. He's a wee bit fashed wi' the discoorse, but he has the root o' the maitter in him, I doot."

And so Billy Breen's name went down.

When the meeting was over, thirty-eight names stood upon the communion roll of the Black Rock Presbyterian church, and it will ever be one of the regrets of my life that neither Graeme's name nor my own appeared on that roll. And two days after, when the cup went round on that first communion Sabbath, from Nelson to Sandy and from Sandy to Baptiste, and so on down the line to Billy Breen and Mrs. Mavor, and then to Abe, the driver, whom she had by her own mystic power lifted into hope and faith, I felt all the shame and pain of a traitor, and I believe in my heart that the fire of that pain and shame burned something of the selfish cowardice out of me and that it is burning still.

The last words of the minister, in the short address after the table had been served, were low and sweet and tender, but they were words of high courage, and before he had spoken them all the men were listening with shining eyes, and when they rose to sing the closing hymn they stood straight and stiff like soldiers on parade.

And I wished more than ever I was one of them.

Friendly Foes In Kentucky, 1862.

In these matters of principle not a hand was raised to prevent a free choice. No feeling of personal hatred stood between those who saw life's duty differently. A neighbor to the right of a little home called one evening on his neighbor to the left. He kissed the children and shook hands with the parents.

"I may not see you again. Tonight I go to join Morgan," he said.

The host went to his little wardrobe, took therefrom his greatcoat, thrust a pistol into the pocket and threw it over the arm of his guest. Both were poor men, and winter approached. The recipient attempted to return it. "No," said the donor—"no, you take this coat. Your path is to be one of privation; besides, I won't need it. Tomorrow morning I start north to enlist. My government has overcoats to spare, and pistols too. You who go south may find neither. God bless you, friend. May we return to meet again."—Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

Through Other Spectacles.

Some very good stories are told of the impression made upon those who attend for the first time the very high church Episcopalian service, with its elaborate ritual and its extraordinary musical features, at the Church of St. Mary the Virgin. The reply of a very prominent Catholic priest when asked by the friend who had taken him there how he liked the service, "Well, really, I prefer the simple ritual of my own church," is a current story at the clubs.

Even more amusing was the comment of the elderly Scotchwoman whose relatives said to her as they were leaving after the service:

"Well, Aunt Janet, did you enjoy the service?"

"A' weel," said Janet in response, "it's verra interestin', but what a w'y to spend the Sabbath!"—New York Times.

The Good and the Bad.

One ought to balance the good with the bad and also the length of time a man has lived to form a true estimate of his character. Polybius, the Greek historian, has an observation to the same effect. "There is no reason," says he, "why we should not sometimes blame and sometimes commend the same person, for, as none is always right, neither is it probable that he should be always wrong."

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

Scott's Emulsion

You will find it just as useful in summer as in winter, and if you are thriving upon it don't stop because the weather is warm.

Miss Grace Heesen entertained about twenty-five of her married lady friends in honor of her sister, Mrs. Arthur Hall who is visiting here from Toledo. Progressive games were played. Mrs. Harry Moore won the first prize, which was a silver spoon, and Mrs. Thomas Adamson was consoled with a doll baby and a large stick of candy. After the games were finished an elaborate three course supper was served at the small tables, Mrs. John Campbell catered.

John DeMott Hayward.

Once more the shadowy wing of the angel of death has swept over our community and neighborhood, bearing from our midst to his eternal home an old resident and neighbor. Mr. John DeMott Hayward was born in Pennsylvania in the year 1823. He was left an orphan in early childhood, his only means of support being willing hands and a genial disposition.

In early manhood he came to Michigan and settled in the township of Raisin, where he cast his first vote at presidential election and where he also married Miss Minerva Cleveland, the help of whose careful industry and economy enabled him to purchase the farm upon which he spent the remainder of his life.

To Mr. and Mrs. Hayward was born three children, John Cleveland Hayward, a prosperous farmer in Arkansas, Harriet Amelia Nottingham, deceased May 1, 1901, and Sopha Josephine Gilman, now an inmate of the paternal home having cared for her father during the latter part of his illness and now the faithful comfort and stay of the bereft invalid mother.

Mr. Hayward bore his long illness with remarkable patience frequently thanking God for his mercy and goodness in giving him so much rest from severe pain. He often expressed a wish that he might soon be released but always with reverence and submission to the Father's will. His spirit passed peacefully away Saturday morning, May 17, 1902, at 3 o'clock a. m.

VICTORIA DAY

WINDSOR, CANADA

May 24, 25 and 26th to which Co. C were Invited.

The celebration of the Queen's birthday in Windsor, B. C., on the 24, 25 and 26th inst. was a success from start to finish. The invitation of Lt. Col. Jas. C. Guillott to the First Infantry of Michigan National Guards was eagerly accepted by Col. Harrah and on Saturday at one p. m. the regiment formed on Jefferson avenue and marched to the ferry and were soon on English soil, the first time that armed troops have had permission to enter British territory from this country.

To say that we were met with enthusiasm would be speaking lightly of the hospitality that was accorded us by the Britishers. There was a vim and vigor in the cheers and hand clappings as our line of blue marched in quick step between the throng of civilians on one side and the line of red coats on the other that made the American forget all about the struggling Boer and the Britisher neglectful of the fact that somewhere across the continent, there were a few Philippinos struggling in a vain attempt to throw off the guiding hand that is trying to lead them to the light of civilization.

After getting into line the march to the driving park was taken up in the following order; first came the 21st regiment of Essex Fusiliers headed by their military band, then came the 48th Highlanders from Toronto, their kilters flying from side to side and bare knees making our hearts burn with envy for the driving park is some three miles or more from the ferry and the afternoon was intolerably hot. They were followed by their famous bagpipe band and the strains of "Bonne Darre" and like tunes rendered on those queer instruments are still ringing in our heads. Following these sturdy sons of Scotland came the first regiment of Michigan National Guards, headed by their band followed by the naval reserves and band.

All along the line of march could be seen the British and United States flags hanging side by side from every window, fence post and tree while the throng of enthusiastic civilians of both Canada and home soil, surged on both sides of us, cheering and firing cannon crackers till the commands of the officers could scarcely be heard. Upon arriving at the driving park we found the grand stand and adjoining fields packed with people eagerly awaiting our coming.

We were then brigaded in the open field opposite the grand stand and taken command of by Lt. Col. James C. Guilott, who conducted the usual ceremonies and movement constituting a dress parade and passing in review, after which a company of the Independent Batallion gave an exhibition in extended order work by bugle command, which was done very well considering the opportunities they had had in preparing for that kind of work.

The brigade was then turned loose for refreshments and rest, and too much cannot be said in favor of our hosts for the reception they gave us and their mode of entertaining us. Large tents and halls had been provided, filled to overflowing with all the necessities and some of luxuries of life where we were feasted and toasted to a "queen's taste." Veterans of former wars could be seen wiping tears from their eyes as a "blue coat" and a "red coat" would go by arm in arm, and although on almost every block could be seen streamers bearing the inscription "The town is yours, paint it red," I am glad to say that I did not see a disorderly person during our stay in the king's possessions.

After our inner and outer wants had been more than satisfied we were marched back to the ferry amid rousing cheers and fervent benedictions and left Canadian soil with our band playing "God Save the Queen" to be echoed back from the other side by the "Star Spangled Banner"

Charles E. Townsend, of Jackson, Nominated.

The congressional convention was held in Adrian Wednesday, and yesterday shortly after dinner on the 801st ballot Chas. E. Townsend, of Jackson, was nominated.

The convention was red hot from start to finish. Our congressman, Henry Smith, made a good strong run but the other counties were too strong for him. Battle Creek, Mich., May 29.—Rev. Dr. Boynton of Detroit and Rev. McLaughlin of Kalamazoo are here for the purpose of organizing a Congregational church. The Congregationalists and Presbyterians formerly occupied one church, but the Presbyterians left, building a fine new church, of which Rev. Wm. S. Potter is pastor. The other sect were really Unitarians, but to hold the church property have called themselves Independent Congregationalists. Reed Stuart, now of Detroit, was the first pastor. A meeting of Congregationalists has been called for Sunday night. The movement is entirely unexpected and is causing much comment.

Why cannot two slender persons become great friends—Because they will always be slight acquaintances.

THEY ALL SAY SO.

Not only in Tecumseh, but in Every City and Town in the Union.

If the reader took the time and trouble to ask his fellow residents of Tecumseh, the simple question given below, he would obtain the one answer. If he would read the statements now being published in Tecumseh, which refer to this answer, it would surprise him to note that they number so many. As many more could be, and may be, published, but in the meantime ask the first person you meet what cures backache? The answer will be Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is a citizen who endorses our claim:

C. Patterson, the well known sexton residing in the southeastern section of Tecumseh, says: "For over a year I had a soreness and pain in the small of the back at times quite severe, more especially if I did a hard day's work or took cold, for it always settled in my kidneys. The kidney secretions were also discolored and irregular and I had all the symptoms of aggravated kidney complaint. I heard several people praising Doan's Kidney Pills so concluding to try them I got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store and commenced the treatment. I found it just suited my case for it helped me right from the start. It stopped the pain in my back and regulated and cleared up the kidney secretions. I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone having any difficulty with their kidneys."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

The Home of the Kindergarten.

The Japanese have the most perfect kindergarten system in the world. In fact, they originated this method of instructing by entertainment instead of by punishment. Their play apparatus for such purposes is elaborate, but all of it is adapted to the infant mind, which it is designed at once to amuse and to inform. The little ones of Japan even become somewhat interested in mathematics by seeing and feeling what a pretty thing a cone, a sphere or a cylinder is when cut out of wood with a lathe. They make outlines of solid figures out of straw, with green peas to hold the joints together, and for the instruction of the blind flat blocks are provided, with the Japanese characters raised upon them.—Pearson's Weekly.

McKinley and His Mother.

Dr. Rixey, who for some years was the private physician in the McKinley household, used to tell that when the late president's mother sat down for the first time to a White House dinner what seemed to impress her most was the prodigal supply of cream. She commented on the abundance and then added, "Well, William, at last I know what they mean when they speak of the cream of society."

The president laughed. "I admit," said he, "that there seems to be an extravagant array of cream on the table, but you know, mother, we can afford to keep a cow now."

You never heard of any one using Foley's Honey and Tar and not being satisfied. J. J. Orr.

STARTLING REPORT

Mrs. E. Anderson of Tecumseh, Mich. says: "I was so nervous that I could not sleep at night and was quite dizzy. I got a box of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at Chas. A. Wright's drug store and now since using the pills I can say my nerves are steadied, I rest better and the dizziness is relieved. I think the pills a splendid nerve medicine."

AN ODD CALLING.

The Professional Business Adviser and His Methods.

One of the oddest of occupations is that of the professional "business adviser." If your affairs are not conducted to your liking, this gentleman for a consideration will station himself in your office in a position to see all that is going on. He will nose into your affairs for a week or longer at your option, at the end of which time he will "be prepared to point out the faults of your system, employees who neglect their duties, wastage of supplies and time, and suggest means of improving, extending and conducting your affairs on a sounder basis."

The words quoted are from this modest gentleman's advertisement. In brief this man, after a week's observation, will undertake to rearrange the most complex office systems "for a consideration" and give you advice "free, gratis, for nothing." As drowning men catch at straws, so do men whose affairs are hopelessly and inextricably muddled grasp at the chance this gentleman holds out to them. The professional "business adviser" has plenty of clients, and nine times out of ten his advice to his employer is to "make an assignment for the benefit of your creditors." It is the safest counsel he can give.—Philadelphia Times.

Water Clocks In China.

In the history of the Tang dynasty it is stated that in Persia at the same period there was a clepsydra on a terrace near the palace formed of a balance containing twelve metal balls, one of which fell every hour on a bell and thus struck the hours correctly. It is deemed not unlikely that this instrument was identical with the celebrated one which the king of Persia sent in the year 807 to Charlemagne.

In 898 the astronomer Tsiang produced an improvement on all former instruments—a machine arranged on a sort of miniature terrace ten feet high and divided into three stories, the works being in the middle. Twelve images of men, one for every hour, appeared in turn before an opening in the terrace. Another set of automata struck the hours and eighths of hours. These figures occupied the lowest story.

The upper story was devoted to astronomy, containing an orrery in motion. Very complex machinery must have been required. As to the nature of the mechanism nothing is known except that it was kept going by falling water.

A Story of Professor Huxley.

Professor Huxley, Dr. Wayland declared, was once sitting at dinner beside a lady who in impassioned tones asked him whether he did not think it a very terrible thing that the Rev. Mr. Jones, the vicar, should have adopted the eastward position in administering the sacrament. "My dear lady," he replied, "I am told by Sir John Herschel that to drop a pea at the end of every mile of a voyage on a limitless ocean to the distance of the nearest fixed star would require a fleet of 10,000 ships, each of 600 tons burden, all starting with a full cargo of peas. Now, do you really suppose that the Maker of the fixed stars considers this new position of Mr. Jones a serious thing?"

Some Phonetic Spelling.

Before we complain of the spelling of our daughters we should perhaps take exception to the pronunciation of our fathers. Most of the eccentricities in spelling common to children arise from their attempts to reproduce words as they hear them pronounced by their elders. A child who was told to make a list of all the fruits she knew wrote down, "Apls, strorbriz, rarsbriz, goozbris, bnarners." Another spelled the word "idea" with the addition of an "r." "Idear!" exclaimed her teacher. "That is a funny way of spelling idea." Her pupil, however, was not to be outdone. "I know," she answered readily, "but I spelled it that way for short."—London Chronicle.

Too Much Appreciation.

A biography of Huxley dwells on the annoyance which he suffered from bores. But the plague had its funny side. Huxley once wrote to a friend:

"I had a letter from a fellow yesterday morning who must be a lunatic, to the effect that he had been reading my essays, thought I was the man to spend a month with and was coming down by the 5 o'clock train attended by his seven children and his mother-in-law!"

One of Dumas' Jokes.

Just for a joke Dumas once addressed a letter to "the greatest poet in Paris." The postoffice sent it to Lamartine, the idol of sentimental readers. He hesitated to open it and took it to Victor Hugo, who protested that his brother bard had far too humble an opinion of himself. After some conversation they agreed to decide by lot which of the two should open the envelope. The lot fell to Victor Hugo, who, taking out the letter, read, "My dear Alfred." It was written to Alfred de Musset.

A Capable Student.

In one of the Philadelphia colleges a professor of chemistry asked a student the other day, "Now, suppose you were called to a patient who had swallowed a heavy dose of oxalic acid, what would you administer?"

"I would administer the sacrament," replied the student, who, by the way is said to be studying for the ministry and takes chemistry because it is obligatory.—Argonaut.

Erma Cheever Warner was born in Ridgeway, Dec. 10, 1877. She was married at Detroit, December 23, 1898 to Fred C. Warner. To this union was born one son, Perley, who with the father remains to mourn the loss of a kind mother and wife. She is also survived by a mother, one sister, one brother and aged grandparents.

Early in the winter Mrs. Warner with her companion moved from Detroit to Mansfield, O., where she contracted the disease which resulted in her death. She came to the home of her grandparents about six weeks ago and all that kind and loving hands could do, has been done for her comfort.

The funeral services were conducted from the M. E. church Monday afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. T. M. Mott, officiating.

Among those from out of town, who came to attend the funeral of Mrs. F. C. Warner and grandson Perley, of Mansfield, O.; Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Priest, of Detroit; Mrs. John Lucas, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Rockwood; Mrs. Richard VanDuser and daughter Mattie and Arthur Cheever, of Tecumseh; Mrs. James Gillen and sons Lee, of Clinton.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parent did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops. Jessie Pinkey Hall, Springville, Ala. This remedy is for sale by J. J. Orr.

HANNA THE "KING BEE."

Ohio Republicans Unanimously Approve All He Has Done.

Cleveland, O., May 29.—The ticket: Secretary of state, Lewis C. Laylin of Norwalk; judge of supreme court, Wm. B. Crew of McConnelisville; food and dairy commissioner, Horace Ankeney of Xenia; member of the board of public works, William Kirtley, Jr., of Defiance.

The republican state convention, which has been a continuous ovation all week to Senator Hanna, closed last evening with a great demonstration in his honor, to which he responded in a characteristic speech. The senator at former state conventions has sounded keynotes that were taken up by republican glee clubs.

He told them yesterday to sing "Keeping on letting well enough alone" in the campaign rallies this year.

The convention was distinguished for harmony in the chorus for Hanna in all that was done. One of the later conciliations was that of Senator Hanna and former Gov. Asa S. Bushnell of Springfield. The latter had been here all week, but Bushnell and Hanna never spoke as they passed by each other's quarters. They had not spoken since the memorable contest for the senatorship in 1897. Before going to the convention yesterday they met in the most cordial manner. The delegates who "got them together" gave glowing reports around the convention hall of the way they were calling each other "Mark" and "Asa" again.

What were called Hanna men won on all ballots, but Cox supported none of the winners. In making up the state ticket Hanna and Cox were on opposing sides yesterday, the same as in the contest for the organization of the legislature last January, but good feeling prevailed after the convention was over.

While Senator Hanna was cheered as he entered the hall, as he announced the vote of his county delegation, of which he was chairman, as Gen. Grosvenor and other speakers referred to him, and on other occasions, the mention of the names of President Roosevelt, Senator Foraker, Gov. Nash and others also were cheered. Gen. Grosvenor was heartily received as the permanent chairman, as was Gen. Dick when he head the resolutions, which were adopted substantially as he had drafted them, with the exception of the Cuban resolution, in which there was a compromise.

TAFT REACHES ROME.

Will Consult Pope Regarding Disposition of Philippine Property.

Rome, May 29.—Gov. Taft arrived here Wednesday and was received by Bishop O'Gorman of Sioux Falls, S. D., who has been in Rome for some time past. The Taft commission will meet Cardinal Rampolla, the papal secretary of state, next Saturday.

The Taft commission referred to in the above dispatch was appointed for the purpose of reaching, if possible, a friendly understanding with the Vatican authorities regarding the disposition of the property of the religious orders and other church property in the Philippine islands. The commission proper is composed of Gov. Taft and Bishop O'Gorman. Col. Crowder and Major Porter of the judge advocate's department at Washington are are attached to the commission in an advisory capacity. Gov. Taft left New York for Italy May 17.

Noted Minister Dead.

New Orleans, May 29.—Rev. B. M. Palmer, the noted Presbyterian minister, died here Wednesday afternoon from the effects of injuries received by being struck by a street car in this city on May 5. He was 84 years of age, and on account of his advanced age was not able to recuperate after the severe shock of the accident. Dr. Palmer had a notable reputation as a preacher, and his church here was visited by persons from all parts of the country. At one time he was elected to the chair of pastoral theology at Princeton and has received a call to become pastor of Dr. Alexander's church in New York. Both of these offers he refused. Dr. Palmer's wife died in 1888. He had six children, only one of whom is living.

Dickens' Unfortunate Love.

Concerning Charles Dickens, it is well known that though he married Catherine, one of George Hogarth's three daughters, in 1836, he was later devotedly attached to her sister Mary. Why he did not marry Mary in the first place is not certainly known, unless it be that Mary, a young woman of great loveliness of character, had successfully concealed her own affection for Catherine's betrothed in order to save her sister from disappointment.—Percy Fitzgerald in Harper's Magazine.

"If women would pay more attention to their health we would have more happy wives, mothers and daughters, and if they would observe results they would find that the doctors' prescriptions do not perform the many cures they are given credit for.

"In consulting with my druggist he advised McElree's Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught, and so I took it and have every reason to thank him for a new life opened up to me with restored health, and it only took three months to cure me."

Wine of Cardui is a regulator of the menstrual functions and is a most astonishing tonic for women. It cures scanty, suppressed, too frequent, irregular and painful menstruation, falling of the womb, whites and flooding. It is helpful when approaching womanhood, during pregnancy, after childbirth and in change of life. It frequently brings a dear baby to homes that have been barren for years. All druggists have $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

WAR OVER

Conflict in South Africa Brought To An End.

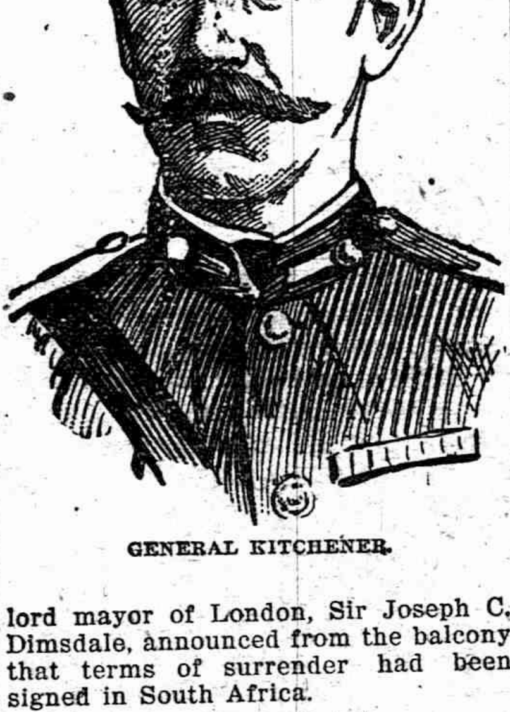
GREAT REJOICING IN LONDON

Lords Kitchener and Milner and Boer Representatives Signed the Terms Saturday Evening—Washington Receives Official Confirmation.

London, June 2.—An official cablegram from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria Saturday, May 31, 11:15 p. m., says:

"A document containing terms of surrender was signed here this evening at half-past 10 o'clock by all the Boer representatives, as well as by Lord Milner (the British high commissioner in South Africa) and myself."

The news of peace in South Africa, contained in the foregoing dispatch from Lord Kitchener, was not expected in London yesterday. Soon after the receipt of the dispatch, however, the news spread to the clubs and hotels and was received with much enthusiasm. The church bells were rung to acclaim the good news. A crowd gathered at the Mansion house and the lord mayor of London, Sir Joseph C. Dimsdale, announced from the balcony that terms of surrender had been signed in South Africa.



GENERAL KITCHENER.

London Is Joyful.

Lord Kitchener's definite announcement of peace was received at the war office at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon and was communicated to King Edward and all the members of the cabinet before it was given to the public. Last night the Sunday evening calm of the London streets was broken by enthusiastic singing, shouting and hornblowing.

The hotels, the clubs, the public houses and the streets were not the only places where the people were actively demonstrating their joy. The peace news was announced in the churches, and by some congregations it was received with applause. In all the churches of London prayers of thanksgiving were offered and special hymns were sung.

Pretoria, June 2.—A proclamation which was issued in connection with the signing of peace terms, declares that, notwithstanding the proclamations of Mr. Kruger that interest on the bonds of the Transvaal republic would be suspended so long as the war lasted, such interest shall begin to accrue at once. June 26 and June 27, the days of King Edward's coronation, have been proclaimed public holidays here.

Halifax, N. S., June 2.—The news of peace in South Africa reached Halifax early last evening and quietly spread throughout the city. Great enthusiasm was manifested. The pastors of all the churches announced the news from their pulpits, and at the close of the evening services prayers of thanksgiving were offered, the national anthem was sung and fire and church bells were rung.

St. John, N. B., June 2.—In nearly all the churches here last night Lord Kitchener's cablegram was the text of sermons of thanksgiving or the keynote of a hymn of praise for the end of the long struggle in South Africa. The rejoicing was general.

Washington, June 2.—The officials of the British embassy here share the jubilant feeling existing in London over the termination of the war in South Africa. They view with much satisfaction the close of the long struggle. Official notice of the signing of the terms of surrender came to Mr. Raikes, the British charge here in a cablegram from the foreign office. It was very brief and was in accord with the statements contained in the Associated press dispatches. It probably will be communicated formally to the United States government today.

Furnace Men Strike.

Youngstown, O., June 2.—The furnacemen's strike, affecting all the independent and the Republic iron and steel companies' furnaces in the Mahoning and Shenango valleys, began Sunday morning. The Hubbard furnace, the only one in operation yesterday, closed down last night, throwing, all told, 3,000 men out of work. No United States steel corporation mills are yet affected, but President McMahon of the union asserts that some of them will be closed within a few days. President Thompson of the Republic Iron & Steel Co. says the strike is an unfair one to that company, the union forcing the independent furnaces into a position which requires 50 per cent greater cost for production than the United States steel corporation pays.

Her Dearest Friend.

"If you were I," she said to her dearest friend, "would you be married in the spring or the fall?"

"If I were you," was the unhesitating reply, "and had actually secured a man, I would set the wedding for the earliest date possible."—Chicago Post.

Happy Time in Old Town.

EXPECT TROUBLE

Mines in Coal District Are Being Fortified

WITH POLICE AND FENCES

Engineers and Pumpmen Will Quit Today Unless Operators Accede to Their Demands—Enormous Damages Would Result.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 2.—At 7 o'clock this morning the order of the United Mine Workers of America, calling out all the stationary engineers, firemen and pumpmen unless the companies grant them an eight-hour work day at present wages will go into effect and no one can foretell the outcome of the new movement. Victory for either side will be of immense advantage and both parties to the controversy are striving with all the power at their command to win. If the union succeeds in shutting down the pumps the mine properties will suffer damage that may reach into millions of dollars, and if the employers should be able to keep the water out of their workings without the aid of organized labor it means that the power of the union in the anthracite region has reached its limit and that all help in the effort to force the mine owners to grant the demands of the great army of 147,000 men must come from some outside source. The mine workers say they will preserve the property of the companies if the engineers, pumpmen and firemen are given what they ask for, and the companies say they will permit no outsiders to fix the hours and wages of their men. Neither side shows the slightest disposition to yield, and, in the words of one mining superintendent, "it's a fight to a finish."

It is a fact that the labor leaders have counselled the strikers to remain quiet and commit no violation of the law. It is claimed by the union that nearly all of the pumpmen and firemen will quit work and that about three-fourths of the engineers will also refuse to continue work. This was privately admitted Sunday by a company official familiar with the situation.

Plenty of Non-Union Men.

Practically all the non-union men to be employed are now in the region. The companies say that the number of those who have volunteered to fill strikers' places will be surprisingly large and that no difficulty has been encountered in selecting good men. An army of approximately 3,000 armed coal and iron policemen, sworn in under a law of the state of Pennsylvania, is in the field ready to protect these men and the mining properties. There are also scattered throughout the country, it is said, about 1,000 men who are doing secret work for the companies. Every colliery in the coal belt has either a board or a barbed wire fence around it.

Mahanoy City, Pa., June 2.—Three-fourths of the firemen, hoisting engineers and pumpmen, comprising the day forces employed at the 15 collieries of the several mining corporations in the Mahanoy valley, quit work last evening in response to the call of the miners' organization for an eight-hour day. Representatives of the coal companies say they are amply prepared to cope with the strike situation and that they have enough non-union men to fill the strikers' places.

Hazelton, Pa., June 2.—The several hundred special officers brought here Saturday night for guard duty at the collieries in the Hazelton district were distributed to the mines Sunday. Public sentiment here is against the special officers and the local union yesterday made an effort to induce the servant girls at the hotel, where the men remained over night, to strike. The girls are still at work. Some of the mine workers' leaders think the officers are non-union firemen and pump runners.

Susquehanna, Pa., June 2.—The firemen, pump runners and engineers employed in the Erie Railroad Co.'s mines at Forest City, Susquehanna county, have voted not to go on strike today. In anticipation of trouble after today, the company's property has been enclosed with an eight-foot barber wire fence and will be guarded by a large force of coal and iron police, sworn in by the authorities of Susquehanna county.

Fatal Bicycle Collision.

Lancaster, Pa., June 2.—One man is dead and another dying as the result of a bicycle collision which occurred here Saturday night. The victims are Walter Powell and Daniel Treewitz, each aged about 17 years. Powell is a speedy amateur bicyclist. Paced by Treewitz, he was training for a race on Wheatland avenue. It was dark and neither bicycle had a lamp. Powell, thinking he had outstripped Treewitz, turned to find him and they collided, both being thrown violently to the street. Powell was carried, unconscious, to St. Joseph's hospital. His skull was fractured and he died Sunday, without having regained consciousness. Treewitz, who at first was not thought to have been seriously hurt, has developed alarming symptoms from internal injuries, and there is but little chance for his recovery.

A Third Body Found.

Marquette, Mich., June 2.—The body of one of the two Curlson brothers, drowned in Lake Michigamme last fall, together with the two Lavine brothers, was recovered last night. It is the third body found, after a search lasting practically ever since the quadruple fatality, seven months ago, and after the expenditure of large sums of money.

He Kept Grand Medicine.

In a Scotch village, where a young doctor had lately started practice, a workman had the misfortune to get his finger bruised badly in one of the mills. A doctor was sent for, and on properly dressing the finger the man nearly fainted. He was asked if he would take a little spirits to revive him. "Mon," he exclaimed, with feeling, "that wud just be the very life o' me!" The doctor gave him a good glass, which he greedily swallowed, and on recovering his breath his first words were, "Well, doctor, I ken unco' little aboot yer skill, but, mon, ye keep grand

HEADED THEM OFF

Port Huron Woman Refuses Extension of a Drain

TO RUN ACROSS HER PROPERTY

When Digging Began She Employed Another Force to Fill in the Excavation—Police Called Out—Threatens Suit Against the City and Neighbors.

Port Huron, Mich., June 2.—Today will probably see the beginning of a bitter legal fight, in which two of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of the city will be interested.

Mrs. J. E. Botsford owns a stretch of land facing her Military street residence on the St. Clair river and for several years a drain has run through the property to carry off the refuse water of the Military street residence of David McMorran.

Recently the sewer became clogged up and permission was asked of Mrs. Botsford to extend the drain to the river to avoid further trouble from ineffective sewerage, but this was denied. Saturday a permit was secured from city officials to extend the main drain, and the superintendent of public works had charge of the work. Two minutes after midnight Saturday night the work began and a gang of men was set to work. About 4 o'clock Sunday morning Mrs. Botsford, looking from her window, saw the workmen, and hastily donning her clothes, she tried to frustrate their efforts.

Inside of an hour she had another gang of men at work, and as soon as one gang would shovel out the ditch the other would fill it up. The police force was called out and at noon Mrs. Botsford gave way and withdrew her men, promising, however, to sue the city and the McMorrans for damages.

Mrs. Botsford claims that one of the men assaulted her while she was trying to stop the work.

The neighborhood has been the scene of other trouble. Several years ago the property owners of that vicinity, including Mrs. Botsford, combined to oust the Fitzgerald Bros.' machine shop, and succeeded.

ROADS MAY COMBINE

Clergue and Webb Systems May Compete With Canadian Pacific.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., June 2.—Dr. Seward Webb, a New York railroad capitalist, arrived at the Soo Sunday afternoon, the guest of F. H. Clergue. Webb is accompanied by a party of Canadian capitalists, said to be interested with him in the purchase of the Canadian Atlantic.

It is rumored that the conference with Clergue has for its object a combination of the two Clergue roads with the proposed Webb system to compete with the Canadian Pacific. The Manitoulin road taps one of the richest mineral regions of the northwest, and the Algoman Central would give an outlet for the mineral wealth of the Algoma district.

Adventist Goes to Africa.

Battle Creek, Mich., June 2.—Joseph Booth of this city will preside over the new Seventh Day Adventist mission at Nyassaland, in British East Central Africa. The Battle Creek church will pay Mr. Booth's salary for one year. The pastor and family sail from London this month.

Postoffice Clerks Advertise.

Jackson, Mich., June 2.—A state branch of the National Association of Postoffice Clerks has been organized here. National Secretary R. C. Loeffler of Milwaukee and Arthur Donoghue of Chicago, who represented the national president, were the organizers.

Fell Off Bridge and Drowned.

St. Joseph, Mich., June 2.—Ellsworth Shafer, 7 years old, was drowned in the Paw Paw river here while returning from fishing with his father. The boy stumbled while crossing the Big Four bridge and fell into 10 feet of water.

Made Sure of His Death.

Manistee, Mich., June 2.—Charles Triber, 72 years old, committed suicide by hanging himself to rafters in his shed. He also shot himself previous to the hanging. The cause was despondency. He leaves a family of five children.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Pickpockets Got Busy.—Pickpockets were busy at the Memorial day services attendant on the unveiling of the McKinley statue at Muskegon. The crowd was densely packed and a number of serious losses have been reported to the police.

Tied Weights to His Body.—Fred Eichler, living near Hillsdale, committed suicide by drowning in Bear lake. He carried three plow points two and a half miles from his home to the lake, tied them around his body and waded out into the lake beyond his depth. The body was recovered.

Threshers Organize.—The threshers of Jackson county have organized a branch of the National Protective association, and intend to fix a price for threshing which will give them a living profit and pay wear of machines. The prices this year will not be less than 2 cents for oats and 3 cents for wheat.

Mt. Pleasant Faculty Re-Elected.—The state board of education concluded its May meeting at Ypsilanti Saturday. The board reappointed the entire faculty of the Mt. Pleasant Normal, except in the case of the librarian, who will be Minnie Converse in place of Mary Jordan, resigned. It created a new department at the Ypsilanti Normal—that of library economy, which deals with the use and management of libraries.

Virulent Cancer Cured.

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by Druggist G. W. Roberts, of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel bilious kidney and microbe poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions, ulcers and sores vanish. U. S. AMBASSADOR

Britain's Choice Will Probably be Michael Henry Herbert

TO SUCCEED LORD PAUNCEFOTE

Mr. Herbert Is at Present Secretary of the British Embassy at Paris—He Is the Husband of an American Girl.

London, May 31.—The Hon. Michael Henry Herbert, who is nominally secretary to the British embassy at Paris, will probably be the next British ambassador to the United States in succession to the late Lord Pauncefote.

Mr. Herbert's appointment will probably not be announced until the remains of Lord Pauncefote arrive in England. The only question in regard to Mr. Herbert's selection is the approval of King Edward. The Associated Press understands that his majesty is taking a keen personal interest in the matter of Lord Pauncefote's successor.

The matter of Mr. Herbert's going to Washington has been still further complicated by the unexpected delay in sending over Lord Pauncefote's remains. The British government, officially, fully expected Lord Pauncefote's body would arrive in England prior to the coronation of King Edward, and it is not a little disconcerted by the receipt of dispatches announcing that the obsequies in England will not occur until July.

Mr. Herbert's marriage with Lelia, daughter of Richard T. Wilson of New York, as a result of which he became closely related to the Vanderbilts, the Ogden Goelets and the Astors, will not in any way interfere, according to opinion here, with his usefulness as Great Britain's ambassador at Washington. Mr. Herbert's record at Washington as charge d'affaires from 1888 until 1889, and as secretary to the British legation here from 1892 to 1893, and his work as British agent on the Venezuelan commission, eminently fit him, so official belief inclines, for his proposed new and important duties.

At Paris Mr. Herbert's present position is somewhat curious, for, while holding the rank of a full-fledged minister, he has to take second place when Sir Edmund J. Monson, the ambassador, is resident in France.

Washington, May 31.—While no official information can be had yet as to whether this government has been sounded as to Mr. Herbert's acceptability as ambassador, it is believed by people familiar with his standing here while secretary of the legation and charge d'affaires, that his selection would be entirely agreeable to the United States. He filled his post here with tact and ability and was of a courteous and agreeable personality.

Four Texas Miners Killed.

San Antonio, Tex., May 31.—Four killed instantly and six fatally injured is the result of a gas explosion in the shaft number 5 of the Hondon coal mines of the Mexican International railroad, 75 miles from Eagle Pass. The explosion occurred last Friday, but the news of the accident has just reached the city. The shaft in which the explosion occurred is the same in which an explosion occurred last February, killing 106 men and injuring almost as many more. The names of the dead and injured were not given in this second disaster, but all were Mexicans.

Enormous Strike Likely.

Chicago, May 31.—Every packing house in the west belonging to "the big six" is to be attacked by the teamsters' union on Monday if the local companies do not recede from their position and sign the agreement. The tie-up in Chicago, which is declared complete, is to be carried to Omaha, Kansas City, St. Joseph and St. Louis, and the teamsters, whose national headquarters are in Chicago, have received assurances from their locals at those points that all the men will obey the summons and go out. This move will be national in its effects.

Aeronaut Met Death.

Kingston, N. Y., May 31.—Harry Hicks, an aeronaut, was killed at Kingston Point, a summer resort, Friday. When his balloon had reached an altitude of about 2,000 feet Hicks commenced the descent by means of a parachute, coming slowly to about 800 feet above the Hudson river. For some reason he lost his hold and fell, striking head first on a sand bar in the river.

Representatives Upbraided.

Washington, May 31.—Seven of the 12 Michigan congressmen are home, mostly on political business, and if they don't return soon their pay may be stopped. The committee on rules of the house is working on a rule to dock all absent members for the balance of the season unless they are physically unable to attend.

Big Athletic Meet.

Chicago, May 31.—Fourteen colleges and leading universities of the middle west will decide the track and field championship for the year 1902 on Marshall Field today. This will be the second annual meet under the auspices of the Inter-Collegiate Conference Athletic association.

Cleveland, O., May 31.—The Detroit United Railway Co. has been sold. The deal was closed in New York on Thursday, and for the present the names of the purchasers will be kept secret.

Earthquakes in the South.

Greenville, S. C., May 31.—A distinct earthquake shock was felt here early this morning. The tremor was accompanied by a low rumbling sound, continuing for several seconds.

The Three D's.

"Down in Greensboro," said a citizen of that North Carolina town, "I knew three 'drummers.' They seemed to be boon companions. The first one traveled for a large brewing company in Baltimore, and the second represented a wholesale drughouse in the west. These two men, while going through the south, fell in with a man who was selling coffins to undertakers in the country towns. When the trio reached Greensboro to spend Sunday—you know all the 'drummers' come into Greensboro to spend Sunday—they had already been christened the three D's—Drinks, Drugs and Death.—New York Press.

RALPH

CHAPTER VIII.

THE BREAKING OF THE LEAGUE.

THERE is no doubt in my mind that nature designed me for a great painter. A railway director interfered with that design of nature, as he has with many another of hers, and by the transmission of an order for mountain pieces by the dozen, together with a check so large that I feared there was some mistake, he determined me to be an illustrator and designer for railway and like publications. I do not like these people ordering "by the dozen." Why should they not consider an artist's finer feelings? Perhaps they cannot understand them, but they understand my pictures, and I understand their checks, and there we are quits. But so it came that I remained in Black Rock long enough to witness the breaking of the league.

Looking back upon the events of that night from the midst of gentle and decent surroundings, they now seem strangely unreal, but to me then they appeared only natural.

It was the Good Friday ball that wrecked the league, for the fact that the promoters of the ball determined that it should be a ball rather than a dance was taken by the league men as a concession to the new public opinion in favor of respectability created by the league. And when the manager's patronage had been secured—they failed to get Mrs. Mavor's—and it was further announced that, though held in the Black Rock hotel ballroom—indeed there was no other place—refreshments suited to the peculiar tastes of league men would be provided, it was felt to be almost a necessity that the league should approve, should indeed welcome, this concession to the public opinion in favor of respectability created by the league.

There were extreme men on both sides, of course. "Idaho Jack," professional gambler, for instance, frankly considered that the whole town was going to unmentionable depths of propriety. The organization of the league was regarded by him and by many others as a sad retrograde toward the bondage of the ancient and dying east, and that he could not get drunk when and where he pleased "Idaho," as he was called, regarded as a personal grievance.

But Idaho was never enamored of the social ways of Black Rock. He was shocked and disgusted when he discovered that a "gun" was decreed by British law to be an unnecessary adornment of a card table. The manner of his discovery must have been interesting to behold.

It is said that Idaho was industriously pursuing his avocation in Slavin's, with his gun lying upon the card table convenient to his hand, when in walked Policeman Jackson, her majesty's sole representative in the Black Rock district. Jackson—"Stonewall Jackson," or "Stonewall," as he was called for obvious reasons—after watching the game for a few moments gently tapped the pistol and asked what he used this for.

"I'll show you in two holy minutes if you don't light out," said Idaho, hardly looking up, but very angrily, for the luck was against him. But Jackson tapped upon the table and said sweetly:

"You're a stranger here. You ought to get a guidebook and post yourself. Now, the boys know I don't interfere with an innocent little game, but there is a regulation against playing it with guns; so," he added, even more sweetly, but fastening Idaho with a look from his steel gray eyes, "I'll just take charge of this," picking up the revolver. "It might go off."

Idaho's rage, great as it was, was quite swallowed up in his amazed disgust at the state of society that would permit such an outrage upon personal liberty. He was quite unable to play any more that evening, and it took several drinks all round to restore him to articulate speech. The rest of the night was spent in retailing for his instruction stories of the ways of Stonewall Jackson.

Idaho bought a new gun, but he wore it "in his clothes" and used it chiefly in the pastime of shooting out the lights or in picking off the heels from the boys' boots while a stag dance was in progress in Slavin's. But in Stonewall's presence Idaho was a most correct citizen. Stonewall he could understand and appreciate. He was 6 feet 3 and had an eye of unpleasant penetration. But this new feeling in the community for respectability he could neither understand nor endure. The league became the object of his indignant aversion and the league men of his contempt. He had many sympathizers, and frequent were the assaults upon the newly born sobriety of Billy Breen and others of the league, but Geordie's watchful care and Mrs. Mavor's steady influence, together with the loyal cooperation of the league men, kept Billy safe so far. Nixon, too, was a marked man. It may be that he carried himself with unnecessary jauntiness toward Slavin and Idaho, saluting the former with, "Awful dry weather, eh, Slavin?" and the latter with, "Hello, old sport! How's times?" causing them to swear deeply and, as it turned out, to do more than swear.

But, on the whole, the antileague men were in favor of a respectable ball, and most of the league men determined to show their appreciation of the concession of the committee to the principles of the league in the important matter of refreshments by attending in force.

Nixon would not go. However jauntily he might talk, he could not trust himself, as he said, where whisky was flowing, for it got into his nose "like a fishhook into a salmon." He was from Nova Scotia. For like reason Vernon Winton, the young Oxford fellow, would not go. When they chaffed, his lips grew a little thinner and the color deepened in his handsome face, but he went on his way. Geordie despised the "hale hypothick" as a "daft ploy," and the spending of $5 upon a ticket he considered a "sinfu' waste o' guid siller," and he warned Billy against "coontenancin' ony sic redeeklus nonsense."

But no one expected Billy to go, although in the last two months he had done wonders for his personal appearance and for his position in the social scale as well. They all knew what a fight he was making and esteemed him accordingly. How well I remember the pleased pride in his face when he told me in the afternoon of the committee's urgent request that he should join the orchestra with his cello! It was not simply that his cello was his joy and pride, but he felt it to be a recognition of his return to respectability.

Had Mr. Craig not been away at the Landing that week, had Geordie not been on the night shift, had Mrs. Mavor not been so occupied with the care of her sick child, it may be Billy might have been saved his fall.

The anticipation of the ball stirred Black Rock and the camps with a thrill of expectant delight. Nowadays when I find myself forced to leave my quiet smoke in my studio after dinner at the call of some social engagement which I have failed to elude I groan at my hard lot, and I wonder as I look back and remember the pleasurable anticipation with which I viewed the approaching ball. But I do not wonder now any more than I did then at the eager delight of the men who for seven days in the week swung their picks up in the dark breasts of the mines or who chopped and sawed among the solitary silences of the great forests. Any break in the long and weary monotony was welcome. What mattered the cost or consequence? To the rudest and least cultured of them the sameness of the life must have been hard to bear, but what it was to men who had seen life in its most cultured and attractive forms I fail to imagine. From the mine, black and foul, to the shack, bare, cheerless and sometimes hideously repulsive, life swung in heart grinding monotony till the longing for a "big drink" or some other "big break" became too great to bear.

It was well on toward evening when Sandy's four horse team, with a load of men from the woods, came swinging round the curves of the mountain road and down the street. A gay crowd they were with their bright, brown faces and hearty voices, and in ten minutes the whole street seemed alive with lumbermen—they had a faculty of spreading themselves so. After night fell the miners came down "done up slick," for this was a great occasion, and they must be up to it. The manager appeared in evening dress, but this was voted "too giddy" by the majority.

As Graeme and I passed up to the Black Rock hotel, in the large storeroom of which the ball was to be held, we met old man Nelson, looking very grave.

"Going, Nelson, aren't you?" I said.

"Yes," he answered slowly. "I'll drop in, though I don't like the looks of things much."

"Perhaps not," replied Nelson, "but I wish Mr. Craig were at home." And then he added, "There's Idaho and Slavin together, and you may bet the devil isn't far off."

But Graeme laughed at his suspicion, and we passed on. The orchestra was tuning up. There were two violins, a concertina and the cello. Billy Breen was lovingly fingering his instrument, now and then indulging himself in a little snatch of some air that came to him out of his happier past. He looked perfectly delighted, and as I paused to listen he gave me a proud glance out of his deep, little, blue eyes and went on playing softly to himself. Presently Shaw came along.

"That's good, Billy," he called out. "You've got the trick yet, I see."

But Billy only nodded and went on playing.

"Where's Nixon?" I asked.

"Gone to bed," said Shaw, "and I am glad of it. He finds that the safest place on pay day afternoon. The boys don't bother him there."

The dancing room was lined on two sides with beer barrels and whisky kegs. At one end the orchestra sat; at the other was a table with refreshments, where the soft drinks might be had. Those who wanted anything else might pass through a short passage into the bar just behind.

This was evidently a superior kind of ball, for the men kept on their coats and went through the various figures with faces of unnatural solemnity, but the strain upon their feelings was quite apparent, and it became a question how long it could be maintained. As the trips through the passageway became more frequent the dancing grew in vigor and hilarity until by the time supper was announced the stiffness had sufficiently vanished to give no further anxiety to the committee.

But the committee had other cause for concern, inasmuch as after supper certain of the miners appeared with their coats off and proceeded to "knock the knots out of the floor" in breakdown dances of extraordinary energy. These, however, were beguiled into the barroom and "filled up" for safety, for the committee were determined that the respectability of the ball should be preserved to the end. Their reputation was at stake not in Black Rock only, but at the Landing as well, from which most of the ladies had come, and to be shamed in the presence of the Landing people could not be borne. Their difficulties seemed to be increasing, for at this point something seemed to go wrong with the orchestra. The cello appeared to be wandering aimlessly up and down the scale, occasionally picking up with the tune with animation and then dropping it. As Billy saw me approaching he drew himself up with great solemnity, gravely winked at me and said:

And he wagged his little head sagely, playing all the while for dear life, now second and now lead.

Poor Billy! I pitied him, but I thought chiefly of the beautiful, eager face that leaned toward him the night the league was made and of the bright voice that said, "You'll sign with me, Billy?" and it seemed to me a cruel deed to make him lose his grip of life and hope, for this is what the pledge meant to him.

While I was trying to get Billy away to some safe place I heard a great shouting in the direction of the bar, followed by trampling and scuffling of feet in the passageway. Suddenly a man burst through, crying:

"Let me go! Stand back! I know what I'm about!"

It was Nixon, dressed in his best—black clothes, blue shirt, red tie, looking handsome enough, but half drunk and wildly excited. The "Highland Fling" competition was on at the moment, and Angus Campbell, Lachlan's brother, was representing the lumber camps in the contest. Nixon looked on approvingly for a few moments. Then, with a quick movement, he seized the little highlander, swung him in his powerful arms clean off the floor and deposited him gently upon a beer barrel. Then he stepped into the center of the room, bowed to the judges and began a sailor's hornpipe.

The committee were perplexed, but after deliberation they decided to humor the new competitor, especially as they knew that Nixon with whisky in him was unpleasant to cross.

Lightly and gracefully he went through his steps, the men crowding in from the bar to admire, for Nixon was famed for his hornpipe. But when after the hornpipe he proceeded to execute a clog dance, garnished with acrobatic feats, the committee interfered. There were cries of "Put him out!" and "Let him alone! Go on, Nixon!" And Nixon hurled back into the crowd two of the committee who had laid remonstrating hands upon him, and, standing in the open center, cried out scornfully:

"Put me out! Put me out! Certainly! Help yourselves! Don't mind me!" Then, grinding his teeth so that I heard them across the room, he added, with savage deliberation, "If any man lays a finger on me, I'll—I'll eat his liver cold."

He stood for a few moments glaring round upon the company and then strode toward the bar, followed by the crowd, wildly yelling. The ball was forthwith broken up. I looked around for Billy, but he was nowhere to be seen. Graeme touched my arm.

"There's going to be something of a time, so just keep your eyes skinned," he said.

"What are you going to do?" I asked.

"Do? Keep myself beautifully out of trouble," he replied.

In a few moments the crowd came surging back, headed by Nixon, who was waving a whisky bottle over his head and yelling as one possessed.

"Hello!" exclaimed Graeme softly. "I begin to see. Look there!"

"What's up?" I asked.

"You see Idaho and Slavin and their pets," he replied. "They've got poor Nixon in tow. Idaho is rather nasty," he added, "but I think I'll take a hand in this game. I've seen some of Idaho's work before."

The scene was one quite strange to me and was wild beyond description. A hundred men filled the room. Bottles were passed from hand to hand, and men drank their fill. Behind the refreshment tables stood the hotel man and his barkeeper, with their coats off and sleeves rolled up to the shoulder, passing out bottles and drawing beer and whisky from two kegs hoisted up for that purpose. Nixon was in his glory. It was his night. Every man was to get drunk at his expense, he proclaimed, flinging down bills upon the table. Near him were some league men he was treating liberally, and never far away were Idaho and Slavin passing bottles, but evidently drinking little.

I followed Graeme, not feeling too comfortable, for this sort of thing was new to me, but admiring the cool assurance with which he made his way through the crowd that swayed and yelled and swore and laughed in a most disconcerting manner.

"Hello!" shouted Nixon as he caught sight of Graeme. "Here you are!" passing him a bottle. "You're a knocker, a double handed front door knocker. You polished off old whisky soak here, old demijohn," pointing to Slavin, "and I'll lay five to one we can lick any blankety blank thieves in the crowd." And he held up a roll of bills.

But Graeme proposed that he should give the hornpipe again, and the floor was cleared at once, for Nixon's hornpipe was very popular and tonight, of course, was in high favor. In the midst of his dance Nixon stopped short; his "You ain't used to it, and you can't be expected to do it, but it just makes me feel good—let out of school like—to properly do 'em up, the blank, blank"— And off he went again. It was only under the pressure of Mr. Craig's prayers and commands that he finally agreed to "hold in, though it's tough."

"What's to be done?" asked Shaw.

"Nothing," answered Craig bitterly.

He was exhausted with his long ride from the Landing and broken with bitter disappointment over the ruin of all that he had labored so long to accomplish.

"Nonsense!" said Graeme. "There's a good deal to do."

It was agreed that Craig should remain with Nixon, while the others of us should gather up what fragments we could find of the broken league. We had just opened the door when we met a man striding up at a great pace. It was Geordie Crawford.

"Hae ye seen the lad?" was his salutation.

No one replied, so I told Geordie of my last sight of Billy in the orchestra.

"An' did ye no' gang aifter him?" he asked in indignant surprise, adding, with some contempt, "Mon, but ye're a feckless buddie!"

"Billy gone, too?" said Shaw. "They might have let Billy alone."

Poor Craig stood in dumb agony. Billy's fall seemed more than he could bear. We went out, leaving him heartbroken amid the ruins of his league.

Michigan Gets Her Claims.

Lansing, Mich., June 2.—Gov. Bliss received news from the comptroller of the treasury department at Washington that a recent decision of the department had reversed the former ruling relative to the state's claim for civil war money and that Michigan would accordingly receive the $255,397.76 which the governor and Major Ralph Stone have been endeavoring to collect since last February.

Successful Trial.

Detroit, Mich., June 2.—The Eastern States, the first of the new palace steamships to ply between Detroit and Buffalo, gave a matinee to 2,500 prominent shippers and citizens Saturday and fully demonstrated the claim of the new boat to the title of queen of the lakes. The first trip of the boat over its regular route occurs Monday at 4 p. m.

The Jackpot Defined.

A subscriber asks, "What is a jackpot that I read about once in awhile, and what seems to be the difficulty in getting it open?"

A jackpot is one for properly cooking fish and is especially recommended for suckers. It has a time lock, over the combination of which millions of Americans have burned the midnight oil in vain.—American Thresherman.

WHAT HE THOUGHT OF HIM

A Postal Card Serial Story and a Lost Suit For Slander.

A certain Kansas man, so the story goes, wanted to tell a neighbor what he thought of him without laying himself open to a suit for damages. So he hit on the plan of sending him each day a postal card with only one word written on it in a large hand, in addition to the date obscurely tucked away in a corner.

The person receiving the cards recognized the handwriting and, suspecting something, kept them until they stopped coming, when he read them consecutively in the order of their reception. What he read was, "Ridiculous old Bill Jones is the meanest cuss in town," and he at once instituted a suit for slander against the sender.

The latter's lawyer, however, called attention to the fact that the postal card containing "ridiculous," though mailed first, was dated the day after the date of the card having the word "town." Moreover, a careful inspection would show that after the word "ridiculous" was an exclamation point, and after the word "town" was an interrogation mark, so that the series of postal cards might be made to read: "Old Bill is the meanest cuss in town? Ridiculous!" He claimed, therefore, that instead of slandering the plaintiff his client had defended him from slander, and this plea was sustained by the court.

But, all the same, everybody in town insisted that the first reading of the cards was the correct one, so that the writer attained his object.

Reasons For Pride.

There was present at a certain big dinner in England an American woman of prominence who was somewhat annoyed by a tactless English woman who undertook to banter her and who said:

"I take it for granted that you have no coats of arms in your new country."

"Of course no American family could have one unless it was borrowed from English ancestry," replied the former American.

"For instance, has your family any especial cause for pride over your grandfather?" persisted this particularly tactless female cad.

Then the American woman opened up and replied as calmly as possible under the circumstances, "Not much, perhaps, only that my grandfather on my mother's side received Burgoyne's sword when he surrendered at Saratoga and my grandfather on my father's side received the sword of Cornwallis at Yorktown."

A Small Legal Fee.

The smallest fee ever taken by an English counsel was sixpence, that fee having on one occasion been taken by the late Sir John Holker. Barristers' fees were in olden times much less than those now paid. An entry occurs in the churchwardens' accounts of St. Margaret's, Westminster, for 1476, showing that a fee of 3s. 8d., with fourpence for his dinner, was paid to Robert Flypott, counsel, learned in the law, for his advice.

In Nare's "Glossary" a barrister's fee was stated to be an angel, or 10 shillings. These are somewhat different figures from the 600 guineas paid to Sir Charles Russell a number of years ago at the Leeds assizes for less than three hours' work, or at the rate of over 3 guineas a minute.—London Tit-Bits.

In the Art Gallery.

"Ah," exclaimed Mrs. Oldcastle, who was again enjoying the splendors of her new neighbors' art gallery, "a Corot, I see!"

"Where?" asked her hostess, looking doubtfully at the canvas which seemed to claim the other's attention.

"There," answered Mrs. Oldcastle, pointing with her lorgnette.

"Well, now, I declare. I can't see a single crow anywhere around. You don't mean them little black spots in the left hand corner, do you? Them's clouds!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Limit of Chivalry.

There was once a man who zealously declared that woman has no right to invade the field of wage earning men. She should stay at home, where she belonged.

Finally his four sisters, three cousins and two aunts, who were without a masculine protector, gathered about him and inquired:

"Whose home? Yours?"

Whereat he perceived that theory ends where fact begins.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Attraction.

Gladstone told Lord Ronald Gower that once when he visited Rome he accidentally met Macaulay, who introduced himself to the statesman. On Macaulay's telling him that he took a daily walk in St. Peter's, Gladstone asked him what most attracted him in that place. "The temperature," was the answer.

Very Likely.

Sister Sue—In my new play, Mr. Daniels, the hero and the villain are to fight a duel.

Daniels—And who will get the worst of it?

Brother Tom—The audience.—New York Times.

Entirely Different.

"It's all very well before a girl's married for her to get a flower in her hair," remarked the observer of events and things, "but it's an entirely different matter if, after she's married, she gets her hair in the flour."

If a man asks you a question you can't answer, make your answer so long and shadowy that he will be glad to forget his question.—Atchison Globe.

A Peculiarity of Japan.

In Japan it is always the rule of politeness to pay a trifle more than the sum mentioned on your hotel bill. To settle the account net would be considered an insult or at least a mark of great dissatisfaction. People who have traveled in Japan say that the Japanese always tip the waiter on entering a hotel.

Easy Way Out.

"I'm fixed," said the young doctor. "I've got a big enough practice to keep me in easy circumstances for life."

"But suppose you should lose half your patients?"

"I'd just double my bills on the others."—Philadelphia Press.

A Sad Business.

"Yes," he said sadly, and there was a tear in his eye—"yes, my business has driven me to the wall."

And he went on posting bills.—Chums.

I never saw a failure yet that wasn't worth more than it cost—if the fellow that failed made use of it.—"The Great White Way."

Frederick Schwinghamer, who died at his home near Blissfield recently, had a remarkable military record. Popular Weather Notions.

How often do we hear the remark, "We shall have rain, the atmosphere is so heavy." The reverse is true. When one sees smoke hanging from a chimney, with a tendency to sink to the ground, it indicates that the atmosphere is light—in fact, too light to float the smoke. When the smoke rises from the chimney, it indicates a heavy atmosphere. A column of smoke is not a bad barometer, for a barometer simply records the pressure of the atmosphere. When the atmosphere is light and the smoke settles, the pressure on the mercury is light, and the column falls, indicating storm. When the atmosphere is heavy and the smoke rises, the pressure is greater and the column rises, indicating fair weather. Pleasure seekers and others before starting out should therefore watch the smoke.

BLACK ROCK

By RALPH
CONNOR

CHAPTER VIII.

THE BREAKING OF THE LEAGUE.

THERE is no doubt in my mind that nature designed me for a great painter. A railway director interfered with that design of nature, as he has with many another of hers, and by the transmission of an order for mountain pieces by the dozen, together with a check so large that I feared there was some mistake, he determined me to be an illustrator and designer for railway and like publications. I do not like these people ordering "by the dozen." Why should they not consider an artist's finer feelings? Perhaps they cannot understand them, but they understand my pictures, and I understand their checks, and there we are quits. But so it came that I remained in Black Rock long enough to witness the breaking of the league.

Looking back upon the events of that night from the midst of gentle and decent surroundings, they now seem strangely unreal, but to me then they appeared only natural.

It was the Good Friday ball that wrecked the league, for the fact that the promoters of the ball determined that it should be a ball rather than a dance was taken by the league men as a concession to the new public opinion in favor of respectability created by the league. And when the manager's patronage had been secured—they failed to get Mrs. Mavor's—and it was further announced that, though held in the Black Rock hotel ballroom—indeed there was no other place—refreshments suited to the peculiar tastes of league men would be provided, it was felt to be almost a necessity that the league should approve, should indeed welcome, this concession to the public opinion in favor of respectability created by the league.

There were extreme men on both sides, of course. "Idaho Jack," professional gambler, for instance, frankly considered that the whole town was going to unmentionable depths of propriety. The organization of the league was regarded by him and by many others as a sad retrograde toward the bondage of the ancient and dying east, and that he could not get drunk when and where he pleased "Idaho," as he was called, regarded as a personal grievance.

But Idaho was never enamored of the social ways of Black Rock. He was shocked and disgusted when he discovered that a "gun" was decreed by British law to be an unnecessary adornment of a card table. The manner of his discovery must have been interesting to behold.

It is said that Idaho was industriously pursuing his avocation in Slavin's, with his gun lying upon the card table convenient to his hand, when in walked Policeman Jackson, her majesty's sole representative in the Black Rock district. Jackson—"Stonewall Jackson," or "Stonewall," as he was called for obvious reasons—after watching the game for a few moments gently tapped the pistol and asked what he used this for.

"I'll show you in two holy minutes if you don't light out," said Idaho, hardly looking up, but very angrily, for the luck was against him. But Jackson tapped upon the table and said sweetly:

"You're a stranger here. You ought to get a guidebook and post yourself. Now, the boys know I don't interfere with an innocent little game, but there is a regulation against playing it with guns; so," he added, even more sweetly, but fastening Idaho with a look from his steel gray eyes, "I'll just take charge of this," picking up the revolver. "It might go off."

Idaho's rage, great as it was, was quite swallowed up in his amazed disgust at the state of society that would permit such an outrage upon personal liberty. He was quite unable to play any more that evening, and it took several drinks all round to restore him to articulate speech. The rest of the night was spent in retailing for his instruction stories of the ways of Stonewall Jackson.

Idaho bought a new gun, but he wore it "in his clothes" and used it chiefly in the pastime of shooting out the lights or in picking off the heels from the boys' boots while a stag dance was in progress in Slavin's. But in Stonewall's presence Idaho was a most correct citizen. Stonewall he could understand and appreciate. He was 6 feet 3 and had an eye of unpleasant penetration. But this new feeling in the community for respectability he could neither understand nor endure. The league became the object of his indignant aversion and the league men of his contempt. He had many sympathizers, and frequent were the assaults upon the newly born sobriety of Billy Breen and others of the league, but Geordie's watchful care and Mrs. Mavor's steady influence, together with the loyal cooperation of the league men, kept Billy safe so far. Nixon, too, was a marked man. It may be that he carried himself with unnecessary jauntiness toward Slavin and Idaho, saluting the former with. "Awful dry weather, eh, Slavin?" and the latter with, "Hello, old sport! How's times?" causing them to swear deeply and, as it turned out, to do more than swear.

But, on the whole, the antileague men were in favor of a respectable ball, and most of the league men determined to show their appreciation of the concession of the committee to the principles of the league in the important matter of refreshments by attending in force.

Nixon would not go. However jauntily he might talk, he could not trust himself, as he said, where whisky was flowing, for it got into his nose "like a fishhook into a salmon." He was from Nova Scotia. For like reason Vernon Winton, the young Oxford fellow, would not go. When they chaffed, his lips grew a little thinner and the color deepened in his handsome face, but he went on his way. Geordie despised the "hale hypothick" as a "daft ploy," and the spending of $5 upon a ticket he considered a "sinfu' waste o' guid siller," and he warned Billy against "coontenancin' ony sic redeeklus nonsense."

But no one expected Billy to go, although in the last two months he had done wonders for his personal appearance and for his position in the social scale as well. They all knew what a fight he was making and esteemed him accordingly. How well I remember the pleased pride in his face when he told me in the afternoon of the committee's urgent request that he should join the orchestra with his cello! It was not simply that his cello was his joy and pride, but he felt it to be a recognition of his return to respectability.

Had Mr. Craig not been away at the Landing that week, had Geordie not been on the night shift, had Mrs. Mavor not been so occupied with the care of her sick child, it may be Billy might have been saved his fall.

The anticipation of the ball stirred Black Rock and the camps with a thrill of expectant delight. Nowadays when I find myself forced to leave my quiet smoke in my studio after dinner at the call of some social engagement which I have failed to elude I groan at my hard lot, and I wonder as I look back and remember the pleasurable anticipation with which I viewed the approaching ball. But I do not wonder now any more than I did then at the eager delight of the men who for seven days in the week swung their picks up in the dark breasts of the mines or who chopped and sawed among the solitary silences of the great forests. Any break in the long and weary monotony was welcome. What mattered the cost or consequence? To the rudest and least cultured of them the sameness of the life must have been hard to bear, but what it was to men who had seen life in its most cultured and attractive forms I fail to imagine. From the mine, black and foul, to the shack, bare, cheerless and sometimes hideously repulsive, life swung in heart grinding monotony till the longing for a "big drink" or some other "big break" became too great to bear.

It was well on toward evening when Sandy's four horse team, with a load of men from the woods, came swinging round the curves of the mountain road and down the street. A gay crowd they were with their bright, brown faces and hearty voices, and in ten minutes the whole street seemed alive with lumbermen—they had a faculty of spreading themselves so. After night fell the miners came down "done up slick," for this was a great occasion, and they must be up to it. The manager appeared in evening dress, but this was voted "too giddy" by the majority.

As Graeme and I passed up to the Black Rock hotel, in the large storeroom of which the ball was to be held, we met old man Nelson, looking very grave.

"Going, Nelson, aren't you?" I said.

"Yes," he answered slowly. "I'll drop in, though I don't like the looks of things much."

"Perhaps not," replied Nelson, "but I wish Mr. Craig were at home." And then he added, "There's Idaho and Slavin together, and you may bet the devil isn't far off."

But Graeme laughed at his suspicion, and we passed on. The orchestra was tuning up. There were two violins, a concertina and the cello. Billy Breen was lovingly fingering his instrument, now and then indulging himself in a little snatch of some air that came to him out of his happier past. He looked perfectly delighted, and as I paused to listen he gave me a proud glance out of his deep, little, blue eyes and went on playing softly to himself. Presently Shaw came along.

But Billy only nodded and went on playing.

"Where's Nixon?" I asked.

"Gone to bed," said Shaw, "and I am glad of it. He finds that the safest place on pay day afternoon. The boys don't bother him there."

The dancing room was lined on two sides with beer barrels and whisky kegs. At one end the orchestra sat; at the other was a table with refreshments, where the soft drinks might be had. Those who wanted anything else might pass through a short passage into the bar just behind.

This was evidently a superior kind of ball, for the men kept on their coats and went through the various figures with faces of unnatural solemnity, but the strain upon their feelings was quite apparent, and it became a question how long it could be maintained. As the trips through the passageway became more frequent the dancing grew in vigor and hilarity until by the time supper was announced the stiffness had sufficiently vanished to give no further anxiety to the committee.

But the committee had other cause for concern, inasmuch as after supper certain of the miners appeared with their coats off and proceeded to "knock the knots out of the floor" in breakdown dances of extraordinary energy. These, however, were beguiled into the barroom and "filled up" for safety, for the committee were determined that the respectability of the ball should be preserved to the end. Their reputation was at stake not in Black Rock only, but at the Landing as well, from which most of the ladies had come, and to be shamed in the presence of the Landing people could not be borne. Their difficulties seemed to be increasing, for at this point something seemed to go wrong with the orchestra. The cello appeared to be wandering aimlessly up and down the scale, occasionally picking up with the tune with animation and then dropping it. As Billy saw me approaching he drew himself up with great solemnity, gravely winked at me and said:

And he wagged his little head sagely, playing all the while for dear life, now second and now lead.

Poor Billy! I pitied him, but I thought chiefly of the beautiful, eager face that leaned toward him the night the league was made and of the bright voice that said, "You'll sign with me, Billy?" and it seemed to me a cruel deed to make him lose his grip of life and hope, for this is what the pledge meant to him.

While I was trying to get Billy away to some safe place I heard a great shouting in the direction of the bar, followed by trampling and scuffling of feet in the passageway. Suddenly a man burst through, crying:

"Let me go! Stand back! I know what I'm about!"

It was Nixon, dressed in his best—black clothes, blue shirt, red tie, looking handsome enough, but half drunk and wildly excited. The "Highland Fling" competition was on at the moment, and Angus Campbell, Lachlan's brother, was representing the lumber camps in the contest. Nixon looked on approvingly for a few moments. Then, with a quick movement, he seized the little highlander, swung him in his powerful arms clean off the floor and deposited him gently upon a beer barrel. Then he stepped into the center of the room, bowed to the judges and began a sailor's hornpipe.

The committee were perplexed, but after deliberation they decided to humor the new competitor, especially as they knew that Nixon with whisky in him was unpleasant to cross.

Lightly and gracefully he went through his steps, the men crowding in from the bar to admire, for Nixon was famed for his hornpipe. But when after the hornpipe he proceeded to execute a clog dance, garnished with acrobatic feats, the committee interfered. There were cries of "Put him out!" and "Let him alone! Go on, Nixon!" And Nixon hurled back into the crowd two of the committee who had laid remonstrating hands upon him, and, standing in the open center, cried out scornfully:

"Put me out! Put me out! Certainly! Help yourselves! Don't mind me!" Then, grinding his teeth so that I heard them across the room, he added, with savage deliberation, "If any man lays a finger on me, I'll—I'll eat his liver cold."

He stood for a few moments glaring round upon the company and then strode toward the bar, followed by the crowd, wildly yelling. The ball was forthwith broken up. I looked around for Billy, but he was nowhere to be seen. Graeme touched my arm.

"There's going to be something of a time, so just keep your eyes skinned," he said.

"What are you going to do?" I asked.

"Do? Keep myself beautifully out of trouble," he replied.

In a few moments the crowd came surging back, headed by Nixon, who was waving a whisky bottle over his head and yelling as one possessed.

"Hello!" exclaimed Graeme softly. "I begin to see. Look there!"

"What's up?" I asked.

"You see Idaho and Slavin and their pets," he replied. "They've got poor Nixon in tow. Idaho is rather nasty," he added, "but I think I'll take a hand in this game. I've seen some of Idaho's work before."

The scene was one quite strange to me and was wild beyond description. A hundred men filled the room. Bottles were passed from hand to hand, and men drank their fill. Behind the refreshment tables stood the hotel man and his barkeeper, with their coats off and sleeves rolled up to the shoulder, passing out bottles and drawing beer and whisky from two kegs hoisted up for that purpose. Nixon was in his glory. It was his night. Every man was to get drunk at his expense, he proclaimed, flinging down bills upon the table. Near him were some league men he was treating liberally, and never far away were Idaho and Slavin passing bottles, but evidently drinking little.

I followed Graeme, not feeling too comfortable, for this sort of thing was new to me, but admiring the cool assurance with which he made his way through the crowd that swayed and yelled and swore and laughed in a most disconcerting manner.

"Hello!" shouted Nixon as he caught sight of Graeme. "Here you are!" passing him a bottle. "You're a knocker, a double handed front door knocker. You polished off old whisky soak here, old demijohn," pointing to Slavin, "and I'll lay five to one we can lick any blankety blank thieves in the crowd." And he held up a roll of bills.

But Graeme proposed that he should give the hornpipe again, and the floor was cleared at once, for Nixon's hornpipe was very popular and tonight, of course, was in high favor. In the midst of his dance Nixon stopped short; his "You ain't used to it, and you can't be expected to do it, but it just makes me feel good—let out of school like—to properly do 'em up, the blank, blank"—And off he went again. It was only under the pressure of Mr. Craig's prayers and commands that he finally agreed to "hold in, though it's tough."

"What's to be done?" asked Shaw.

"Nothing," answered Craig bitterly. He was exhausted with his long ride from the Landing and broken with bitter disappointment over the ruin of all that he had labored so long to accomplish.

"Nonsense!" said Graeme. "There's a good deal to do."

It was agreed that Craig should remain with Nixon, while the others of us should gather up what fragments we could find of the broken league. We had just opened the door when we met a man striding up at a great pace. It was Geordie Crawford.

"Hae ye seen the lad?" was his salutation.

No one replied, so I told Geordie of my last sight of Billy in the orchestra.

"An' did ye no' gang aifter him?" he asked in indignant surprise, adding, with some contempt, "Mon, but ye're a feckless buddie!"

"Billy gone, too?" said Shaw. "They might have let Billy alone."

Poor Craig stood in dumb agony. Billy's fall seemed more than he could bear. We went out, leaving him heartbroken amid the ruins of his league.

Michigan Gets Her Claims.

Lansing, Mich., June 2.—Gov. Bliss received news from the comptroller of the treasury department at Washington that a recent decision of the department had reversed the former ruling relative to the state's claim for civil war money and that Michigan would accordingly receive the $255,397.76 which the governor and Major Ralph Stone have been endeavoring to collect since last February.

Successful Trial.

Detroit, Mich., June 2.—The Eastern States, the first of the new palace steamships to ply between Detroit and Buffalo, gave a matinee to 2,500 prominent shippers and citizens Saturday and fully demonstrated the claim of the new boat to the title of queen of the lakes. The first trip of the boat over its regular route occurs Monday at 4 p. m.

The Jackpot Defined.

A subscriber asks, "What is a jackpot that I read about once in awhile, and what seems to be the difficulty in getting it open?"

A jackpot is one for properly cooking fish and is especially recommended for suckers. It has a time lock, over the combination of which millions of Americans have burned the midnight oil in vain.—American Thresherman.

WHAT HE THOUGHT OF HIM

A certain Kansas man, so the story goes, wanted to tell a neighbor what he thought of him without laying himself open to a suit for damages. So he hit on the plan of sending him each day a postal card with only one word written on it in a large hand, in addition to the date obscurely tucked away in a corner.

The person receiving the cards recognized the handwriting and, suspecting something, kept them until they stopped coming, when he read them consecutively in the order of their reception. What he read was, "Ridiculous old Bill Jones is the meanest cuss in town," and he at once instituted a suit for slander against the sender.

The latter's lawyer, however, called attention to the fact that the postal card containing "ridiculous," though mailed first, was dated the day after the date of the card having the word "town." Moreover, a careful inspection would show that after the word "ridiculous" was an exclamation point, and after the word "town" was an interrogation mark, so that the series of postal cards might be made to read: "Old Bill is the meanest cuss in town? Ridiculous!" He claimed, therefore, that instead of slandering the plaintiff his client had defended him from slander, and this plea was sustained by the court.

But, all the same, everybody in town insisted that the first reading of the cards was the correct one, so that the writer attained his object.

Reasons For Pride.

There was present at a certain big dinner in England an American woman of prominence who was somewhat annoyed by a tactless English woman who undertook to banter her and who said:

"I take it for granted that you have no coats of arms in your new country."

"Of course no American family could have one unless it was borrowed from English ancestry," replied the former American.

"For instance, has your family any especial cause for pride over your grandfather?" persisted this particularly tactless female cad.

Then the American woman opened up and replied as calmly as possible under the circumstances, "Not much, perhaps, only that my grandfather on my mother's side received Burgoyne's sword when he surrendered at Saratoga and my grandfather on my father's side received the sword of Cornwallis at Yorktown."

A Small Legal Fee.

The smallest fee ever taken by an English counsel was sixpence, that fee having on one occasion been taken by the late Sir John Holker. Barristers' fees were in olden times much less than those now paid. An entry occurs in the churchwardens' accounts of St. Margaret's, Westminster, for 1476, showing that a fee of 3s. 8d., with fourpence for his dinner, was paid to Robert Flypott, counsel, learned in the law, for his advice.

In Nare's "Glossary" a barrister's fee was stated to be an angel, or 10 shillings. These are somewhat different figures from the 600 guineas paid to Sir Charles Russell a number of years ago at the Leeds assizes for less than three hours' work, or at the rate of over 3 guineas a minute.—London Tit-Bits.

In the Art Gallery.

"Ah," exclaimed Mrs. Oldcastle, who was again enjoying the splendors of her new neighbors' art gallery, "a Corot, I see!"

"Where?" asked her hostess, looking doubtfully at the canvas which seemed to claim the other's attention.

"There," answered Mrs. Oldcastle, pointing with her lorgnette.

"Well, now, I declare. I can't see a single crow anywhere around. You don't mean them little black spots in the left hand corner, do you? Them's clouds!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Limit of Chivalry.

There was once a man who zealously declared that woman has no right to invade the field of wage earning men. She should stay at home, where she belonged.

Finally his four sisters, three cousins and two aunts, who were without a masculine protector, gathered about him and inquired:

"Whose home? Yours?"

The Attraction.

Gladstone told Lord Ronald Gower that once when he visited Rome he accidentally met Macaulay, who introduced himself to the statesman. On Macaulay's telling him that he took a daily walk in St. Peter's, Gladstone asked him what most attracted him in that place. "The temperature," was the answer.

Very Likely.

Sister Sue—In my new play, Mr. Daniels, the hero and the villain are to fight a duel.

Daniels—And who will get the worst of it?

Brother Tom—The audience.—New York Times.

Entirely Different.

"It's all very well before a girl's married for her to get a flower in her hair," remarked the observer of events and things, "but it's an entirely different matter if, after she's married, she gets her hair in the flour."

If a man asks you a question you can't answer, make your answer so long and shadowy that he will be glad to forget his question.—Atchison Globe.

A Peculiarity of Japan.

In Japan it is always the rule of politeness to pay a trifle more than the sum mentioned on your hotel bill. To settle the account net would be considered an insult or at least a mark of great dissatisfaction. People who have traveled in Japan say that the Japanese always tip the waiter on entering a hotel.

Easy Way Out.

"I'm fixed," said the young doctor. "I've got a big enough practice to keep me in easy circumstances for life."

"But suppose you should lose half your patients?"

"I'd just double my bills on the others."—Philadelphia Press.

A Sad Business.

"Yes," he said sadly, and there was a tear in his eye—"yes, my business has driven me to the wall."

And he went on posting bills.—Chums.

I never saw a failure yet that wasn't worth more than it cost—if the fellow that failed made use of it.—"The Great White Way."

Frederick Schwinghamer, who died at his home near Blissfield recently, had a remarkable military record. Popular Weather Notions.

How often do we hear the remark, "We shall have rain, the atmosphere is so heavy." The reverse is true. When one sees smoke hanging from a chimney, with a tendency to sink to the ground, it indicates that the atmosphere is light—in fact, too light to float the smoke. When the smoke rises from the chimney, it indicates a heavy atmosphere. A column of smoke is not a bad barometer, for a barometer simply records the pressure of the atmosphere. When the atmosphere is light and the smoke settles, the pressure on the mercury is light, and the column falls, indicating storm. When the atmosphere is heavy and the smoke rises, the pressure is greater and the column rises, indicating fair weather. Pleasure seekers and others before starting out should therefore watch the smoke.

That a doctors profession embraces all trades and professions, was closely manifested a week ago last Monday when the store of B. S. Scudder in Macon was burglarized. As Mr. Scudder opened up for business he noticed a disorder in the arrangement of his stock and a deficiency of almost $5 in the cash till. Mr. Scudder's first thought was for a doctor, and as a result the inhabitants were greatly shocked to see Dr. W. S. Morden running in great haste, dressing on the way, to B. S. Scudder's place of business. No doubt satisfactory remedies were administered for when last seen, Mr. Scudder was quietly smiling to himself.

MEMORIAL DAY

Befittingly Observed by

A LARGE CROWD

Of People May 30.

The lesson of Memorial day is one of sadness, and the giving of one day for consecration to the memory of those who gave their lives that our country might endure, is fraught with great influence for good and those benefited are not the departed, but the living whose hearts are kindled with greater love for country and fellow men. The kindly emotions which a nations prayers inspire make a better citizen of him who bows his head in honor of our soldiers.

Memorial day is a day for which every citizen of Tecumseh gathers around the tombs of their honored dead to lay their floral offerings, labor is at a standstill, the nations flag is at half mast, while the services make the day impressing.

Under the direction of B. J. Garlinghouse marshal, the parade formed in front of G. A. R. hall on Chicago street from which place they marched to Monument park. After the G. A. R. services at the monument the parade reformed and marched to the opera house, where under the direction of L. M. Kellogg, president of the day, the second service was held. The program rendered was as follows:

Invocation—Rev. W. F. Jones.
Song—Double Male Quartette.
Recitation, Decoration Day—Olive McBride.
Song—Quartette.
Address—Rev. Henry S. White.
Service by Beers Post, No. 140.
Song—Quartette.

The service ended at the opera house, the march was resumed to the cemetery the parade being headed by B. J. Garlinghouse and Faron Anderson, next followed the Tecumseh band of twenty pieces, after which came Co. C and the G. A. R. The parade was further lengthened by the floral wagon and the carriages of citizens. At the cemetery befitting services were held and the graves of the soldier dead were covered with flowers.

All along the line of march, the many beautiful lawns presented a pleasing sight, flowers, flags and other decorations showed the deep feeling held by all, it is only a rite, a form, a symbol, but its more than speech or written word.

The Tecumseh band proved itself an honor to the village. This was its first appearance and the impression it left was of the best. Indeed Tecumseh can well be proud of its band, which if given the support and backing of the village, will no doubt prove a great benefit to the town.

The very latest portrait of Tolstoi—and a very interesting one—is published in the June Magazine number of the Outlook. It was taken quite recently in the Crimea, where Tolstoi went to gain strength after his severe illness. It was sent by a member of the Tolstoi family to a friend in this country, and is now printed for the first time. It was from the Crimea that Tolstoi sent his just published letter to the Czar, urging him to elevate the peasantry, give them representation, and grant a constitution.

IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW

What a Heap of Happiness it Would Bring to Tecumseh Homes.

Hard to do housework with an aching back.

Hours of misery at leisure or at work.

If women only knew the cause:

Backache pains come from sick kidneys,

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure it.

Tecumseh people endorse this.

Mrs. J. W. Owen, wife of the well-known carpenter, living in the southeastern section of Tecumseh, says: "I am very well pleased with Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured a box at C. A. Wright's drug store and they did me a lot of good. I had heart trouble and my kidneys did not perform their proper duties. This condition existed for some time. I tried different remedies which were recommended to me but received little if any benefit from them. I will cheerfully say this for Doan's Kidney Pills. I received more permanent relief from their use than from any other medicine I ever used. I am pleased to testify to their value."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

A Matter of Names.

A prominent New York lawyer, occasionally heard of in connection with divorce cases, told the following:

"Some years ago I was retained by an Australian banker's daughter to secure her a divorce. After having obtained the decree I delivered it to her and was surprised when she burst into a roar of laughter after reading it.

"'What is so funny?' I asked.

"'Why, look here,' replied the divorcee. 'Look at the names—"Donohue," justice; "O'Byrne," referee; "Keenan," county clerk. Why,' she mirthfully added, 'when I return home to my parents they'll say, "You went to Ireland for your divorce, not to America."'"

Game Duck.

Game duck of all sorts should be roasted quickly in a hot oven and are considered best when very rare. The blood should always follow the knife when carving the breast of a duck. It is not possible to limit the roasting of a duck to any number of minutes; it depends entirely upon the temperature of the oven. If a game duck is being roasted for men, it should be much rarer than when it is to be eaten by women.

The Happy Family.

The proprietor of a German menagerie keeps caged together a lion, a tiger, a wolf and a lamb, which he labels "The Happy Family." When asked confidentially how long these animals had lived together, he answered:

"Ten months; but the lamb has to be renewed occasionally."—Philadelphia Times.

Knew His Business.

"If I were the mayor," remarked the stranger who had attended a meeting of the city council, "I wouldn't permit the aldermen to waste so much time in useless wrangling over trivial matters."

"The mayor knows what he is about," replied the citizen. "When they're wrangling, they're not doing any mischief."—Chicago Tribune.

THE RICE TABLE.

A Distinctive and Remarkable Meal Served In Java.

"At 1 o'clock," says a correspondent of the Kansas City Star, "every hotel in Java serves a most distinctive and remarkable meal called the rice table (rijst-tafel). A large, flat, bowl shaped dish is placed in front of you, which you fill with beautiful, white, flaky rice, borne about in dishes holding fully a quarter of a bushel. Then comes a seemingly never ending stream of natives, each bearing a dish containing some different meat, vegetable or condiment, from which you take a small portion and place it on top of the rice.

"After you have had a little of everything you mince it up with a knife and fork and mix it well with the rice and then fall to with a large spoon. A list of the side dishes, with an ordinary rice table, would read something like this: Fried eggs, omelet, fried chicken, broiled chicken, stewed chicken, beefsteak, sausage, fish, fritters, a mixture of vegetables stewed with a mustard dressing, raw cucumbers, liver and ten or twelve different spices and relishes besides pickles.

Many a stout Dutchman have we seen take a liberal helping from each dish in addition to almost a quart of rice for a background of 'table.' Naturally every one must go to sleep immediately after such a meal, and all business is suspended for several hours. The dinner in the evening at 8 o'clock is a very simple meal."

The Wrong Room.

"While spending a vacation at Bedford Springs, Pa., some years ago," said a Baltimore lawyer the other day, "I went late one night to my room, as I supposed, unlocked the door and was startled by a woman's screams. I realized at once that I had got into the wrong room. You may be sure I did not waste any time getting out into the corridor, locking the door again and entering my room, which happened to be the next one.

"While I was doing this the woman continued screaming, alarming the whole hotel. A crowd soon gathered, and when the woman could be persuaded to open the door she declared there was a man in her room. Of course no intruder was found, and, as the door was locked when the crowd gathered, the lady was told that she must have had a nightmare and imagined she saw a man in her room. I kept quiet, and every one else in the hotel was convinced that the lady's imagination had worked upon her fears."—Baltimore Sun.

Ten Years in Bed.

R. A. Gray, J. P. Oakville, Ind., writes, "For ten years I was confined to my bed with disease of my kidneys. It was so severe that I could not move part of the time. Destructive Fire at Summer Resort.

New York, June 2.—Max Kasten, 32 years old, and Mrs. Lydia McKrow, the same age, lost their lives Sunday in a fire which swept away many buildings at Rockaway Beach. Thomas S. McKrow and his 5-year-old son Frank; Martin Hanson, 28, and Morris Kasten, 75, were injured. Several hours later young McKrow died and the father was reported to be dying. The fire started in the frame dwelling occupied by the Kastens. In a short time it spread to an unoccupied brick building and then in succession leveled a number of structures. The buildings for the most part were of the frame type usual at the seaside resorts, and the loss is estimated at about $120,000. After the fire had been controlled the body of a man was found burned to a crisp in one of the buildings.

Teachers' Rates.

Chicago, June 2.—The various railway lines in interest have united in granting to teachers and others of the southern states who may attend the annual convention of the National Educational association in Minneapolis next July, an extension of tickets for return at any date before Oct. 1. The limit for return in all other sections of the United States is Sept. 1. This action was taken to enable southern teachers, whose schools do not open until later than Sept. 1, to spend their entire summer vacation at northern resorts if they shall desire.

Has Slept Nine Days.

Windsor, Ont., June 2.—Physicians here are much puzzled over the case of John Redmond of Anderdon, a wealthy farmer 54 years old, who fell asleep nine days ago and has not awakened. All efforts to restore him to consciousness have been unavailing. Redmond walks in his sleep, drinks frequently, but eats little or no food.

Gray Hair

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for over thirty years. It has kept my scalp free from dandruff and has prevented my hair from turning gray."—Mrs. F. A. Soule, Billings, Mont.

There is this peculiar thing about Ayer's Hair Vigor—it is a hair food, not a dye. Your hair does not suddenly turn black, look dead and lifeless. But gradually the old color comes back,—all the rich, dark color it used to have. The hair stops falling, too.

BRAINS AND BEVERAGES.

Famous Literary Lights Who Reveled In Coffee and Tea.

Famous literary men have all had their favorite beverages.

Tea and coffee, however, head the list, and these two drinks, which the famous William Cobbett denounced as "slops," have been the means of spurring many a drowsy journalist to renewed energy.

Voltaire, the king of wits and litterateurs, was a confirmed coffee drinker. In his old age he often took fifty cups a day, which sadly hurt his digestion and hastened his death. Balzac never drank anything else but coffee, and during the early hours of the morning, for he began at 12 o'clock midnight, he used to take copious drafts of this stimulating drink.

Sir James Macintosh was so fond of coffee that he used to assert that the powers of a man's mind would generally be found to be proportional to the quantity of that stimulant which he drank. Cowper pays a tribute to tea in the "Task" when he says "the cup that cheers, but not inebriates." He was very fond of the Chinese beverage. But the king of tea drinkers was Samuel Johnson. On one occasion Sir Joshua Reynolds reminded the great man that he had drunk eleven cups of tea, whereupon Johnson retorted: "Sir, I did not count your glasses of wine. Why then should you number my cups of tea?"

Don't Be a Pest.

If you can't oblige people in any other way, you can at least let them alone. Half the troubles of people are due to idle and impudent interference in their affairs. Half the time when you make a vigorous kick there is no kick coming to you. One of the worst habits people have is making each other unnecessary trouble. Life is hard enough at best. Don't be a pest. If you can't help others, you can at least let them alone.—Atchison Globe.

George Schaub, a well known German citizen of New Lebanon, O., is a constant reader of the Dayton Volkszeitung He knows that this paper aims to advertise only the best in its columns, and when he saw Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised therein for lame back, he did not hesitate in buying a bottle of it for his wife, who for eight weeks had suffered with the most terrible pains in her back and could get no relief. He says: "After using the Pain Balm for a few days my wife said to me, 'I feel as though born anew,' and before using the entire contents of the bottle the unbearable pains had entirely vanished and she could again take up her household duties." He is very thankful and hopes that all suffering likewise will hear of her wonderful recovery. This valuable liniment is for sale by J. J. Orr.

EVADING THE LAW.

The Pictures of Flying Birds In a Mohammedan Mosque.

According to one of the tenets of the Mohammedan religion, it is a sin to make a picture of any living thing. The elaborate decorations of the palaces and mosques of the east are almost exclusively made up of ingeniously interlaced geometric designs, arabesques or flowers, intermixed with sentences of the Koran.

There is a belief among Mussulmans that at the day of judgment Allah will demand that the artist who has made the image of a living thing shall endow that image with life and that, failing to do this, the artist will be sent to perdition for his sin.

A gentleman who visited a mosque in Algiers found that the tiles with which the building is decorated, which are very old and beautiful, are adorned with flights of birds. He expressed surprise at this and asked if the command against such representation were a modern edict.

"Oh, no," answered the pious Algerian to whom he addressed the question. "These are not pictures of living birds."

"But they are painted as if flying across the tiles," the other said in some astonishment.

"Yes," the Mussulman replied, "but do you not see that about the neck of each there is a fine black line? That is to show that the artist painted only dead birds, and the command of the Koran is not violated."

Some men are kept so busy maintaining their dignity that they haven't time to earn a decent living.

PIONEER SOCIETY

Michigan's Organization Will Meet at Lansing

Lansing, Mich., May 31.—The program for the annual meeting of the Michigan Pioneer and Historical society has just been announced, and the sessions will be held June 3, 4 and 5 in Representative hall of the state capitol. This is the twenty-eighth session of the organization.

The exercises will open Tuesday afternoon at the Agricultural college, and Gov. Bliss and President Synder of the college will deliver addresses. Mrs. T. C. Taylor will read a poem, "The twin peninsulas," and, after an address for H. R. Pattengill, the members of the society will be spectators at a military drill given by the cadet battalion of the college students.

On Tuesday evening the formal exercises incident to the convention proper will be begun, President C. M. Burton delivering his annual address. Mary E. Chamberlain will read two legends—"Indian summer" and "The falling star," and C. J. Thorpe will speak on "Pioneer amusements."

Wednesday morning will be devoted to the business meeting of the society, reports being scheduled by Secretary E. B. Judson and Treasurer B. F. Davis. The committee of historians and the memorial committee will also present reports. Addresses on "Health work in Michigan" will be delivered by Dr. R. C. Kedzie and Secretary H. B. Baker of the state board of health. The report of the nominating committee will also be given at this session.

In the evening, Clerk Lew M. Miller of the state house of representatives will speak on "Legislation and the legislature of 1871;" J. R. Bailey of Old Mission will speak on "The province of Michilimackinac," and Gen. B. M. Cutcheon of Grand Rapids will give some reminiscences of "The East Tennessee campaign and the siege of Knoxville."

On Wednesday evening, C. H. Chopman will give the result of some original research in the history of the Johnson family of the Soo; J. W. Humphrey will speak on "The Selkirk reservation;" J. E. Day will give the story of the "Jesuits in Michigan," and F. Hodgeman of Climax will tell of the prehistoric fort at his home town.

At the closing session Thursday morning the program will be as follows:

"Early Flora and Fauna of Michigan," C. F. Wheeler; "From New England to Lake Superior, 1854," Lieut. Gov. O. W. Robinson; "History of Lenawee county," C. H. Dewey; "Pioneer life in southern Michigan in the '30s," W. J. Beal.

WITH CARBOLIC ACID.

Port Huron Girl Kills Herself After a Lovers' Quarrel.

Port Huron, Mich., May 31.—Miss Lottie Brown, aged 18, of 2332 Elk street, ended her Memorial day by committing suicide with carbolic acid. The young woman had been enjoying the sights of the day, apparently in a cheerful frame of mind. She had supper at home with her folks and retired early.

Her parents suspected nothing until groans from her room reached their ears. She was found on the bed writhing in pain. Medical attendance was summoned, but the young woman died in about 15 minutes. It is said she had a quarrel with her sweetheart during the day. Coroner Carlisle was summoned, and it is probable that an inquest will be held.

Won't Join the Trust.

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 31.—At a meeting of the Grand Rapids Furniture Manufacturers' association, the matter of entering the proposed furniture pool was discussed and it was practically decided not to join it. This will be a severe blow to the combine and may prevent its materializing this season.

Generous Offers from Jamaica.

Kingston, Jamaica, May 29.—The planters here, including the United Fruit company, an American concern, are warmly supporting the proposal to bring hundreds of the sufferers from the volcanic outbreak on the island of St. Vincent to work on estates here and also to settle them on the crown lands. The government of Jamaica is being asked to make an offer to transport people from St. Vincent to Jamaica.

Charleston Expo. Closes Saturday.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT FOR CONSTIPATION

Constipation is nothing more than a clogging of the bowels and nothing less than vital stagnation or death if not relieved. If every constipated sufferer could realize that he is allowing poisonous filth to remain in his system, he would soon get relief. Constipation invites all kind of contagion. Headaches, biliousness, colds and many other ailments disappear when constipated bowels are relieved. Thedford's Black-Draught thoroughly cleans out the bowels in an easy and natural manner without the purging of calomel or other violent cathartics.

Be sure that you get the original Thedford's Black-Draught, made by The Chattanooga Medicine Co. Sold by all druggists in 25 cent and $1.00 packages.

Morgan, Ark., May 25, 1901.
I cannot recommend Thedford's Black-Draught too highly. I keep it in my house all the time and have used it for the last ten years. I never gave my children any other laxative. I think I could never be able to work without it on account of being troubled with constipation. Your medicine is all that keeps me up.
C. B. McFARLAND.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

St. Joe Fears Meat Famine.—Owing to the teamsters' strike in Chicago not a pound of meat was received in St. Joseph during the last 24 hours to supply the trade. Butchers are canvassing local territory for cattle, and a meat famine is feared.

Black Bass Distribution.—A carload of black bass, numbering about 100,000 fish, has been sent out by the Michigan fish commission from the Mill Creek station and distributed at points on the Michigan Central between Detroit and Grand Rapids.

Soliciting Aid for Miners.—Committees representing the local unions of the United Mine Workers of America at West Bay City, have commenced soliciting aid for families of local miners, who have been out for several weeks, and some of whom are now said to be in destitute circumstances.

Great Catch of Brook Trout.—In five hours last Sunday a party of four fishermen at Ontonagon caught 235 brook trout in the Union river. None of the fish were under the lawful size, and a two-foot rule would have been required to measure many of them. This is the best record so far this season.

Ate Poisonous Greens.—Mr. and Mrs. George Seeley of Grand Rapids ate greens for dinner and were taken sick. A doctor was summoned, but the first three called upon were too busy to respond, and when help arrived Mrs. Seeley was beyond human aid. Mrs. Seeley had gathered the greens and by mistake had mixed some henbane leaves with red root. Seeley will recover.

A Badly Turned Phrase.

"It is queer," says a clergyman of New York city, "what a liking young students have for long words and Latin quotations and what a dread possesses them of appearing conventional. I once knew a promising candidate who was given charge of a funeral in the absence of the pastor of the church. He knew it was customary for the minister to announce after the sermon that those who wished should step up to view the remains, but he thought this was too hackneyed a phrase, and he said instead, 'The congregation will now pass around the bier.'"—New York Tribune.

An Extempore Pun.

An oft quoted old English wit is Daniel Purcell, who is worthy of immortality as a master of repartee. The best of the reported witticisms of this forgotten jester is as follows:

Purcell was desired one night in company by a gentleman to make a pun extempore.

"Upon what subject?" asked Daniel.

"The king," answered the other.

"The king, sir," said he, "is no subject."

The Thinking Strain.

When once one no longer thinks it necessary to reflect whether one ought or ought not to do or avoid a thing, the saving of time and tissue is quite enormous, for it is not so much doing things as thinking about them which consumes the minutes and the nerves, and, once having made an unalterable rule to do a thing if it is pleasant and refrain from it, if it is not, one can get into a single day a number of delightful experiences which would appear to those who do not know the recipe quite incredible.—E. B. Benson, "Scarlet and Hyssop."

Clotns or Clothes.

One learns many strange uses and misuses of things at country inns, but let us hope that the following experience related by a friend of mine as having happened to himself is a rare one: He had gone to bed in an Irish inn, bidding the landlady to have him called at 8. At 6, however, next morning, she knocked at his door.

"Ye've to git up," she said.

"What o'clock is it?"

"Six, surr."

"Go away. I am not going to get up till 8."

At 7 she reappeared. "Indade, and ye must git up now. It's 7." Finding him unmoved at her next return, she said: "Git up, there's a sweet gintleman. There's two commercial gintlemen waiting for their breakfast, and I can't lay the cloth till I have yer honor's top sheet."—Cornhill Magazine.

IN STATE COURTS

Miss Eberstein's Nurse Testifies Against Bennett.

PREACHER TO TAKE STAND

McGarry Trial at Allegan Has a Sensational Session—Dignified Miss Duncan Gets Rattled—Witnesses in Roos Case Won't Commit Themselves.

Bay City, Mich., June 5.—Dr. R. W. Griswold, one of the joint defendants in the Bennett-Griswold manslaughter case, will take the stand during the former's trial. This was announced by the defense yesterday.

The first medical testimony introduced was given by Dr. C. T. Newkirk yesterday, who, with Dr. William Bishop, performer the midnight autopsy in Battle Creek. It developed that Dr. Haughey, the Ebersteins' family physician, had removed part of the girl's body before their arrival, but there were congested spots which indicated the use of a surgical instrument.

Mrs. Loretta McEwan, the nurse who attended the girl, unheeding the close cross-examination of the defense of the cautions of the court, frantically accused Bennett and Griswold, who squirmed under the tongue-lashing and denunciation, of having dragged her into a crime. She became so hysterical that she was excused, but will be recalled later on.

Mrs. A. L. Morris of Detroit, who lived near the rooms occupied by Miss Eberstein while the latter was staying in that city, testified that she came to Bay City with Miss Eberstein, who had told her of her predicament. They came here March 12 and went to Bennett's office.

Bennett Had Preacher Witness.

She said: "After a private talk with Agnes, Bennett suggested having a witness to our talk. He called Rev. C. T. Patchell, who came in a few minutes. Bennett said it would be a case of illegitimate parentage and promised to see the girl through her trouble. I told Agnes to stay here in a quiet place and I would adopt the child. Nothing was said to Bennett regarding the payment of any money."

Allegan, Mich., June 5.—There was a striking scene in the courtroom here during the McGarry trial Wednesday afternoon when the prosecution recalled Tessie Duncan, private secretary of the respondent.

Miss Duncan was shown one of her shorthand note books, which have been under expert examination, and was questioned as to the contents of one page. The witness paled perceptibly as she glanced at her old notes, then she threw the book down upon the table before her and said excitedly:

"It is nothing that is rebuttal evidence in this case."

Miss Duncan read from her notes the original letter that accompanied the Fitzgerald bid. The defense had introduced what purported to be the original letter, typewritten on a Bundy & Travis letter head, but the evidence introduced clearly rebutts the showing and tends to prove that the letter was dictated in McGarry's office.

Lansing, Mich., June 5.—The Roos disbarment case was submitted to the supreme court without argument Wednesday morning, and the court's decision will not be announced for some time. The briefs in the case will be printed and the evidence duly arranged.

The greater part of the forenoon was spent by the prosecution in the examination of the officers and stockholders of the Henderson-Ames company of Kalamazoo, which engineered the big deal by which the old state military board secured over $30,000 from a fake sale of military stores. All the witnesses were wary and each claimed his constitutional privilege, stating that he would not testify to matters which might inculpate himself.

Boats Collided—Two Drowned.

Detroit, Mich., June 4.—The schooner Gleniffer, in tow of the tug Seaman, upbound and light, collided with an unknown steamer opposite the Star Island house at 10 o'clock Monday evening. The bow of the schooner was smashed in and she filled and sunk in a short time. Mrs. C. Moore, the captain's wife, of St. Catharines, Ont., and Archie Mysner of Windsor, one of the crew, were drowned. They were asleep in the cabin at the time. The accident is said to have been due to the fact that the captain of the schooner sheered off to avoid the wreck of the Kittie Forbes, and thus got in the way of the steamer.

Colonel Drew Is Dead.

Royal Oak, Mich., June 4.—Col. W. H. Drew, aged eighty-four years, is dead at his home here. He was born in Shelburn, Vt., May 17, 1818, and up to the breaking out of the civil war was grand lecturer of the grand lodge, F. & A. M., of New York. In 1861 he took the first company of soldiers out of Buffalo, they forming part of the Thirty-first New York volunteers. After the war Colonel Drew came to Michigan and for many years lived at Carleton, four years ago coming to Royal Oak. He is very well known throughout the country.

Fought Over Notorious Woman.

Owosso, Mich., June 4.—In a fight over Nell Davis, a notorious woman from St. Johns, George Brayton struck Howard Hayt with a big stone above the temple. Hayt was taken home with a fractured skull, and it is feared he cannot recover. The men are about 25 years old and unmarried. Brayton is in jail, awaiting the result of Hayt's injuries. Both men were under the influence of liquor.

Happy Time in Old Town.

"We felt very happy," writes R. N. Bevill, Old Town, Va., "when Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured our daughter of a bad case of scald head." It delights all who use it for cuts, corns, burns, boils, bruises, ulcers, eruptions. Infallible for piles. Only 25c at C. A. Wright's drug store.

Mrs. M. J. Gooking, Lomax, Neb., writes: I send you 50 cents for one box of Kid-Ne-Oids. I cannot get along without your medicine. I have been taking Kid-Ne-Oids for about four months and am improving wonderfully. I was almost dead and the doctors told me I could not get well without an operation, but the new discovery, Kid-Ne-Oids cured me. Sold by

A DOZEN FIGHTS

Occurred on Streets of Chicago Wednesday.

POLICE WERE POWERLESS

Enraged Strike Sympathizers Pestered the Meat Wagons All Day Long—Over a Hundred Injured—Hospitals Filled Up With the Victims.

Chicago, June 5.—Driven by men covered with dust and blood, many of them barely able from exhaustion to hold the reins in their hands, thirty-six meat wagons entered the main gate of the Union Stock Yards last night amid a shower of stones, bricks, bottles and sticks. The wagons, guarded by five police wagons, filled with bluecoats, and two omnibuses, crowded to the fullest capacity with policemen, were on the return from a delivery of supplies to downtown provision houses after one of the fiercest days in the strike of the beef packers' teamsters.

Many of the drivers, who are officials at the packing houses, were cut and bruised from head to foot. The police were in even worse condition. The wagon drivers have been working from 5 o'clock in the morning, and their progress from the stock yards into the city's business district and back again has been contested bitterly by mobs of strike sympathizers. At the very entrance of the stock yards last night, after all seeming danger had passed, George June, an employe of the Anglo-American Packing company, was struck by a baseball bat and knocked from his wagon seat. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and, it is believed, he may die. Many others were struck at the same time by a shower of stones, but the police were too worn out to offer resistance.

Stoned Wagons From Viaduct.

More than a dozen battles were fought during the day between the rioters and the police, and the hospitals are overcrowded with the injured. The fiercest battle of the day took place in the afternoon at Sixteenth street and Michigan avenue. The rioters stood on the viaduct and hurled rocks at the meat wagons passing underneath. The throng was the most formidable in numbers and in daring of any of the crowds that gathered during the day. Before this mob could be dispersed the police were compelled to use revolvers. More than fifty shots were fired, the bullets passing over the heads of the crowd, which finally became frightened and scattered, but not until many of the rioters and policemen had suffered serious injuries.

A conference was held last night between representatives of the packers and the teamsters, looking to a settlement of the strike. President Frederick W. Job, chairman of the state board of arbitration, brought about the meeting.

A settlement of the strike of the drivers of delivery wagons of the retail State street department stores earlier in the day formed the basis on which the opposing element hoped to effect a compromise.

It is estimated that the total number of injured is between 100 and 150.

The soldiers of the First regiment, I. N. G., were instructed last night to be prepared for a hurried call to duty. Commanding officers sent word to other officers, and through them the noncommissioned officers were detailed to notify the privates to be ready at a moment's notice. Governor Yates is in the city today.

Conflagration in Chicago.

Chicago, June 5.—The planing mill and woodworking shop of the Illinois Car & Equipment works at Hegewisch, Ill., were destroyed by fire last night. Loss, $50,000. Two thousand men are thrown out of employment. Superintendent Aberauer said today that immediate steps would be taken to rebuild the destroyed buildings.

Mother and Children Burned.

Another Fatal Wreck.

Engineer Frank Finch and Fireman Pay were killed. Four passengers were injured.

OLD SCANDAL RAKED UP

That Spanish War Supply Transaction Given an Airing by General White—He Gave Strong Testimony in the Roos Case.

Lansing, Mich., June 4.—The old state military board scandal was raked up here Tuesday afternoon in a most unexpected manner, and for the first time Gen. Will H. White, former quartermaster-general of the state troops, made a full confession of how the famous Henderson-Ames company deal was put through.

The testimony was brought out in the hearing before the supreme court of the disbarment proceedings against C. N. Roos, attorney for the Henderson-Ames company, whose connection with the deal brought about the filing of the charges.

White said that the order to sell the military goods came, as he supposed at the time, from Governor Pingree direct. It was delivered by Col. Eli Sutton of Detroit in person and was written on official paper, although White has since doubted the authenticity of the document.

Bickerstaff Proposed a Scheme.

The sale was duly advertised, as Attorney-General Oren said that this was the proper method of procedure, and Colonel Sutton placed the advertising.

Then Bickerstaff of Kalamazoo entered the field with a proposition that White, Inspector General Marsh of Allegan, with Sutton and the Henderson-Ames company of Kalamazoo, should organize the "Illinois Supply company" to buy goods. They would then be turned over by the Henderson-Ames company and by them resold to the state at a large profit to the stockholders.

The criminal features of the case were fully gone over, and White was assured that there was nothing illegal in the transaction, as Mr. Roos, the attorney for the Henderson-Ames company, had gone over the ground very fully and assured him that it was safe.

The Illinois Supply company was accordingly formed, and the deal went through.

White's story is evidently intended as an effort to clear himself from the blame of the initiative in the deal. He claims that he was proceeding on the theory that the order to sell the goods was genuine and that he had authority to get rid of them under the law passed by the legislature at the close of the Spanish-American war.

Others Told Different Stories.

While Attorney-General Oren refuses to discuss the matter, the impression prevails that General White's testimony will result in the arrest of various parties for perjury. It will be recalled that several Kalamazoo citizens told an altogether different story, both to the grand jury and when sworn during the trials of Sutton and Marsh, and also that when sworn in his own behalf, Sutton, on the trial which resulted in his acquittal, denied all connection with the deal.

In continuance of the trial former Assistant Quartermaster-General Harold A. Smith was called to the stand. The prosecution endeavored to extricate from him proof by voucher that the Illinois Supply company had paid Roos fees for services. A protest was made by Smith's attorney, R. C. Ostrander, stating that such evidence would tend to incriminate the defendant and other clients. But the court consented, and Smith produced a receipt showing payments had been made to Roos. The witness refused to answer questions as to the nature of the employment.

Director Kauffer was the next witness sworn. He identified the $27,000 draft, and admitted attending a directors' meeting at which the clothing purchase was discussed.

Witness admitted that he know who contributed to the fund with which the $27,000 draft was purchased, saying that Woodworth, Hunter, Dayton, Roos, Pitkin and himself each contributed $5,000.

This admission, in the opinion of the attorney-general, connects Mr. Roos with the transaction. The adjournment of court for the day at this juncture prevented the further examination of Kauffer, but he will resume the stand today.

Boy Fell Fifty Feet.

Fostoria, Mich., June 4.—Ira Harris, aged nine, with several other small boys, was playing in a poplar tree. The Harris boy had climbed to a hight of fifty feet, from where he fell on a picket fence. The pickets penetrated his side and he sustained several broken ribs and other serious injuries. His recovery is doubtful.

Electric Cars Collided.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., June 4.—A rear-end collision between two special cars on the Rapid Railway at the Clinton river bridge occurred at 7:30 last evening, resulting in serious injury to George Pemmitt, motorman on the rear car, and Fred Sawitgki, a passenger.

Killed by Street Car.

Kalamazoo, Mich., June 4.—Henry W. Rood, one of the best known citizens of Kalamazoo, died in the hospital yesterday afternoon as the result of injuries received by being struck by an electric car at noon. He was dragged several rods, terribly mangled and his skull fractured.

Virulent Cancer Cured.

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by Druggist G. W. Roberts, of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel bilious kidney and microbe poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions, ulcers and sores vanish. Bitters 50c, Salve 25c at C. A. Wright's.

AGAINST PACKING HOUSES.

Supreme Court at Albany, N. Y., Grants Injunctions.

Albany, N. Y., June 5.—Supreme Court Justice Chester has granted an injunction restraining certain beef-packing companies of the west from carrying on business in this state in violation of the provisions of the Donnelly anti-trust law. The order was served upon the representatives of the concerns in this city and Troy yesterday, and will be served on others throughout the state as quickly as they can be reached. It was obtained upon the affidavit of D. W. Meredith, a former manager of Swift & Co.

The injunction is directed against Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Cudahy Packing company, Hammond company, Schwarzchild & Sulzberger Co., domestic and foreign corporations, and against Nelson Morris, Edward Morris and Ira N. Morris, co-partners, carrying on business as Nelson Morris & Co.

St. Louis After Packers.

St. Louis, June 5.—The supreme court has directed a writ of ouster to issue against the Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Packing company and suspended the same on condition that the company comply with the state laws relating to corporations within five days. The question of fine was reserved until further orders of the court. The other packers against whom similar information was filed were given until June 18 to respond and file return to rule.

LUXURY AND ECONOMY.

Much Talked Route Now Open Between Detroit and Buffalo.

Detroit, Mich., June 5.—A maritime event of great interest to Michigan people was accomplished when the beautiful steamer Eastern States, of the new Detroit and Buffalo line, returned from her initial trip Wednesday. The Eastern States is unquestionably the largest, speediest and most elegant steamer on fresh water, and with the companion ship Western States, soon to be launched, will maintain daily service over the water route from Detroit to Buffalo that for many years has been abandoned. An important object of the enterprise is to establish a link in travel between the east and west, with both economy and pleasure as drawing cards.

The mayor and prominent citizens of Detroit joined in the initial trip, while at Buffalo, where the big boat nearly filled the river, a most enthusiastic reception was accorded. The remarkable record of schedule time on an inaugural trip speaks volumes for the construction of the new boat.

Negro Shot Three Strikers.

St. Louis, June 5.—Three men were shot at Granite City, Ill., Wednesday and one of them, named Cunningham, will probably die. As twenty-five negroes from St. Louis alighted from a train to go to the works of the steel plant, there to take the places of striking molders, they were met by the strikers and warned to go back. Bell, one of the imported men, who was hit on the head with a rock, pulled a revolver and emptied it into the crowd, wounding three white men. The negroes then made a rush for the works and got inside. A warrant charging murder has been sworn out against Bell.

Two Killed in Train Wreck.

Dedding, Cal., June 5.—The southbound Oregon express on the Southern Pacific road, which left Redding at 10:45 o'clock Tuesday night, was wrecked about 15 minutes later near Clear Creek, four miles from this city. The accident was caused by an open switch. Engineer J. M. White and Fireman Fred Taffel of the forward engine were thrown under the wreckage and crushed to death, their bodies being fearfully mangled. All the coaches were ditched. A number of passengers were more or less injured.

Marshal Su Captures Rebels.

Washington, June 5.—Secretary Hay has received a telegram from United States Consul McWade at Canton, stating that Marshal Su has telegraphed the Chinese government that he has captured Kwei Choo, Kwangnan prefecture, on the Yunnan frontier, Tonkin. Mr. McWade says that the rebels have fled to the hills northwest of Nanning. He says that the troubles reported north of Lungchow, Kwangse, are not serious.

BLACK ROCK

By RALPH CONNOR

CHAPTER IX.

THE LEAGUE'S REVENGE.

As we stood outside of Craig's shack in the dim starlight we could not hide from ourselves that we were beaten. It was not so much grief as a blind fury that filled my heart, and, looking at the faces of the men about me, I read the same feeling there. But what could we do? The yells of carousing miners down at Slavin's told us that nothing could be done with them that night. To be so utterly beaten and unfairly and with no chance of revenge was maddening.

"I'd like to get back at 'em," said Abe, carefully repressing himself.

"I've got it, men," said Graeme suddenly. "This town does not require all the whisky there is in it." And he unfolded his plan. It was to gain possession of Slavin's saloon and the bar of the Black Rock hotel and clear out all the liquor to be found in both these places. I did not much like the idea, but Geordie said: "I'm ga'en aifter the lad. I'll hae naethin' tae dae wi' yon. It's no that easy, an' it's a sinfu' waste."

But Abe was wild to try it, and Shaw was quite willing, while old Nelson sternly approved.

"Nelson, you and Shaw get a couple of our men and attend to the saloon. Slavin and the whole gang are up at the Black Rock, so you won't have much trouble, but come to us as soon as you can."

And so we went our ways.

Then followed a scene the like of which I can never hope to see again, and it was worth a man's seeing, but there were times that night when I wished I had not agreed to follow Graeme in his plot.

As we went up to the hotel I asked Graeme:

"What about the law of this?"

"Law!" he replied indignantly. "They haven't troubled much about law in the whisky business here. They get a keg of high wines and some drugs and begin operations. No," he went on; "if we can get the crowd out and ourselves in we'll make them break the law in getting us out. The law won't trouble us over smuggled whisky. It will be a great lark, and they won't crow too loud over the league."

I did not like the undertaking at first, but as I thought of the whole wretched illegal business flourishing upon the weakness of the men in the mines and camps, whom I had learned to regard as brothers, and especially as I thought of the cowards that did for Nixon, I let my scruples go and determined, with Abe, to "get back at 'em."

We had no difficulty getting them out. Abe began to yell. Some men rushed out to learn the cause. He seized the foremost man, making a hideous uproar all the while, and in three minutes had every man out of the hotel and a lively row going on.

In two minutes more Graeme and I had the door of the ballroom locked and barricaded with empty casks. We then closed the door of the barroom leading to the outside. The barroom was a strongly built log shack, with a heavy door secured, after the manner of the early cabins, with two strong oak bars, so that we felt safe from attack from that quarter.

The ballroom we could not hold long, for the door was slight and entrance was possible through the window. But as only a few casks of liquor were left there our main work would be in the bar, so that the fight would be to hold the passageway. This we barricaded with casks and tables. But by this time the crowd had begun to realize what had happened and were wildly yelling at door and windows. With an ax which Graeme had brought with him the casks were soon stove in and left to empty themselves.

As I was about to empty the last cask Graeme stopped me, saying: "Let that stand here. It will help us." And so it did. "Now, skip for the barricade!" yelled Graeme as a man came crashing through the window. But before he could regain his feet Graeme had seized him and flung him out upon the heads of the crowd outside. But through the other windows men were coming in, and Graeme rushed for the barricade, followed by two of the enemy, the foremost of whom I received at the top and hurled back upon the others.

"Now be quick!" said Graeme. "I'll hold this. Don't break any bottles on the floor. Throw them out there," pointing to a little window high up in the wall.

I made all haste. The casks did not take much time, and soon the whisky and beer were flowing over the floor. It made me think of Geordie's regret over the "sinfu' waste." The bottles took longer, and, glancing up now and then, I saw that Graeme was being hard pressed. Men would leap, two and three at a time, upon the barricade, and Graeme's arms would shoot out, and over they would topple upon the heads of those nearest. It was a great sight to see him standing alone, with a smile on his face and the light of battle in his eye, coolly meeting his assailants with those terrific, lightning-like blows. In fifteen minutes my work was done.

"What next?" I asked. "How do we get out?"

"How is the door?" he replied.

I looked through the porthole and said:

"A crowd of men waiting."

"We'll have to make a dash for it, I fancy," he replied cheerfully, though his face was covered with blood and his breath was coming in short gasps. "Get down the bars and be ready."

But even as he spoke a chair hurled from below caught him on the arm, and before he could recover a man had cleared the barricade and was upon him like a tiger. It was Idaho Jack.

"Hold the barricade!" Graeme called out as they both went down.

I sprang to his place, but I had not much hope of holding it long. I had the heavy oak bar of the door in my hands, and, swinging it round my head, I made the crowd give back for a few moments.

Meantime Graeme had shaken off his enemy, who was circling about him upon his tiptoes, with a long knife in his hand, waiting for a chance to spring.

"I have been waiting for this for some time, Mr. Graeme," he said, smiling.

"Yes," replied Graeme, "ever since I spoiled your cutthroat game in Frisco. How is the little one?" he added sarcastically.

Idaho's face lost its smile and became distorted with fury as he replied, spitting out his words:

"She—is—where you will be before I am done with you."

"Ah, you murdered her too! You'll hang some beautiful day, Idaho," said Graeme as Idaho sprang upon him.

Graeme dodged his blow and caught his forearm with his left hand and held up high the murderous knife. Back and forward they swayed over the floor, slippery with whisky, the knife held high in the air. I wondered why Graeme did not strike, and then I saw his right hand hung limp from the wrist. The men were crowding upon the barricade. I was in despair. Graeme's strength was going fast. With a yell of exultant fury Idaho threw himself with all his weight upon Graeme, who could only cling to him. They swayed together toward me, but as they fell I brought down my bar upon the upraised hand and sent the knife flying across the room. Idaho's howl of rage and pain was mingled with a shout from below, and there, dashing the crowd to right and left, came old Nelson, followed by Abe, Sandy, Baptiste, Shaw and others. As they reached the barricade it crashed down and, carrying me with it, pinned me fast.

Looking out between the barrels, I saw what froze my heart with horror. In the fall Graeme had wound his arms about his enemy and held him in a grip so deadly that he could not strike, but Graeme's strength was failing, and when I looked I saw that Idaho was slowly dragging both across the slippery floor to where the knife lay. Nearer and nearer his outstretched fingers came to the knife. In vain I yelled and struggled. My voice was lost in the awful din, and the barricade held me fast. Above me, standing on a barrel head, was Baptiste, yelling like a demon. In vain I called to him. My fingers could just reach his foot, and he heeded not at all my touch. Slowly Idaho was dragging his almost unconscious victim toward the knife. His fingers were touching the blade point when, under a sudden inspiration, I pulled out my penknife, opened it with my teeth and drove the blade into Baptiste's foot. With a bloodcurdling yell he sprang down and began dancing round in his rage, peering among the barrels.

"Look! Look!" I was calling in agony and pointing. "For heaven's sake, look, Baptiste!"

The fingers had closed upon the knife, the knife was already high in the air, when, with a shriek, Baptiste cleared the room at a bound, and before the knife could fall the little Frenchman's boot had caught the uplifted wrist and sent the knife flying to the wall.

Then there was a great rushing sound as of wind through the forest, and the lights went out. When I awoke, I found myself lying with my head on Graeme's knees and Baptiste sprinkling snow on my face. As I looked up Graeme leaned over, and, smiling down into my eyes, he said:

"Good boy! It was a great fight, and we put it up well." And then he whispered, "I owe you my life, my boy."

His words thrilled my heart through and through, for I loved him as only men can love men, but I only answered:

"I could not keep them back."

"It was well done," he said, and I felt proud.

I confess I was thankful to be so well out of it, for Graeme got off with a bone in his wrist broken and I with a couple of ribs cracked, but had it not been for the open barrel of whisky which kept them occupied for a time, offering too good a chance to be lost, and for the timely arrival of Nelson, neither of us had ever seen the light again.

We found Craig sound asleep upon his couch. His consternation on waking to see us torn, bruised and bloody was laughable, but he hastened to find us warm water and bandages, and we soon felt comfortable.

Baptiste was radiant with pride and delight over the fight and hovered about Graeme and me, giving vent to his feelings in admiring French and English expletives. But Abe was disgusted because of the failure at Slavin's, for when Nelson looked in he saw Slavin's French Canadian wife in charge, with her baby on her lap, and he came back to Shaw and said, "Come away; we can't touch this," and Shaw after looking in, agreed that nothing could be done. A baby held the fort.

As Craig listened to the account of the fight he tried hard not to approve, but he could not keep the gleam out of his eyes, and as I pictured Graeme dashing back the crowd thronging the barricade till he was brought down by the chair Craig laughed gently and put his hand on Graeme's knee, and as I went on to describe my agony while Idaho's fingers were gradually nearing the knife his face grew pale and his eyes grew wide with horror.

"Baptiste here did the business," I said, and the little Frenchman nodded complacently and said:

"Dat's me for sure."

"By the way, how is your foot?" asked Graeme.

"He's fuss rate. Dat's what you call—one bite of—of—dat leel bees. He's dere; you put your finger dere, he's not dere. What you call him?"

"Flea!" I suggested.

"Oui!" cried Baptiste. "Dat's one bite of flea."

"I was thankful I was under the barrels," I replied, smiling.

"Oui! Dat's mak me ver mad. I jump and swear mos awfu bad. Dat's pardon me, M'sieu Craig, heh?"

But Craig only smiled at him rather sadly.

"It was awfully risky," he said to Graeme, "and it was hardly worth it. They'll get more whisky, and anyway the league is gone."

"Well," said Graeme, with a sigh of satisfaction, "it is not quite such a one sided affair as it was."

And we could say nothing in reply, for we could hear Nixon snoring in the next room, and no one had heard of Billy, and there were others of the league that we knew were even now down at Slavin's. It was thought best that all should remain in Mr. Craig's shack, not knowing what might happen, and so we lay where we could, and we needed none to sing us to sleep.

When I awoke, stiff and sore, it was to find breakfast ready and old man Nelson in charge. As we were seated Craig came in, and I saw that he was not the man of the night before. His courage had come back; his face was quiet and his eye clear. He was his own man again.

"Geordie has been out all night, but has failed to find Billy," he announced quietly.

We did not talk much. Graeme and I worried with our broken bones, and the others suffered from a general morning depression. But after breakfast, as the men were beginning to move, Craig took down his Bible, and, saying, "Wait a few minutes, men," he read slowly, in his beautiful, clear voice, that psalm for all fighters,

> "God is our refuge and strength," and so on to the noble words:

> "The Lord of Hosts is with us;
> The God of Jacob is our refuge."

How the mighty words pulled us together, lifted us till we grew ashamed of our ignoble rage and of our ignoble depression!

And then Craig prayed in simple, straightgoing words. There was acknowledgment of failure, but I knew he was thinking chiefly of himself; there was gratitude, and that was for the men about him, and I felt my face burn with shame; there was a petition for help, and we all thought of Nixon and Billy and the men wakening from their debauch at Slavin's this pure, bright morning. Then he asked that we might be made faithful and worthy of God, whose battle it was. Then we all stood up and shook hands with him in silence, and every man knew a covenant was being made. But none saw his meeting with Nixon. He sent us all away before that.

Nothing was heard of the destruction of the hotel stock in trade. Unpleasant questions would certainly be asked, and the proprietor decided to let bad alone. On the point of respectability the success of the ball was not conspicuous, but the antileague men were content if not jubilant.

Billy Breen was found by Geordie late in the afternoon in his own old and deserted shack, breathing heavily, covered up in his filthy, moldering bedclothes, with a half empty bottle of whisky at his side. Geordie's grief and rage were beyond even his Scotch control. He spoke few words, but these were of such concentrated vehemence that no one felt the need of Abe's assistance in vocabulary.

Poor Billy! We carried him to Mrs. Mavor's home, put him in a warm bath, rolled him in blankets and gave him little sips of hot water, then of hot milk and coffee, as I had seen a clever doctor in the hospital treat a similar case of nerve and heart depression. But the already weakened system could not recover from the awful shock of the exposure following the debauch, and on Sunday afternoon we saw that his heart was failing fast. All day the miners had been dropping in to inquire after him, for Billy had been a great favorite in other days, and the attention of the town had been admiringly centered upon his fight of these last weeks. It was with no ordinary sorrow that the news of his condition was received. As Mrs. Mavor sang to him his large, coarse hands moved in time to the music, but he did not open his eyes till he heard Mr. Craig's voice in the next room. Then he spoke his name, and Mr. Craig was kneeling beside him in a moment. The words came slowly:

"Oi tried—to fight hit hout—but—Oi got beaten. Hit 'urts to think 'e's ashamed o' me. Oi'd like t'a done better—Oi would."

"Ashamed of you, Billy!" said Craig in a voice that broke. "Not he."

"And—ye hall—'elped me so!" he went on. "Oi wish Oi'd 'a' done better—Oi do." And his eyes sought Geordie and then rested on Mrs. Mavor, who smiled back at him with a world of love in her eyes. "You hain't hashamed o' me—yore heyes saigh so," he said, looking at her.

"No, Billy," she said, and I wondered at her steady voice, "not a bit. Why, Billy, I am proud of you."

He gazed up at her with wonder and ineffable love in his little eyes, then lifted his hand slightly toward her. She knelt quickly and took it in both of hers, stroking it and kissing it.

"Oi haught t'a done better. Oi'm hawful sorry Oi went back on 'im. Hit was the lemonaide. The boys didn't mean no 'arm, but hit started the 'ell hinside."

Geordie hurled out some bitter words.

"Don't be 'ard on 'em, Geordie. They didn't mean no 'arm," he said, and his eyes kept waiting till Geordie said hurriedly:

"Na, na, lad! I'll juist leave them till the Almichty."

Then Mrs. Mavor sang softly, smoothing his hand, "Just as I Am," and Billy dozed quietly for half an hour.

When he awoke again, his eyes turned to Mr. Craig, and they were troubled and anxious.

"Oi tried 'ard. Oi wanted to win," he struggled to say.

By this time Craig was master of himself, and he answered in a clear, distinct voice:

"Listen, Billy. You made a great fight, and you are going to win yet. And, besides, do you remember the sheep that got lost over the mountains?" This parable was Billy's special delight. "He didn't beat it when he got it, did he? He took it in his arms and carried it home, and so he will you."

And Billy, keeping his eyes fastened on Mr. Craig, simply said:

"Will 'e?"

"Sure!" said Craig.

"Will 'e?" he repeated, turning his eyes upon Mrs. Mavor.

"Why, yes, Billy," she answered cheerily, though the tears were streaming from her eyes. "I would, and he loves you far more."

He looked at her, smiled and closed his eyes. I put my hand on his heart. It was fluttering feebly. Again a troubled look passed over his face.

"My—poor—hold—mother!" he whispered. "She's—hin—the—wukus."

"I shall take care of her, Billy," said Mrs. Mavor in a clear voice, and again Billy smiled. Then he turned his eyes to Mr. Craig and from him to Geordie and at last to Mrs. Mavor, where they rested. She bent over and kissed him twice on the forehead.

"Tell 'er," he said, with difficulty, "'e's took me 'ome."

"Yes, Billy!" she cried, gazing into his glazing eyes.

He tried to lift her hand. She kissed him again. He drew one deep breath and lay quite still.

"Thank the blessed Saviour!" said Mr. Craig reverently. "He has taken him home."

But Mrs. Mavor held the dead hand tight and sobbed out passionately:

"Oh, Billy, Billy, you helped me once when I needed help! I cannot forget!"

And Geordie, groaning, "Aye, laddie, laddie!" passed out into the fading light of the early evening.

Next day no one went to work, for to all it seemed a sacred day. They carried him into the little church, and there Mr. Craig spoke of his long, hard fight and of his final victory, for he died without a fear and with love to the men who, not knowing, had been his death. And there was no bitterness in any heart, for Mr. Craig read the story of the sheep and told how gently he had taken Billy home; but, though no word was spoken, it was there the league was made again.

They laid him under the pines beside Lewis Mavor, and the miners threw sprigs of evergreen into the open grave. When Slavin, sobbing bitterly, brought his sprig, no one stopped him, though all thought it strange.

As we turned to leave the grave the light from the evening sun came softly through the gap in the mountains and, filling the valley, touched the trees and the little mound beneath with glory, and I thought of that other glory which is brighter than the sun and was not sorry that poor Billy's weary fight was over, and I could not help agreeing with Craig that it was there the league had its revenge.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

Scott's Emulsion

You will find it just as useful in summer as in winter, and if you are thriving upon it don't stop because the weather is warm.

Mrs. Chas. Aten.

Mrs. Susan A. Aten was born June 12, 1832 in Sanderson, Sussex county, New Jersey, and died in Tecumseh June 1, 1902. Her maiden name was Susan A. Litts. September 25, 1852, she was married to Charles S. Aten, to whom she has ever been a faithful and helpful wife. She has seen six children grow to manhood and womanhood under her kind and toilsome care; Geo. F. Aten, of Princeville, Ill., Chas. D. Aten and Mrs. Pfeiffer, of Peoria Ill., and Alfred, Emma and Nelson Aten, of Tecumseh.

Early in life she joined the M. E. church and was as true to her Christ and her church as to her husband. The G. A. R. boys and their wives were glad to honor her with the last offices of friend to friend and render to her and her loved ones the same kindness which she on many an occasion had shown to to others in trouble.

She was buried from her home June 4 with many tokens of respect and sorrow. We all extend to her bereaved husband and children our sincere sympathy.

Among those from out of town who attended the funeral which was held Wednesday afternoon were Mrs. Pfeiffer and Chas. Aten, of Peoria, Ill. George Aten of Princeville, Ill., and Jimmie Aten, of Lansing.

PARKER---BOND

Two Youthful Hearts United in Marriage at

SALINE

Miss Bond Formerly Worked in S. W. Anderson's Store.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Bond at Saline presented a pretty scene Wednesday, June 4, the occasion being the marriage of their daughter Lois to Mr. Alonzo Parker, of Ann Arbor. It was a delightfully informal affair, the bride and groom mingling with the guests until the appointed hour, 12 o'clock, when they took their places in the parlor and the solemn words were spoken which united two happy hearts for life.

After congratulations were offered, a sumptuous three course dinner was served, the guests being seated at small tables on the lawn.

After a wedding trip to Kalkaska, where the parents of the groom reside, Mr. and Mrs. Parker will be at home to their friends at Ann Arbor, Mich., after July 1.

Mrs. Parker is well known in Tecumseh, having held the position of bookkeeper at S. W. Anderson's store some time time ago. Mr. and Mrs. L. Van Doren and son Albert, Mr. and Mrs. John Boyce and daughter Mildred, Mrs. White Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hendershot, Mr. and Mrs. Watson Aten, Mrs. Keyser and Mrs. Wright went over from here to attend the wedding.

For desperate throat and lung diseases it is the safest cure in the world, and is infallible for coughs, colds and bronchial affections. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Change of Employment.

Since the start of the business of the Tecumseh Telephone Co., Miss Harriett Whittier has been cheif operator and for several years collector of the company. She has been a very efficient employee, a credit to herself and the telephone company and it has been a pleasure to every telephone suscriber that she could transact the business with them.

Miss Whittier will leave the employ of the company to-morrow night, will take several weeks' vacation and then commence keeping books for the Hayden Milling Co.

The employment in the telephone office made Miss Whittier acquainted with many people. All liked her and although they are sorry to have changes think that Manager Mills will always keep a close eye to the business and that their telephone calls will always receive prompt attention.

Cut out the Rye.

There seems to be an unusual growth of rye in the wheat for our coming crop and it will stand the farmer well in hand to pull or cut it out.

It is not a very difficult job and as the market value of wheat will be affected anywhere from five to twelve cents a bushel by the presence of rye in the wheat, and it is an easy way to make money to go at it now and cut it out.

It will save a good many dollars to the farmer, means a great deal better flour for the community in general and makes better feelings with wheat buyers all over the state if attended to now.

All Humors

Are impure matters which the skin, liver, kidneys and other organs can not take care of without help, there is such an accumulation of them.

They litter the whole system.

Pimples, boils, eczema and other eruptions, loss of appetite, that tired feeling, bilious turns, fits of indigestion, dull headaches and many other troubles are due to them.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

"I had salt rheum on my hands so that I could not work. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and it drove out the humor. I continued its use till the sores disappeared." MRS. IRA O. BROWN, Rumford Falls, Me.

Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW
What a Heap of Happiness it Would Bring to Tecumseh Homes.

Hard to do housework with an aching back.

If women only knew the cause:

Backache pains come from sick kidneys,

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure it.

Tecumseh people endorse this.

Mrs. J. W. Owen, wife of the well-known carpenter, living in the south-eastern section of Tecumseh, says: "I am very well pleased with Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured a box at C. A. Wright's drug store and they did me a lot of good. I had heart trouble and my kidneys did not perform their proper duties. This condition existed for some time. I tried different remedies which were recommended to me but received little if any benefit from them. I will cheerfully say this for Doan's Kidney Pills. I received more permanent relief from their use than from any other medicine I ever used. I am pleased to testify to their value."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

CROPS GROW FINELY.
State Report of Extremely Encouraging Nature.

Lansing, Mich., June 4.—The weekly crop bulletin issued by the state weather bureau says that frost of some severity occurred in all parts of the state during the early part of the week, but the damage was very slight. A few correspondents report some injury to strawberries, but fruit quite generally appears to have escaped injury. The weather conditions have been favorable to winter wheat and rye, oats, barley, meadows and pastures, all of which are in promising condition.

With All My Worldly Goods.

A minister whose first parish was in the backwoods of the west some years ago says that he once married a very seedy looking bridegroom to a buxom girl of perhaps twenty years. The ceremony was performed in the log cabin home of the bride's parents, and there were many guests present. When the bridegroom repeated the words, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow," a tall, lank fellow with a huge tobacco cud in his bulging cheek drawled out nasally:

"Thar goes Hank's bull terrier, by gum!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

The Death Chair.

Doubt is often cast upon electrocution as a system by the fact that persons may survive an accidental shock of 2,000 volts. The Electrical World and Engineer points out that the conditions of a chance contact are entirely different from those provided in the chair. It says, "There can be no question that the subject dies by the effects of the electric shock and is dead beyond all hope before the autopsy takes place."

Gray Hair

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for over thirty years. It has kept my scalp free from dandruff and has prevented my hair from turning gray."—Mrs. F. A. Soule, Billings, Mont.

There is this peculiar thing about Ayer's Hair Vigor—it is a hair food, not a dye. Your hair does not suddenly turn black, look dead and lifeless. But gradually the old color comes back,—all the rich, dark color it used to have. The hair stops falling, too.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT FOR CONSTIPATION

Constipation is nothing more than a clogging of the bowels and nothing less than vital stagnation or death if not relieved. If every constipated sufferer could realize that he is allowing poisonous filth to remain in his system, he would soon get relief. Constipation invites all kind of contagion. Headaches, biliousness, colds and many other ailments disappear when constipated bowels are relieved. Thedford's Black-Draught thoroughly cleans out the bowels in an easy and natural manner without the purging of calomel or other violent cathartics.

Be sure that you get the original Thedford's Black-Draught, made by The Chattanooga Medicine Co. Sold by all druggists in 25 cent and $1.00 packages.

Morgan, Ark., May 25, 1901.
I cannot recommend Thedford's Black-Draught too highly. I keep it in my house all the time and have used it for the last ten years. I never gave my children any other laxative. I think I could never be able to work without it on account of being troubled with constipation. Your medicine is all that keeps me up.

THE PLANET MARS.
Science Cannot Say Whether There Be Men There or Not.

To the popular mind all astronomical research ought of necessity to be concerned with the important questions whether there are men in the moon and inhabitants in Mars. To the first of these astronomy returns a decided negative. There is no life on the moon, and probably no life, either vegetable or animal, existed at any period of human history. To the second the answer is: We cannot tell. There may be men in Mars and there may not. The conditions of life there do not preclude the existence of human beings. We have in Mars rain and snow, sunshine and gloom, summer and winter, as on our earth.

Perhaps the closing years of the twentieth century will see astronomers armed with a telescope powerful enough to reveal towns and cities in Mars. Should ever such a discovery be made I could conceive of none greater in the whole range of time, none more upsetting or disconcerting. To the ordinary astronomer untroubled by such hopes the future lines of astronomical progress is simply and clearly defined, and that progress is simply to answer the old lines:

> Twinkle, twinkle, little star,
> How I wonder what you are.

This was the problem before our friend who wrote on astronomy a hundred years ago; this will be the problem before astronomers a hundred years hence.—Chambers' Journal.

Wisdom in City Directories.

The New York city directory for the early years of the nineteenth century contained an almanac and other features now considered to be extraneous to directories. The compilation was largely done by Abraham Shoemaker. Mr. Shoemaker had a habit of ornamenting the margins of the pages with quaint old "saws" of this character:

A traveler should have a hog's nose, a deer's legs and an ass' back.

A little house well filled, a little field well tilled and a little wife well drilled are great riches.

A poor man must walk to get meat for his stomach, the rich man to get a stomach for his meat.

Tell a miser he's rich and a woman she's old, you'll get no money of the one nor kindness from t'other.

Love, cough and smoke can't well be hid.

A Royal Tragedy.

Frederick I. of Prussia was killed by fear. His wife was insane, and one day she escaped from her keepers and, dabbling her clothes in blood, rushed upon her husband while he was dozing in his chair. King Frederick imagined her to be the white lady whose ghost was believed to appear whenever the death of a member of the royal family was to occur, and he was thrown into a fever and died in six weeks.

TAFT'S MISSION

Will Deal With the Vatican For Philippine Friar Lands.

SEPERATE CHURCH AND STATE

People of the Islands Refuse to Again Accept the Friars—They Will be Well Paid for Their Property—Rental Question Also to be Settled.

Washington, June 7.—Secretary Root has sent to the Philippine committees of the house and senate the textual copies of the instructions given by him to Governor Taft for his guidance in dealing with the Vatican respecting the equisition by the United States of the friars' lands in the Philippines. These instructions were exhibited Thursday by Governor Taft to the Vatican officials and, as will be perceived from their context, served the purpose of credentials. The text is as follows:

May 9, 1902.

Sir—It is now apparent that congress will not have acted upon the Philippine commission's recommendations regarding the purchase of friars' lands before the time of your departure for Manila, which cannot be longer delayed.

You are accordingly authorized, in the course of your journey to Manila, to visit Rome and there ascertain what church authorities have the power to negotiate for and determine upon a sale of the lands of the religious orders in the Philippine islands, and if you find, as we are informed, that the officers of the church at Rome have such power and authority you will endeavor to attain the results above indicated. The following propositions, which are deemed to be fundamental and which shall be fully and frankly stated to the other side in the negotiations:

Separate Church and State.

One of the controlling principles of our government is the complete separation of church and state, with the entire freedom of each from any control or interference by the other. This principle is imperative wherever American jurisdiction extends, and no modification or shading thereof can be a subject of discussion.

By reason of the separation, the religious orders can no longer perform in behalf of the state, the duties in relation to public instruction and public charities formerly resting upon them, and the power which they formerly exercised, through their relations to the civil government being now withdrawn, they find themselves the objects of such hostility on the part of their tenantry against them as landlords and on the part of the people of the parishes against them as representatives of the former government, that they are no longer capable of serving any useful purpose for the church. No rents can be collected from the populous communities occupying their lands unless it be by the intervention of the civil government with armed force. They will not be voluntarily accepted again by the people, and can't be restored to their positions either by forcible intervention on the part of the civil government, which the principles of our government forbid.

It is manifest that under these conditions it is for the interest of the church as well as of the state, that the landed proprietorship of the religious orders in the Philippine islands should cease.

Extinguish Land Titles.

It is the wish of our government, in case congress shall grant authority, that the titles of the religious orders to the large tracts of agricultural lands which they now hold shall be extinguished, but that full and fair compensation shall be made therefor.

The titles to the great amount of church lands and buildings in the islands other than those of the religious orders and now apparently owned by the state, should be settled fairly.

Provision should be made for ascertaining what rentals, if any, ought to be paid for conventos and other church buildings which have been occupied by United States troops during the insurrection, this being, of course, subject to further specific action by congress.

Your errand will not be in any sense or degree diplomatic in its nature, but will be purely a business matter of negotiation by you as governor of the Philippines for the purchase of property from the owners thereof, and the settlement of land in such a manner as to contribute to the best interests of the people of the islands.

Very respectfully,
ELIHU ROOT,
Secretary of War.

Hon. William H. Taft, Civil Governor of Philippines, Washington, D. C.

Horse Train Wrecked.

Bellefontaine, O., June 7.—A special train on the Big Four railroad was wrecked near Mix station Friday, injuring about twenty valuable horses out of the ninety-one on the train. Brakeman James Borden of Ansonia was killed and Engineer Daniel Kunkel and Fireman George Boyer, both of Bellefontaine, were badly injured. The following horse owners were also injured, none seriously: H. S. Argyle, Nashville, Tenn.; J. J. Ogles, Fort Worth, Tex.; J. M. Carth, Charlottesville, Va.; J. W. Pangle, Washington, D. C. The special express was bound from St. Louis to Fort Erie and jumped the track while running at high speed.

Is He Insane?

Washington, June 7.—A colored man who gave his name as R. B. Allen of Hicksville, O., was taken into custody at the White House yesterday. He claimed to be a human battery and to be the only means of communication with the army of the United States which, he said, he brought along with him in balloons. He will be held pending an investigation as to his sanity.

A GRAND DISPLAY

Plans Revealed for the Big Naval Review

IN WEST INDIAN WATERS

All Available Ships Will be Present—Admirals Ordered to Put Their Men in Condition—Many Torpedo Destroyers Also Included.

Washington, June 7.—The navy department has made public the orders for the assembling next winter of the vessels of the North Atlantic, South Atlantic and European stations to participate in the most extensive fleet manoeuvers ever attempted by the navy in the West Indies. The orders recite that about Nov. 1 next the department will assemble all available vessels of the stations named, and about Jan. 1, 1903, these vessels will be gathered at Culebra, P. R., or Guantanamo, Cuba, and organized and drilled for two months as a fleet. The commanders-in-chief of the three stations are given special orders to govern their respective commands.

Rear Admiral Higginson, commanding the North Atlantic station, is directed to assemble his vessels at Hampton Roads, Va., about Nov. 15 and proceed to the scene of manoeuvers. He is directed to hold drills in the meantime with a view of inspiring healthy rivalry between crews, to encourage officers and men, and to quicken ammunition handling and the loading of guns, to do away with tiresome lectures to enlisted men and to pay special attention to gun pointing, all this to increase the efficiency of the squadron and discover which of the officers and men are able to handle the ships to the best advantage in the manoeuvers.

Rear Admiral Sumner, commanding the South Atlantic station, is directed to assemble his vessels at Bahia, Brazil, not later than Dec. 5, fill with coal and report his readiness to sail north with vessels coaled and provisioned by Dec. 12. Admiral Sumner also is directed to institute a system of progressive drills in order to bring his squadron up to the highest possible point of proficiency.

Rear Admiral Crowninshield is charged to gather the vessels of the European station at Gibraltar not later than Nov. 25, to coal there and then proceed on Dec. 10 to the Cape Verde islands, where the vessels will coal again and be in readiness to leave for the West Indies.

The list of vessels which take part is as follows: Kearsarge, Iowa, Massachusetts, Brooklyn, Illinois, Alabama, Indiana, the new Maine (probably), Olympia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Raleigh, Albany, Chicago, San Francisco, Newark, Atlanta, Detroit, [illegible] as many of the half hundred or more torpedo boats and destroyers as are available at the time, and a fleet of naval colliers.

700 Tars For Uncle Sam's Navy.

New York, June 7.—Laden with 500 tons of supplies for the ships on the Asiatic station, the cruiser Buffalo has sailed for Manila. The ship also carried 700 sailors to replace those whose terms of service on the ships of the European and Asiatic stations have expired. The Buffalo will go direct to Gibraltar and is expected to make the trip to Manila in forty-two days.

Urged Boers to be Good.

Vredefort Road, Orange River Colony, June 7.—Gen. Christian Dewet, addressing the inmates of the concentration camp here, described the circumstances leading to the cessation of hostilities and urged the burghers to do their utmost to show Great Britain what good colonists the Boers can make. The speech made a favorable impression.

Guilty of Marital Infidelity.

Philadelphia, June 7.—Charles H. Beecher, son of George L. Beecher, the Detroit millionaire, was yesterday found guilty of the charge of marital infidelity brought against him by his alleged wife, Carrie Dearborn. He was sentenced to nine months in the county prison, to date from Dec. 4 last. This leaves the defendant but three months more of imprisonment.

Her Dearest Friend.

"If you were I," she said to her dearest friend, "would you be married in the spring or the fall?"

"If I were you," was the unhesitating reply, "and had actually secured a man, I would set the wedding for the earliest date possible."—Chicago Post.

THANKS TO GOD

The British Empire Extended Thanks For Peace.

KING ATTENDS THE SERVICES

Streets Were Crowded With Loyal Subjects, Who Cheered the Distinguished Procession—Sermon Delivered by Bishop Stepney.

London, June 9.—The noisy jubilation with which London was resounded for the last week was succeeded Sunday by a more subdued, although not less impressive, public demonstration of thankfulness for the return of peace in South Africa.

The thanksgiving services held in London were typical of the services held throughout the empire, but the presence of King Edward and other members of the royal family at the principal devotional service in London and the progress of the royal personages to and from St. Paul's cathedral through cheering thousands of British subjects and visitors in London, gave thanksgiving day in the metropolis the added feature of a notable historic event.

Cheered Lord Roberts.

Although the weather was chilly the streets for the entire distance from the palace to the cathedral were thickly lined with people, who bared their heads and cheered as the members of the royal family and other notabilities passed. King Edward was greeted with enthusiasm and his majesty, the Prince of Wales, and the other princes were busily engaged in acknowledging salutations from the crowd. Lord Roberts, who drove with his wife and daughters, was one of the figures most conspicuously greeted with cheers.

King Edward and Queen Alexandra alighted at the west entrance of St. Paul's. Here they were received by the bishops of Stepney and London and conducted by them to their seats, which were under the dome of the building and directly in front of the pulpit.

Parliament Members Present.

Members of the house of lords and members of the house of commons were seated on opposite sides under the dome.

In addition to the presence of many army and navy officials, the military prowess of the empire was represented by detachments of the Royal Fusiliers, the Horse and Foot Guards and other regiments.

Their majesties entered the cathedral to the accompaniment of the hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers" by the organ and choir, and the throng of worshippers rose and heartily joined in the singing. The cathedral organ was reinforced with horns and other instruments. A notable feature of the "Te Deum" composed by the late Arthur Sullivan for a thanksgiving peace service. Following the thanksgiving collects and at the request of King Edward, the hymn "O God, Our Help in Ages Past" was sung to the tune of "Old Hundred."

The sermon by the bishop of Stepney was short and simple and was preached on the effective text, "The blessings of peace." The service was concluded with the singing of the nation anthem.

CANAL BILL THIS WEEK.

Effort Will be Made to Bring It to a Vote Saturday.

Washington, June 9.—The greater part of the time of the senate the present week will be given to the interoceanic canal bill. An effort probably will be made by the supporters of the Nicaragua route to secure an agreement to vote on the bill next Saturday, but the probabilities are all against success. Senator Harris of Kansas will open the debate today in support of the Nicaragua route, and he will be followed by various other senators for and against the measure.

Today, in the morning, Senator Simmons of North Carolina will speak on the bill creating a national park in the southern Appalachian mountains and from the agreement reached Saturday the morning hour of other days will be devoted to consideration of Senator Nelson's bill for the abolition of the London dock charges until a vote shall be taken upon it.

The house program for this week contemplates consideration of the Pacific cable and the senate irrigation bills, which the rules committee is anxious to have disposed of before the time set for taking up the Philippine government bill. Special rules have been prepared for consideration of both measures. The cable bill will be given two and the irrigation bill three days. The cable bill provides for an American-built and an American-laid cable to connect our insular possessions in the Pacific with the Pacific coast. It carries a direct appropriation out of the treasury for this purpose. The prospects for its passage are not considered bright. Mr. Corliss, the author of the bill, professes confidence that it will pass. The opposition to the measure believe the cable to the Philippines should be laid by private enterprise. Today is District of Columbia day.

Three Killed by Train.

Logansport, Ind., June 9.—Three men were almost instantly killed Saturday evening by a Panhandle passenger train due here at 7:30 o'clock. The accident happened at Jewell station. The men, in a buggy, attempted to cross the tracks in front of the fast-approaching train.

Mine Boss Killed.

Virulent Cancer Cured.

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by Druggist G. W. Roberts, of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel bilious kidney and microbe poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions, ulcers and sores vanish. CRITICISED ROOSEVELT.

Representative Richardson Didn't Like His Memorial Address.

Washington, June 7.—After transacting some routine business the senate resumed consideration of the isthmian canal bill Friday, Mr. Hanna of Ohio continuing his argument in support of the Panama canal. The Ohio senator declared that no political considerations were involved in the canal problem. He presented the opinions of eighty-three shipmasters and pilots in favor of the Panama route as againts the Nicaragua route, for many reasons which they cited. He urged that the construction of the Nicaragua canal was beset with unknown difficuities, while the construction of the Panama canal was "an open book." He laid particular stress on the danger of the Nicaragua route from volcanoes and urged that it was not good business policy to ignore those dangers in a project involving an expenditure of $200,000,000. In conclusion, Mr. Hanna appealed to the senate to consider the matter as a business proposition, and with some feeling repudiated the suggestion that those favoring the Panama route were not in favor of any canal.

General debate on the anti-anarchy bill closed Friday. The incident of the day was a speech by Mr. Richardson, an Alabama democrat, condemning the president in severe terms for the references in his Memorial day oration at Arlington to the epithets applied to Lincoln and Grant during the civil war and for his allusions to lynchings. He declared that the president's remarks violated the proprieties of the occasion. Mr. Littlefield made a legal argument of an hour and a half in closing the debate on the anti-anarchy bill. The section of the senate bill providing a bodyguard for the president was stricken from the senate bill as a precaution in case the house substitute failed.

STRIKE NOT LIKELY.

Virginia Coal Miners Are Backward About Obeying Orders.

Fairmont, W. Va., June 7.—The order for a general strike of coal miners in the two Virginias, known as District 17, takes effect today. The uneasiness manifested in business circles during the past week has, in a great measure, disappeared, for there are no evidences that the strike order will be generally obeyed. The Associated Press correspondent has completed a visit to all the coal regions of West Virginia and finds the situation very much the same everywhere throughout the state. Unless all indications are misleading, the strike order will be heeded by a very small per cent of the 35,000 miners in West Virginia. The order emanated from headquarters of the National U. M. W. C. through a convention held in Huntington, W. Va., a few weeks ago.

The chief issue is for recognition of the union. There is no question of wages. Union sentiment has never been strong, and strike movements have never been popular in this state.

Indications here are that there will [illegible] field today, but none of the National U. M. W. officials are here yet. Secretary-Treasurer W. B. Wilson is expected. Thomas Haggerty, in charge of the movement in northern West Virginia, said: "Unless we get half of the men out today in West Virginia we will not claim a victory. Failing in half, the operators will gain and we will lose strength thereafter. The miners are hard to reach and hard to convince."

Rockefeller Invading Michigan.

Washington, June 7.—It is asserted on what appears to be entirely reliable authority that, associated with the sugar trust in buying stock in Michigan and other beet sugar factories, with the idea of ultimately getting control of the beet sugar industry of the country, is John D. Rockefeller and other Standard Oil financiers. Not, however, until congress definitely settles the Cuban reciprocity question will any acknowledgment of ownership or control of beet sugar interests by the Havemeyer-Rockefeller people be made. The same authority asserts that the latter have plans fully defined to control the beet sugar product of the country.

BLACK ROCK

CHAPTER X.

WHAT CAME TO SLAVIN.

BILLY BREEN'S legacy to the Black Rock mining camp was a new league, which was more than the old league remade. The league was new in its spirit and in its methods. The impression made upon the camp by Billy Breen's death was very remarkable, and I have never been quite able to account for it. The mood of the community at the time was peculiarly susceptible. Billy was one of the oldest of the old timers. His decline and fall had been a long process, and his struggle for life and manhood was striking enough to arrest the attention and awaken the sympathy of the whole camp. We instinctively side with a man in his struggle for freedom, for we feel that freedom is native to him and to us. The sudden collapse of the struggle stirred the men with a deep pity for the beaten man and a deep contempt for those who had tricked him to his doom; but, though the pity and the contempt remained, the gloom was relieved and the sense of defeat removed from the men's minds by the transforming glory of Billy's last hour. Mr. Craig, reading of the tragedy of Billy's death, transfigured defeat into victory, and this was gradually accepted by the men as the true reading, though to them it was full of mystery. But they could all understand and appreciate at full value the spirit that breathed through the words of the dying man: "Don't be 'ard on 'em. They didn't mean no 'arm." And this was the new spirit of the league.

It was this spirit that surprised Slavin into sudden tears at the grave's side. He had come braced for curses and vengeance, for all knew it was he who had doctored Billy's lemonade, and instead of vengeance the message from the dead that echoed through the voice of the living was one of pity and forgiveness.

But the days of the league's negative, defensive warfare were over. The fight was to the death, and now the war was to be carried into the enemy's country. The league men proposed a thoroughly equipped and well conducted coffee room, reading room and hall to parallel the enemy's lines of operation and defeat them with their own weapons upon their own ground. The main outlines of the scheme were clearly defined and were easily seen, but the perfecting of the details called for all Craig's tact and good sense. When, for instance, Vernon Winton, who had charge of the entertainment department, came for Craig's opinion as to a minstrel troupe and private theatricals, Craig was prompt with his answer:

"Anything clean goes."

"A nigger show?" asked Winton.

"Depends upon the niggers," replied Craig, with a gravely comic look, shrewdly adding, "Ask Mrs. Mavor." And so the League Minstrel and Dramatic company became an established fact and proved, as Craig afterward told me, a great means of grace to the camp.

Shaw had charge of the social department, whose special care it was to see that the men were made welcome to the cozy, cheerful reading room, where they might chat, smoke, read, write or play games, according to fancy.

But Craig felt that the success or failure of the scheme would largely depend upon the character of the resident manager, who, while caring for reading room and hall, would control and operate the important department represented by the coffee room.

"At this point the whole business may come to grief," he said to Mrs. Mavor, without whose counsel nothing was done.

"Why come to grief?" she asked brightly.

"Because if we don't get the right man that's what will happen," he replied in a tone that spoke of anxious worry.

"But we shall get the right man, never fear." Her serene courage never faltered. "He will come to us."

Craig turned and gazed at her in frank admiration and said:

"If I only had your courage!"

"Courage!" she answered quickly. "It is not for you to say that." And at his answering look the red came into her cheek and the depths in her eyes glowed, and I marveled and wondered, looking at Craig's cool face, whether his blood were running evenly through his veins. But his voice was quiet—a shade too quiet, I thought—as he gravely replied:

"I would often be a coward but for the shame of it."

And so the league waited for the man to come who was to be resident manager and make the new enterprise a success. And come he did, but the manner of his coming was so extraordinary that I have believed in the doctrine of a special providence ever since, for, as Craig said, "If he had come straight from heaven, I could not have been more surprised."

While the league was thus waiting, its interest centered upon Slavin, chiefly because he represented more than any other the forces of the enemy, and, though Billy Breen stood between him and the vengeance of the angry men who would have made short work of him and his saloon, nothing could save him from himself, and after the funeral Slavin went to his bar and drank whisky as he had never drunk before. But the more he drank the fiercer and gloomier he became, and when the men drinking with him chaffed him he swore deeply and with such threats that they left him alone.

It did not help Slavin either to have Nixon stride in through the crowd drinking at his bar and give him words of warning.

"It is not your fault, Slavin," he said in a slow, cool voice, "that you and your precious crew didn't send me to my death too. You've won your bet, but I want to say that next time, though you are seven to one or ten times that, when any of you boys offer me a drink I'll take you to mean fight, and I'll not disappoint you, and some one will be killed." And, so saying, he strode out again, leaving a mean looking crowd of men behind him. All who had not been concerned in the business at Nixon's shack expressed approval of his position and hoped he would see it through.

[illegible] nothing [illegible] that made by Geordie Crawford. It was not what he said so much as the manner of awful solemnity he carried. Geordie was struggling conscientiously to keep his promise to "not be 'ard on the boys" and found considerable relief in remembering that he had agreed "to leave them tae the Almichty." But the manner of leaving them was so solemnly awful that I could not wonder that Slavin's superstitious Irish nature supplied him with supernatural terrors. It was the second day after the funeral that Geordie and I were walking toward Slavin's. There was a great shout of laughter as we drew near.

Geordie stopped short and, saying, "We'll juist gang in a meenute," passed through the crowd and up to the bar.

"Michael Slavin," began Geordie and the men stared in dead silence, with their glasses in their hands—"Michael Slavin, I promised the lad I'd bear ye nae ill wull, but juist leave ye tae the Almichty, an' I want tae tell ye that I'm keepin' ma wur-r-d. But," and here he raised his hand, and his voice became preternaturally solemn, "his bluid is upon yer han's. Do ye no' see it?"

His voice rose sharply, and as he pointed Slavin instinctively glanced at his hands, and Geordie added:

"Aye, an' the Lord will require it o' ye an' yer hoose."

They told me that Slavin shivered as if taken with ague after Geordie went out, and, though he laughed and swore, he did not stop drinking till he sank in a drunken stupor and had to be carried to bed. His little French Canadian wife could not understand the change that had come over her husband.

"He's like one bear," she confided to Mrs. Mavor, to whom she was showing her baby of a year old. "He's not sees me one tam dis day. He's mos' hateful bad. He's not even look at de baby."

And this seemed sufficient proof that something was seriously wrong, for she went on to say:

"He's tink more for dat leel baby dan for de whole worl'. He's tink more for dat baby dan for me." But she shrugged her pretty little shoulders in deprecation of her speech.

"You must pray for him," said Mrs. Mavor, "and all will come right."

"Ah, madame," she replied earnestly, "every day, every day, I pray la sainte Vierge et tous les saints for him."

"You must pray to your Father in heaven for him."

"Ah, oui, I weel pray." And Mrs. Mavor sent her away bright with smiles and with new hope and courage in her heart.

She had very soon need of all her courage, for at the week's end her baby fell dangerously ill. Slavin's anxiety and fear were not relieved much by the reports the men brought him from time to time of Geordie's ominous forebodings, for Geordie had no doubt that the Avenger of blood was hot upon Slavin's trail, and as the sickness grew he became confirmed in this conviction. While he could not be said to find satisfaction in Slavin's impending affliction, he could hardly hide his complacency in the promptness of Providence in vindicating his theory of retribution.

But Geordie's complacency was somewhat rudely shocked by Mr. Craig's answer to this theory one day.

"You read your Bible to little profit, it seems to me, Geordie, or perhaps you have never read the Master's teaching about the tower of Siloam. Better read that and take that warning to yourself."

Geordie gazed after Mr. Craig as he turned away and muttered:

"The toor o' Siloam, is it? Aye, I ken fine aboot the toor o' Siloam an' aboot the toor o' Babel as weel, an' I've read, too, about the blaspheemious Herod an' sic like. Mon, but he's a hot heided laddie an' lacks discreemeenation."

"What about Herod, Geordie?" I asked.

"Aboot Herod?" with a strong tinge of contempt in his tone. "Aboot Herod? Mon, hae ye no' read in the Screeptur's aboot Herod an' the wur-r-ms in the wame o' him?"

"Oh, yes, I see," I hastened to answer.

"Aye, a fule can see what's flapped in his face," with which bit of proverbial philosophy he suddenly left me. But Geordie thenceforth contented himself, in Mr. Craig's presence at least, with ominous head shakings, equally aggravating and impossible to answer.

That same night, however, Geordie showed that with all his theories he had a man's true heart, for he came in haste to Mrs. Mavor to say:

"Ye'll be needed ower yonder, I'm thinkin'."

"Why? Is the baby worse? Have you been in?"

"Na, na," replied Geordie cautiously. "I'll no' gang where I'm no' wanted, but yon puir thing ye can hear ootside weepin' an' moanin'.

"She'll maybe need ye tae," he went on dubiously to me. "Ye're a kin' o' doctor, I hear," not committing himself to any opinion as to my professional value.

But Slavin would have none of me, having got the doctor sober enough to prescribe.

The interest of the camp in Slavin was greatly increased by the illness of his baby, which was to him as the apple of his eye. There were a few who, impressed by Geordie's profound convictions upon the matter, were inclined to favor the retribution theory and connect the baby's illness with the vengeance of the Almighty. Among these few was Slavin himself, and, goaded by his remorseful terrors, he sought relief in drink. But this brought him only deeper and fiercer gloom, so that, between her suffering child and her savagely despairing husband the poor mother was desperate with terror and grief.

"Ah, madame," she sobbed to Mrs. Mavor, "my heart is broke for him. He's heet noting for tree days, but jis dreenk, dreenk, dreenk."

The next day a man came for me in haste. The baby was dying, and the doctor was drunk. I found the little one in a convulsion lying across Mrs. Mavor's knees, the mother kneeling beside it, wringing her hands in dumb agony, and Slavin standing near, silent and suffering. I glanced at the bottle of medicine upon the table and asked Mrs. Mavor the dose and found the baby had been poisoned. My look of horror told Slavin something was wrong, and, striding to me, he caught my arm and asked:

"What is it? Is the medicine wrong?"

I tried to put him off, but his grip tightened till his fingers seemed to reach the bone.

"The dose is certainly too large. But let me go. I must do something."

He let me go at once, saying in a voice that made my heart sore for him, "He has killed my baby; he has killed my baby." And then he cursed the doctor with awful curses and with a look of such murderous fury on his face that I was glad the doctor was too drunk to appear.

His wife, hearing his curses and understanding the cause, broke out into wailing hard to bear.

"Ah, mon petit ange! It is dat wheesky dat's keel mon baby. Ah, mon cheri, mon amour! Ah, mon Dieu! Ah, Michael! How often I say that wheesky he's not good ting."

It was more than Slavin could bear, and with awful curses he passed out.

Mrs. Mavor laid the baby in its crib, for the convulsion had passed away, and, putting her arms about the wailing little Frenchwoman, comforted and soothed her as a mother might her child.

"And you must help your husband," I heard her say. "He will need you more than ever. Think of him."

"Ah, oui, I weel," was the quick reply, and from that moment there was no more wailing.

It seemed no more than a minute till Slavin came in again, sober, quiet and steady. The passion was all gone from his face, and only the grief remained.

As we stood leaning over the sleeping child the little thing opened its eyes, saw its father and smiled. It was too much for him. The big man dropped on his knees with a dry sob.

"Is there no chance at all, at all?" he whispered, but I could give him no hope. He immediately rose and, pulling himself together, stood perfectly quiet.

A new terror seized upon the mother.

"My baby is not—what you call it?" going through the form of baptism. "An' he will not come to la sainte Vierge," she said, crossing herself.

"Do not fear for your little one," said Mrs. Mavor, still with her arms about her. "The good Saviour will take your darling into his own arms."

But the mother would not be comforted by this, and Slavin, too, was uneasy.

"Where is Father Goulet?" he asked.

"Ah, you were not good to the holy pere de las tam, Michael," she replied sadly. "The saints are not please for you."

"Where is the priest?" he demanded.

"I know not for sure. At de Landin', dat's lak."

"I'll go for him," he said.

But his wife clung to him, beseeching him not to leave her, and indeed he was loath to leave his little one.

I found Craig and told him the difficulty. With his usual promptness he was ready with a solution.

"Nixon has a team. He will go." Then he added: "I wonder if they would not like me to baptize their little one. Father Goulet and I have exchanged offices before now. I remember how he came to one of my people in my absence, when she was dying, read with her, prayed with her, comforted her and helped her across the river. He is a good soul and has no nonsense about him. Send for me if you think there is need. It will make no difference to the baby, but it will comfort the mother."

Nixon was willing enough to go, but when he came to the door Mrs. Mavor saw the hard look in his face. He had not forgotten his wrong, for day by day he was still fighting the devil within that Slavin had called to life. But Mrs. Mavor, under cover of getting him instructions, drew him into the room. While listening to her his eyes wandered from one to the other of the group till they rested upon the little white face in the crib. She noticed the change in his face.

"They fear the little one will never see the Saviour if it is not baptized," she said in a low tone.

He was eager to go.

"I'll do my best to get the priest," he said and was gone on his sixty mile race with death.

The long afternoon wore on, but before it was half gone I saw Nixon could not win and that the priest would be too late, so I sent for Mr. Craig. From the moment he entered the room he took command of us all. He was so simple, so manly, so tender, the hearts of the parents instinctively turned to him.

As he was about to proceed with the baptism the mother whispered to Mrs. Mavor, who hesitatingly asked Mr. Craig if he would object to using holy water.

"To me it is the same as any other," he replied gravely.

"An' will he make the good sign?" asked the mother timidly.

And so the child was baptized by the Presbyterian minister with holy water and with the sign of the cross. I don't suppose it was orthodox, and it rendered chaotic some of my religious notions, but I thought more of Craig that moment than ever before. He was more man than minister, or perhaps he was so good a minister that day because so much a man. As he read about the Saviour and the children and the disciples who tried to get in between them, and as he told us the story in his own simple and beautiful way and then went on to picture the home of the little children and the same Saviour in the midst of them, I felt my heart grow warm, and I could easily understand the cry of the mother:

"Oh, mon Jesu, prenez moi aussi, take me wiz mon mignon!"

The cry wakened Slavin's heart, and he said huskily:

"Oh, Annette, Annette!"

"Ah, oui, an' Michael too!" Then to Mr. Craig: "You tink he's tak me some day? Eh?"

"All who love him," he replied.

"An' Michael, too?" she asked, her eyes searching his face. "An', Michael too?"

But Craig only replied, "All who love him."

"Ah, Michael, you must pray le bon Jesu! He's garde notre mignon." And then she bent over the babe, whispering, "Ah, mon cheri, mon amour, adieu, adieu, mon ange!" till Slavin put his arms about her and took her away, for as she was whispering her farewells her baby, with a little answering sigh, passed into the house with many rooms.

"Whisht, Annette, darling, don't cry for the baby," said her husband. "Sure it's better off than the rest of us it is. And didn't you hear what the minister said about the beautiful place it is? And sure he wouldn't lie to us at all."

But a mother cannot be comforted for her firstborn son.

An hour later Nixon brought Father Goulet. He was a little Frenchman with gentle manners and the face of a saint. Craig welcomed him warmly and told him what he had done.

"That is good, my brother," he said, with gentle courtesy, and, turning to the mother, "Your little one is safe."

Behind Father Goulet came Nixon softly and gazed down upon the little quiet face, beautiful with the magic of death. Slavin came quietly and stood beside him. Nixon turned and offered his hand, but Slavin, moving slowly back, said:

"I did you a wrong, Nixon, and it's a sorry man I am this day for it."

"Don't say a word, Slavin," answered Nixon hurriedly. "I know how you feel. I've got a baby too. I want to see it again. That's why the break hurt me so."

They shook hands, and we passed out.
